SCORES INJURED IN NEW YORK WRECKS

PICKNICKERS ARE HURT WHEN COACHES LEAVE TRACK TURNING OVER.

TWO TRAINS ARE DERAILED

Claimed Company Tried to Burn Ties Blamed for One Accident—None Are Fatally Hurt.

Three Coaches Overturned.

While the train was running at about 40 miles an hour three of the five coaches left the track, rolling down an embankment.

As it rounded a curve the smoking car left the track followed by all but two rear coaches. The locomotive also remained on the track, breaking away from the train after dragging the coaches about 200 feet.

Physicians and nurses were rushed to the scene from Rochester and other nearby towns and the most seriously injured were hurried to hospitals at Sonyea and in this city.

Attempt Made to Burn Ties.

Rochester, N. Y.—Thirty-five persons were injured when a special excursion train on the Pennsylvania railroad was derailed near Cuylerville. Four of the six coaches in the train left the track and rolled down an embankment.

Practically all the injured were residents of this city. It is not believed any of them is fatally hurt. It was said that District Attorney Frank K. Cook was refused permission to examine the wreck when he arrived at the scene.

Railroad officials have thrown a cordon of employees about it, and Mr. Cook could not get within 20 feet of the nearest car.

Bad Ties Blamed.

Mr. Cook said he had every reason to believe that bad ties were directly responsible for the wreck.

After the district attorney had returned home, a messenger brought him word that the railroad men were going to burn the ties for 100 yards on both sides of the wreck. Mr. Cook, accompanied by Sheriff Acond, rushed back to the spot in an automobile.

They found that the ties had been thrown together in an adjoining field, but a railroad man said this was done to get them out of the way. Sheriff Acond demanded that the officials refrain from burning any ties or cars.

District Attorney Cook has requested the public service commission to conduct an immediate invesigation.

TWO KILLED, EIGHT INJURED IN FIRE

MINNEAPOLIS HIGH SCHOOL BUILDING BURNS ENDANGERING MANY.

FIREMEN BURIED UNDER WALL

Pipeman Frank Kanesky Dies and Four Companions Are in Critical Condition—Loss About $80,000.

Minneapolis, June 19.—Two firemen were killed and eight others were injured, three seriously, in a fire which early Wednesday gutted the North high school Fremont avenue north, between Seventeenth and Eighteenth avenues. The damage was about $80,000.

Fifty firemen were in imminent danger when a wall of the old main building fell. Fire Chief Charles Ringer, Assistant Chief Sandy Hamilton, District Chief Edward Thielen and twenty-five firemen escaped the falling wall by running from beneath it into the burning building. Twenty-five other firemen ran back from the wall, but ten of them were caught. Only the heroic work of rescuers, who dug with bare hands into the fiery bricks and concrete, prevented the death of the men who were buried beneath the tons of debris.

The Dead and Injured.

Frank Kanesky, ladderman, Truck Company No. 9, 505 Eighth avenue S. E. was killed outright. Captain John Gray, Truck Company No. 11, 2545 Fourteenth avenue south, was injured internally and died later at St. Barnabas hospital.

The seriously injured were: Harry Rivers, substitute Engine Company No. 12; 1012 Twenty-second avenue N. E. Compound fracture of the right leg, back injured. Will recover. At St. Barnabas hospital; Henry Priebe, ladderman Truck At St. Barnabas hospital.

The rest wereonly slightly injured.

Fatal Crash of Wall.

The firemen were caught by the falling wall directly in front of the main entry to the building. The south wing had burned and the fire had almost gutted the main portion of the building, when Chief Ringer called on his men to save the north wing if possible.

Men shouted and women wept and covered their faces when the cry went up that the men had been killed. Through the dust, smoke and flame Ringer, Hamilton, Thielen and the other men who had been lost sight of in the building, struggled back to safety, over the ruins that covered the fallen men.

Chief Ringer called for volunteers to dig out the victims of the wall.

SATISFIED WITH LIFE TERM

Henry Schmidt, Boy Guilty of Murder in Second Degree, Says "Good" and Smiles.

Rochester. — Henry Schmidt, 16 years old, lifted himself from the chair in Judge Snow's court room that he has occupied daily since Monday, when twelve solemn-faced jurors returned to read their verdict after deliberating nearly five hours in an effort to decide whether or not the indifferent appearing youth was the murderer of his aunt, Mrs. Mary Hetzel, of Douglas.

The father and mother of the boy began weeping and a brother wiped tears from his eyes. But the boy alone seemed unaffected. The preliminaries appeared to tire him.

The foreman of the jury began reading: "We, the jury, find the defendant guilty of murder in the second degree."

Young Schmidt shifted his gaze from the jury to the judge. But he gave not the slightest sign that the verdict meant anything more to him than that the trial was over.

Together they started for the jail. Outside Schmidt asked suddenly:

"Mitchell, what did I get?"

"Murder in the second degree," the officer replied.

"What does that mean?"

"Good; I'm satisfied."

Then he became silent until the jail was reached and he was led inside.

There he turned to the other prisoners and smiled.

"It's life for me in Stillwater," he announced.

Clue to St. Paul Murder.

St. Paul.—Discovery by the police of a bundle of blood-stained handkerchiefs and towels and a pail of water mixed with blood are the most promising clues developed in the investigation of the murder of Mrs. Joseph Gyarmati, 1300 Farrington avenue. The cloths were found under a pile of clothing in a basket, and the police believe they were hidden there by the slayer after the crime had been committed. The water looked as if it had been used to wash away blood stains.

MINNESOTA ROADS ACCEDE

RAIL HEADS DECIDE TO ABIDE BY DECISION.

Refund of Excess Charges Is Promised Without Litigation Where Receipts Are Shown.

St. Paul, June 23.—Unless the unexpected happens the two-cent passenger fare and the commodity and merchandise freight rates protested by the Great Northern and other roads and which resulted in a sweeping victory for the state, will be in effect within the next 20 days. Practically all the roads operating in the state have agreed to accept the findings of the United States supreme court.

Following a conference participated in by Carl R. Gray, president of the Great Northern; J. N. Hanaford, of the Northern Pacific and attorneys representing the Great Northern, Northern Pacific, Omaha and Northwestern, the state railroad and warehouse commission and Attorney General Smith were assured that there would be no further litigation.

This means that as soon as the opinion of the United States supreme court is filed with the clerk of the circuit court of appeals in St. Paul that the new rates will go into effect. This will probably be about July 9.

At the same time, Mr. Smith will appear before the federal court and ask that the six other injunctions obtained by those roads which did not participate in the test case be vacated. Mr. Smith has been given to understand that his motion will not be opposed. He is now preparing his appeal to the federal court. The six roads are the Northwestern, Milwaukee, Great Western, Rock Island, Minnesota & International and the Omaha.

What the railroad commission and Mr. Smith were more interested in than anything else was the return to shippers of the millions of dollars in the shape of excess charges. This excess also takes in the passenger rates. The commission was assured by the railroad officials that wherever receipts could be shown that any excess would be paid back without litigation or trouble.

Since 1911 the railroads have been filing monthly with the commission reports of all freight receipts, together with the name of the shipper, the consignee, the amount paid and the amount of the excess. This totals probably $3,000,000, but it is only a part of the excess that has been paid by shippers and the traveling public since the rate litigation started.

TELLS OF SURGERY'S ABUSE

NEEDLESS AND MISERABLY EXECUTED OPERATIONS SCORED.

Physician Pleads for Higher Training as Requisite for Work of Profession.

Minneapolis. — Famous surgeons from every part of the United States, crowding the university chapel, were told that "ill-advised, miserably executed and unnecessary operations" were "the crying shame" of present day surgery.

The speaker declared it a question with the avaricious practitioner of the commercial value of the patient, not the patient's welfare, and said the time had come when stringent restrictions should be placed on the class to be permitted to do surgery, with a systematic education and long training under competent directors.

Dr. William D. Haggard of Nashville, Tenn., was the speaker. He addressed the section on surgery of the American Medical association on "The Requirements of the Surgeon."

Dr. Haggard deplored the fact that a pilot of a lumber scow must first serve as an apprentice while apprenticeship was not compulsory in the case of a surgeon. The great middle class is the chief sufferer from the "furore to do surgery" and the ordinary practitioner is the principal offender, according to Dr. Haggard, who deprecated the "commercial spirit that has raised its hydra-head in all its monstrousness among us."

The speaker outlined a movement the ultimate purpose of which may be the drastic restriction of surgery to those who, measured by the highest standards, are qualified not only by education and experience, but morally to perform the work of surgery.

A national organization of surgery, representing and covering the entire continent, devoted to the betterment of the profession, was oulined.

Before being licensed, Dr. Haggard would require a surgeon to spend four years in a medical school, one or two years as hospital interne, postgraduate work in surgical colleges, a given number of years in general medical practice, apprenticeship under a skilled surgeon and, finally, examination and licensure under legal requirements.

ONE KILLED; SIX INJURED

Hottest Day of Year Ushers In List of Serious Accidents in the Vicinity of the Twin Cities.

Minneapolis, June 17.—One man killed and six persons injured was the toll of accidents for the hottest day of the year. Electric and steam trains, automobiles, motorcycles and bicycles figured in the Sunday mishaps in the vicinity of Minneapolis and St. Paul.

William Gill, a farmer, living at Green Vale, Minn., was killed by a Dan Patch line train. Mr. Gill was instantly killed while crossing the line in front of his farm house at Green Vale, about eight miles north of Northfield, Minn. Relatives say that he evidently did not hear the approach of the train as he apparently made no effort to hurry across before the train arrived. The accident happened within a few feet of his home.

Winona, Minn., June 21.—Charles Perkins, 63 years old, was killed, and four co-laborers on a handcar leaped to safety from a bridge below Trempealeau village while on their way to work, when a Burlington southbound passenger train, traveling at a high speed, bore them down from behind. The men were bridge carpenters. Perkins was slightly deaf and when the train rounded a curve several rods behind them one of the men shouted and the four leaped. A second later Perkins jumped, but his foot caught.

HIS HENS SWIM AND DIVE

Fowl Fancier Declares They Also Catch Young Trout and Now Lay Fishy Eggs.

Expert research has disclosed the reason that patients at the Foresters' sanitarium at Rainbow Lake, N. Y., have had to complain of a fish flavor in their eggs.

The institution has its own poultry yard, extending to the edge of the lake, whither the ducks repair for swimming and the hens for drink. Recently the keeper of the hens got up extra early in the morning and was confounded when he saw a dozen of his hens floating on the lake in the midst of the flock of ducks. They were diving, too, and coming up with infant trout, which they brought to shore to devour.

The hennery man, who is also a biologist, says it is a characteristic acquired through long association with the ducks. He will segregate the hens and ducks hereafter, for, although he has no objection to swimming hens, he feels that the flavor of the eggs directly concerns his own reputation.

IS IT RIGHT TO ADVERTISE COCA COLA?

Men who play the wily game of politics have discovered that the best way to distract the attention of the public from their own shortcomings is to make a loud-mouthed sensational attack upon someone else. As the cuttle-fish eludes its pursuer by clouding the surrounding water with the contents of its ink sac, so the political adventurer takes advantage of the ignorance and prejudices of the people to escape from his indefensible position by muddying the waters of public opinion.

A case in point is the recent attack made upon the religious press for carrying Coca-Cola advertising. This attack was made by a politician who was supposed to be an expert in chemistry but who, having brought a suit against the Coca-Cola Company, was humiliated by having to acknowledge that he could not qualify as an expert. The court decided in favor of the Coca-Cola Company as it was clearly shown that the only essential difference between Coca-Cola and coffee or tea is that the former contains only about half as much caffeine as the latter and that the flavor is different.

The question as to whether it is right to advertise Coca-Cola seems to resolve itself therefore into the question as to whether it is right to advertise coffee, tea, chocolate, cocoa and other beverages of the caffeine group.—Adv.

Concerning Hermits.

Hermits, of whom, according to recently published statistics, there are 990 in modern Italy, were a century or more ago regarded as a picturesque feature of English country houses. Samuel Rogers records that "Archibald Hamilton, afterward duke of Hamilton, advertised for a hermit as an ornament to his pleasure grounds; and it was stipulated that the said hermit should have his beard shaved but once a year, and that only partially."

Mark Powyss, an English squire, offered $250 a year for life to any man willing to live as a hermit on his estate for seven years. He was to be well supplied with provisions, books and other comforts, and in return had to abstain from straying around his hermitage and from cutting his hair, beard or nails.

The offer was accepted by a man who abode by the conditions for four years and then threw up the job.

Bismarck's "Mot."

As might be expected of a man of iron, Bismarck's wit was of the sledghammer sort. In 1862, according to "Intimate Memories of Napoleon III." by Baron d'Ambes, he went to Paris as Prussian ambassador.

"I have never heard a German speak French as you do," complimented the emperor on the occasion of their first meeting.

"Thanks, sire," returned Bismarck. "I have never heard a Frenchman speak French as you do."

EMPTY TOMB AT ST. HELENA

Longwood House, Where Napoleon Died, Is in Ruins and French Ask That It Be Preserved.

Complaint is made in France that the government of the republic is neglecting the house in which Napoleon died and the tomb in which his body was laid at St. Helena before removal to the Church of St. Louis at the Invalides.

In 1858 the Longwood house, in which the emperor lived during his exile, and the plot in the Valley of Geraniums where his tomb was made were given by Queen Victoria to Napoleon III. for the French government, which desired to maintain them as lasting memorials. But of late years little has been done to preserve either the home or the sepulcher. The building is falling into ruins, the farmers of the neighborhood let their sheep graze in the valley. Visitors are few. It is believed that ere long a storm will wreck the decaying building, and then in all probability the caretaker will be withdrawn and the land abandoned to the farmer and the herdsman.

Sentiment will mourn over such surrender of ground to utility, but it is inevitable. In a world where the palaces of Alexander and Caesar have crumbled into nothingness, there can be no perpetuity for the homes of Napoleon. The Tuileries went to ashes long ago; why save Longwood?

RINGWORM ON CHILD'S FACE

Stratford, Iowa.—"Three years ago this winter my seven-year-old son had ringworm on the face. First it was in small red spots which had a rough crust on the top. When they started they looked like little red dots and then they got bigger, about the size of a bird's egg. They had a white rough ring around them, and grew continually worse and soon spread over his face and legs. The child suffered terrible itching and burning, so that he could not sleep nights. He scratched them and they looked fearful. He was cross when he had them. We used several bottles of liniment, but nothing helped.

"I saw where a child had a rash on the face and was cured by Cuticura Soap and Ointment and I decided to use them. I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment about one month, and they cured my child completely." (Signed) Mrs. Barbara Prim, Jan. 30, 1912.

New Phenomenon.

A new phenomenon has been observed by Professor Righi to which he gives the name of iono-magnetic rotation. If a spark from a condenser of considerable capacity is sent horizontally through a gas and two small vertical vanes of mica in the form of a cross are suspended in the middle of the discharge by a fine fiber attached to the center of the cross, the spark produces no rotation of the cross. If, however, a vertical magnetic field is established in the gas, the cross rotates through a considerable angle if the gas is air, and over a small angle in other cases. Professor Righi ascribes this rotation to the bending of the paths of the ions or electrons, and to the additional protection which the vanes afford each other against impacts from one side rather than from the other in these circumstances. The observed rotations indicate that the effects of the positive ions are in general greater than those of the negative.

In purchasing the Plummer Pioneer the new owner makes a bid for patronage soley on merit. A newspaper is a business proposition and as such must live or fall, depending for its support wholey on its usefulness to the community it serves. We think Plummer offers a liberal field for a just and fair return on labor and money expended, and shall at all times strive to give patrons full value received for whaterever patronage the Pioneer commands.

We have no personal or private interest to serve except that of the general public. If we deserve it we ask the patronage of this community so that we may give Plummer a representative newspaper that will reflect the character and prosperity of Plummer and the country.

LOCALS

Improvements around the Soo station here and the graveling of the road bed in this division will soon be started, according to the information of Roadmaster E. A. Nelson who was here Wednesday. The construction train will be here next week, when the local yards and station will be repaired and improved, and the road bed bollasted to perpare for the heavy fall hauling.

At the general election Beltrami county will be divided, according to the plans and expectations of residents of Baudette and Spooner. In connection with the proposed division, efforts are under way to unite the villages of Baudette and Spooner into one municipality, and this to be the county seat of the new county. The division line would be somewhere north of Red Lake.

Because of the greatly improved appearance of the town by the building of the cement walks along certain streets here, the village council has decided to order the construction of several more blocks, and at the next meeting a resolution will be presented ordering cement walks to be constructed from the corner of Central avenue and Oak street to the Soo station. Should the resolution be favorably acted upon the walks will be completed at once.

Best for Skin Dis[illegible]

Nearly every skin disease yields quickly and permanently to Bucklen's Arnica Salve and nothing is better for burns or bruises. Soothes and heals. [illegible]

The Common Degeneration.

Attention is just now rather too much concentrated, with the most humanitarian motives, to be sure, on that kind of social perfection which consists in bringing everybody up to an average. It is time to emphasize also the importance of producing and making the most of the few really great men through whom the world mainly progresses, the pioneers and the prophets of civilization and the arts. Of degeneration we have a morbid and needless fear; the best cure for it is not medical science, but social justice. Break up the slums, take the boys out of gangs and find them clean sport and congenial work. Pull down the rookeries, let in the sun and air, keep human life from festering in rotten places and nature will do the rest. Breeds and races may die out, but there are always new ones being created, and nature is herself the greatest of regenerating forces, destroying the decadent even as she checks the superman before he becomes as the gods.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

The "Workin' Stiff."

"He is one of the army of unskilled laborers easily mobilized on any of a variety of industrial frontiers," write Charles Phelps Cushing and Arthur Killick in the issue of Harper's Weekly—"an army estimated now at half a million, content to do the hardest sorts of toil at wages so low that not more than one man in a thousand saves anything." When he gets into trouble the "stiff's" hands are his best credentials. "Look at his hands, sergeant," the magistrate says. "The police court bailiff feels their palms and makes one of two permissible answers, 'Soft as a baby's, yer Honor!' or 'Hard as nails, sir.'"

Why Thunder Sours Milk.

It is universally known that milk turns sour after a thunder storm. This has been attributed to the large quantity of ozone which is liberated by the electricity in the air. The experiments of Professor Trillat in Paris do not confirm that theory. He has established that atmospheric depressions cause putrefying gases—normal quiescent—to rise to the surface of certain substances, and in support of his theory points out that odors of all sorts are more permeating after storms. These atmospheric depressions accelerate the decomposition of gases and tend to liberate them. Hence lactic ferment is produced. Professor Trillat has made many experiments with diverse substances under varying pressures and has observed that when the barometer is lowest (during storms, etc.) the decomposition of gases is most rapid.

Kinglake on Port.

Kinglake, the historian, was polite yet frank. It is related that, upon one occasion, while dining with old Dr. Marsham, the warden of Merton, he was asked to give his opinion of some port wine which was supposed to be remarkably good. "I am no judge of port myself, Kinglake," said Dr. Marsham; "but I know you are, and I should like your opinion."

"Well," said Kinglake, "I have three ways of judging port wine. The first is by the color, the second is by the odor, and the third is by the flavor. Now, the color of your wine, Marsham"—holding it up and looking at it critically—"is good; the odor"—here he held the glass to his nose for a moment, and then added, with some hesitation—"is far from unpleasant; the flavor is"—here he tasted it, and put the wineglass down hastily. "Would you be kind enough to pass me the sherry?"—San Francisco Argonaut.

Many mothers think their children are suffering from indigestion, headache, nervousness, weakness, costiveness, when they are victims of that most common of all children's ailments—worms. Peevish, ill-tempered, fretful children, who toss and grind their teeth, with bad breath and colicky pains, have all the symptoms of having worms, and should be given Kickapoo Worm Killer, a pleasant candy lozenge, which expels worms, regulates the bowels, tones up the system and makes the children well and happy. Mrs. Erickson and daughter and Miss Gertrude Enderle, who have been the guests of relatives here for the past week, departed yesterday for Mrs. Erickson's home at Selby, South Dakota. Miss Enderle will remain there some time before leaving for her home at St. Cloud, Minn.

Last week the Pioneer failed to chronicle an event of great importance and as a result there is a certain young lady greatly peeved at the neglect by this paper. However we humbly apologize and bid her welcome. We refer, of course, to the fine girl born to Mr. and Mrs. Emil Bakke, on Sunday, June 22.

Sam Lovaas, A. J. Hemstead and E. E. Havik, clerks of the towns of Emardsville, Garnes and Equality were here Tuesday en route to Red Lake Falls where they turned over the records of their offices to Register of Deeds Jeffers, in compliance with the new law, which provides that after July 1 all deeds, mortgages, etc., shall be filed in the register's office.

That the dairy cow is playing an important part in the development and prosperity of this country is shown by the steady increase of business shown by the local creamery, despite the fact that new creameries are being built throughout the country. Last week the local creamery shipped 120 tubs of butter or 7200 pounds, this being one of the best outputs [illegible]

The Pioneer wants all the news. If you know an item of local or general interest send it in.

NEW RURAL ROUTE TO BE ESTABLISHED

Will Supply 75 Families; Thrice a Week Service Asked For

A petition containing seventy-five signers and asking for the establishment of another rural route from Plummer, was this week sent to the postoffice department at Washington. The new route, if ordered established, will supply mail to residents northeast of here in the towns of Ewardville, Games, Mayfield and Wayandotte, covering for the round trip a distance of about thirty-two miles.

The petition asks for a three times a week service.

DREDGE COMPANY COMPLETES WORK

Except for the leveling and filling in of the road along the ditches, the Northern Minnesota Drainage company this week completed their contract on Ditch No. [illegible] and shipped their dredge which has been used in the construction, to International Falls where the company has large contracts of similiar work.

Ditch No. 2 which has just been completed is eleven miles long and approximately 100,000 yards of dirt was moved in its construction. Work was commenced this spring.

This company also had the contract for ditches 53 and 55, the latter being entirely completed and the former will be finished in a few weeks.

Salem Angeau who has had charge of the work here for the company, will commence work on ditch 42 at once.

COUNTIES JOIN FOR NEW HOSPITAL

The Roseau county board has appointed O. O. Paulson and Louis Endstrom, two of its members, to confer with commissioners of Marshall, Kittson and Pennington counties in regard to the building of a tuberculosis hospital, jointly. There is a great need of such a hospital for care and treatment of the malady, and it would seem as though it were a wise and economic plan for the counties named to join in building and maintaining such an institution. It is believed that the different county boards interested themselves in these counties in this humanitatian movement and will be able to agree on some workable plan.

Notice For Bids.

Notice is hereby given that the town board of the town of Mayfield will meet at the town clerk's office in said town at 9 o'clock a. m., on Monday, July 7th for the purpose of receiving sealed bids for removal of about 1500 yards of dirt for road purposes. PLAN TO EXTEND RURAL TELEPHONE

Company to Connect Garnes Emardville, Mayfield and Wayandotte

START WORK AT ONCE

The extension of the telephone line into portions of the towns of Emardville, Garnes, Mayfield and Wyandotte and improvements along the entire line, was the decision of the directors of the Clearwater Farmers telephone company meeting here last Saturday.

The new territory to be supplied with phones is one of the most prosperous in the country and besides giving the settlers the service of rural and long distance connection will also prove a financial success. It is probable the installing of phones will be commenced at once.

It was also decided not to move, at present, the telephone poles from the streets to the alleys in the village of Plummer.

PREPARING EXHIBIT AT STATE FAIR

E. G. Buse, who this year will have charge of Red Lake county's exhibit at the state fair, states that he has already commenced the work of preparing the exhibit and desires the farmers to cooperate with him.

A big market day will again be held at Red Lake Falls the latter part of August, and liberal prizes will be offered for the best samples of the different vegetables displayed. The best part of this exhibit will then be used to help out on the state fair exhibit.

Against Consolidation.

A massmeeting of the farmers of the town of Equality was held at the Havick school-house this week to protest against the consolidation of that school with the Oklee school.

The district has built one of the best school-houses, with ventilation, heating and equipment required by the state for state aid during the last three years, and the sense of the meeting was that if Oklee people desire a good school they should go and do likewise. A collection was taken up and Henry Compton was selected to present the case of the people to County Attorney Boughton.

A business deal was closed last week whereby S. J. Rice, proprietor of the Plummer Hotel, became owner of six lots directly east of the telephone office. Mr. Rice purchased the lots for hotel purposes, but it is hardly probably he will commence the erection until next year when he intends building a modern place.

PLUMMER IN A RECEPTIVE MOOD

If Committee Can't Agree on Location This Village Might Take Normal

Within the next week the commission appointed to determine the site of the new normal school created by the last legislature, will make a tour of the towns which are candidates for the school.

It is generally conceded that the fight will be between Bemidji and Thief River Falls, and it is even charged that three of the five members of the committee are already pledged to the latter city. Cass Lake, Park Rapids and Clearbrook are after the school.

Of course, should the committe fail to agree on any of the above towns, Plummer might be induced to take the school.

NEW LAWS IN EFFECT JULY 1; LOOK THEM UP

Several new laws went into effect July 1, among them being a law abolishing the public drinking cup becomes effective, and the cup, with its connecting chain, will give way to sanitary drinking fountains or individual drinking cups.

Other laws to become effective tomorrow are the five-sixths jury law, the pure seed law, the interchangeable mileage book law, the law compelling physicians to report occupational diseases, the law requiring chattel mortgages to be filed with the register of deeds except in cities of first class, the uniform negotiable instruments law.

The pure seed law requires the label to show the results of a germination test, the percentage of weed seed and the place where the seed was grown. The five-sixths jury law will allow verdicts by ten of twelve jurors after twelve hours' deliberation in civil suits.

Training School Opens.

The teachers' training school for Red Lake and Pennington counties opened at Red Lake Falls, Wednesday, July 2, with an exceptionally large attendance. The faculty assigned to the Red Lake Falls school is an especially strong one, with H. E. White of Ely as conductor and he will be assisted by Mrs. Munch, Chas. Eginton of Staples, and Gertrude K. Sutton of Hibbing.

Notice

Any body wishing to get sand or gravel out of pit now opened will please call at the First State Bank of Plummer for particulars.

Last week the Pioneer failed to chronicle an event of great importance and as a result there is a certain young lady greatly peeved at the neglect by this paper. However we humbly apologize and bid her welcome. We refer, of course, to the fine girl born to Mr. and Mrs. Emil Bakke, on Sunday, June 22.

Sam Lovaas, A. J. Hemstead and E. E. Havik, clerks of the towns of Emardsville, Garnes and Equality were here Tuesday en route to Red Lake Falls where they turned over the records of their offices to Register of Deeds Jeffers, in compliance with the new law, which provides that after July 1 all deeds, mortgages, etc., shall be filed in the register's office.

That the dairy cow is playing an important part in the development and prosperity of this country is shown by the steady increase of business shown by the local creamery, despite the fact that new creameries are being built throughout the country. Last week the local creamery shipped 120 tubs of butter or 7200 pounds, this being one of the best outputs since its organization.

The Pioneer wants all the news. If you know an item of local or general interest, send it in.

NEW RURAL ROUTE TO BE ESTABLISHED

Will Supply 75 Families; Thrice a Week Service Asked For.

A petition containing seventy-five signers and asking for the establishment of another rural route from Plummer, was this week sent to the postoffice department at Washington. The new route if ordered established, will supply mail to residents northeast of here in the towns of Ewardville, Garnes, Mayfield and Wayandotte, covering for the round trip a distance of about thirty-two miles.

The petition asks for a three times a week service.

DREDGE COMPANY COMPLETES WORK

Ditches 2, 53 and 55 Finished; Move to International Falls.

Except for the leveling and filling in of the road along the ditches, the Northern Minnesota Drainage company this week completed their contract on Ditch No. 2, and shipped their dredge which has been used in the construction, to International Falls where the company has large contracts of similiar work.

Ditch No. 2 which has just been completed is eleven miles long and approximately 100,000 yards of dirt was moved in its construction. Work was commenced this spring.

This company also had the contract for ditches 53 and 55, the latter being entirely completed and the former will be finished in a few weeks.

Salem Magean who has had charge of the work here for the company, will commence work on ditch 42 at once.

COUNTIES JOIN FOR NEW HOSPITAL

The Roseau county board has appointed O. O. Paulson and Louis Endstrom, two of its members, to confer with commissioners of Marshall, Kittson and Pennington counties in regard to the building of a tuberculosis hospital, jointly. There is a great need of such a hospital for care and treatment of the malady, and it would seem as though it were a wise and economic plan for the counties named to join in building and maintaining such an institution. It is believed that the different county boards interested themselves in these counties in this humanitatian movement and will be able to agree on some workable plan.

Notice For Bids.

Notice is hereby given that the town board of the town of Mayfield will meet at the town clerk's office in said town at 9 o'clock a. m., on Monday, July 7th for the purpose of receiving sealed bids for removal of about 1500 yards of dirt for road purposes. Said work to be done on section line between sections 23 and 24 in said town.

The board reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

Chairman.

The board of commissioners of Pennington county has sold $40,000 worth of bonds for the construction of Elwell highway No. 1. This was the first Elwell road legally laid out in the state and the first one for which a contract has been let. The bonds were purchased by Chicago people, who also bought $50,000 of Pennington county ditching bonds.

PLAN TO EXTEND RURAL TELEPHONE

START WORK AT ONCE

The extension of the telephone line into portions of the towns of Emardville, Garnes, Mayfield and Wyandotte and improvements along the entire line, was the decision of the directors of the Clearwater Farmers telephone company meeting here last Saturday.

The new territory to be supplied with phones is one of the most prosperous in the country and besides giving the settlers the service of rural and long distance connection will also prove a financial success. It is probable the installing of phones will be commenced at once.

It was also decided not to move, at present, the telephone poles from the streets to the alleys in the village of Plummer.

PREPARING EXHIBIT AT STATE FAIR

E. G. Buse, who this year will have charge of Red Lake county's exhibit at the state fair, states that he has already commenced the work of preparing the exhibit and desires the farmers to cooperate with him.

A big market day will again be held at Red Lake Falls the latter part of August, and liberal prizes will be offered for the best samples of the different vegetables displayed. The best part of this exhibit will then be used to help out on the state fair exhibit.

Against Consolidation.

A massmeeting of the farmers of the town of Equality was held at the Havick school-house this week to protest against the consolidation of that school with the Oklee school.

The district has built one of the best school-houses, with ventilation, heating and equipment required by the state for state aid during the last three years, and the sense of the meeting was that if Oklee people desire a good school they should go and do likewise. A collection was taken up and Henry Compton was selected to present the case of the people to County Attorney Boughton.

A business deal was closed last week whereby S. J. Rice, proprietor of the Plummer Hotel, became owner of six lots directly east of the telephone office. Mr. Rice purchased the lots for hotel purposes, but it is hardly probably he will commence the erection until next year when he intends building a modern place.

PLUMMER IN A RECEPTIVE MOOD

Within the next week the commission appointed to determine the site of the new normal school created by the last legislature, will make a tour of the towns which are candidates for the school.

It is generally conceded that the fight will be between Bemidji and Thief River Falls, and it is even charged that three of the five members of the committee are already pledged to the latter city. Cass Lake, Park Rapids and Clearbrook are after the school.

NEW LAWS IN EFFECT JULY 1; LOOK THEM UP

Several new laws went into effect July 1, among them being a law abolishing the public drinking cup becomes effective, and the cup, with its connecting chain, will give way to sanitary drinking fountains or individual drinking cups.

Other laws to become effective tomorrow are the five-sixths jury law, the pure seed law, the interchangeable mileage book law, the law compelling physicians to report occupational diseases, the law requiring chattel mortgages to be filed with the register of deeds except in cities of first class, the uniform negotiable instruments law.

The pure seed law requires the label to show the results of a germination test, the percentage of weed seed and the place where the seed was grown. The five-sixths jury law will allow verdicts by ten of twelve jurors after twelve hours' deliberation in civil suits.

Training School Opens.

The teachers' training school for Red Lake and Pennington counties opened at Red Lake Falls, Wednesday, July 2, with an exceptionally large attendance. The faculty assigned to the Red Lake Falls school is an especially strong one, with H. E. White of Ely as conductor and he will be assisted by Mrs. Munch, Chas. Eginton of Staples, and Gertrude K. Sutton of Hibbing.

STORY OF FAMOUS CIVIL WAR FIGHT

Battle of Gettysburg Which Brought Credit to Both Blue and Gray.

TURNING POINT OF CONFLICT

Total Losses on Both Sides in Three Days' Fighting Over 50,000—Several Generals Killed and Wounded.

By EDWARD B. CLARK.

WASHINGTON.—It is possible, some people would say probable, that the Battle of Gettysburg changed utterly the course of American history. It was a great fight between armies of Americans, for probably fully ninety per cent. of the men who fought on the two sides were born natives to the American soil. The bravery shown at Gettysburg was of the order which Americans have shown on every field and which reflects credit upon the hardy and heroic ancestry of the men engaged, no matter from what race they may have sprung.

At Gettysburg there was nothing to choose between the valor of the North and the South. The South lost the fight, but it lost it honorably and with the prestige of its soldiery undimmed. The charges made on that field have gone down into history as assaults made under conditions which every man felt might mean death at the end. The defenses made at Gettysburg were of the kind which it takes iron in the blood to make perfect. At Gettysburg Northerners and Southerners replenished their store of respect for their antagonists. The battle marked the high tide of the war between the states. After it the South largely was on the defensive, but its defense was maintained with fortitude and in the face of privations which could not chill the blood of men fighting for what they thought was the right.

The Northern armies were persistent in their attacks through the campaigns which after a few months were started aginst the objective point, Richmond. Brave men here and brave men there, and after the end came it was the qualities which keep company with bravery which made the soldiers of the North and South so ready to forget and to forgive and to work again for the good of a common country.

The great battle of Chancellorsville was fought not long before the opposing Union and Confederate forces met on the field of Gettysburg. Chancellorsville was a Confederate victory. The Southern government believed that the victory should be followed up by an invasion of the North for, according to its reasoning, if an important engagement could be won upon Northern soil the chances of foreign intervention or at least foreign aid to the Southern cause, would be forthcoming.

General Robert E. Lee late in the spring of 1863, made his preparations to conduct his campaign Northward into the state of Pennsylvania. He had under his command three corps, General James Longstreet commanding the First, General Richard S. Ewell commanding the Second, and General A. P. Hill commanding the Third. In the Union army which afterward confronted Lee at Gettysburg, there were seven corps, but the number of men in each was much less than that in a Confederate corps, the military composition of each being different. The Union corps commanders who under Meade were at Gettysburg, were Generals John F. Reynolds, W. S. Hancock, Daniel E. Sickles, George Sykes, John Sedgwick, O. O. Howard and H. W. Slocum.

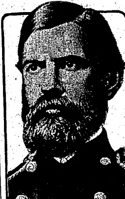
Forces Almost Evenly Matched.

It never has been determined beyond the point of all dispute just how many men were engaged on each side in the battle of Gettysburg. It is known that the armies were very nearly equal in strength, the probabilities being that the Confederate force was a few thousand men stronger than the Union force, a difference which was balanced perhaps by the fact that the Union armies at Gettysburg were fighting in defense of their land from invasion, a condition which military men say always adds a subtle something to the fighting quality which is in any man. Some authorities have said that there were 100,000 men in the Confederate forces at Gettysburg to be confronted by 90,000 Union troops. Another authority says that the Confederate force was 84,000 and the Union force 80,000. As it was the armies were pretty nearly equally divided in strength.

In June, 1863, General Robert E. Lee began to move northward. Lee concentrated his army at Winchester, Va., and then started for the Potomac river, which he crossed to reach the state of Maryland. He fully expected to be followed by General Hooker's army and so General Stuart with a large force of cavalry was ordered by Lee to keep in front of Hooker's army and to check his pursuit of the Confederates if it was attempted.

Late in June the Confederate force reached Hagerstown, in the state of Maryland. It was General Lee's intention to strike Harrisburg, Pa., which was a great railroad center and a city where Union armies were recruited and from which all kinds of supplies were sent out to the soldiers in the field. While the Southern commander was on his way with a large part of his force to the Pennsylvania capital another part of his command was ordered to make its way into the Susquehanna Valley through the town of Gettysburg and then to turn in its course after destroying railroads and gathering in supplies, and to meet the Confederate commander with the main army at Harrisburg.

It was General Jubal A. Early of General Lee's command, who reached Gettysburg after a long hard march on June 26. From there he went to the town of York and from thence to Wrightsville. At this place he was ordered by General Lee to retrace his steps and to bring his detachment back to a camp near Gettysburg. When Early ahd obeyed Lee's order and had reached a point near Gettysburg he found the entire Southern force was camped within easy striking distance of the now historic town.



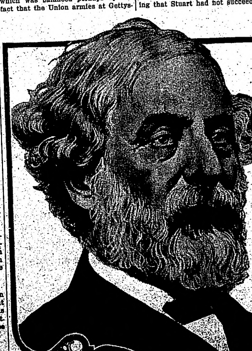
Maj. Gen. John F. Reynolds.

In the meantime things were happening elsewhere. General Hooker in command of the Union army which had been depleted at Chancellorsville, had succeeded in out-maneuvering General Stuart in command of Lee's cavalry, had got around Stuart's command in a way to prevent the Southern general from forming a junction with the forces of his chief commander. Lee gave over the proposed movement on Harrisburg when he heard of Hooker's approach and brought the different parts of his army together.

Four days before the Gettysburg fight began General Hooker resigned as commander of the Union army. Hooker and General Hallock disagreed upon a matter concerning which strategists today say that General Hooker was right. Three days before the battle began, that is, June 28, 1863, General George Gordan Meade was named as General Hooker's successor in charge of the Northern army. General Meade at once went into the field and established his headquarters at a point ten or twelve miles south of the town of Gettysburg.

Armies Meet at Gettysburg.

It seems that General Lee on hearing that Stuart had not succeeded in checking the Union army's advance had made up his mind to turn southward to meet the force of Hooker, or as it turned out the force of Meade. Lee with his force had advanced north beyond Gettysburg, while Meade with his force was south of the town. The fields near the Pennsylvania village had not been picked as a place of battle, but there it was that the two great armies came together and for three days struggled for the mastery.



On the last day of June, the day before the real battle of Gettysburg began, General Reynolds, a corps commander of the Union army, went forward to feel out the enemy. He reached Gettysburg by nightfall. His corps, the First, together with the Third and the Eleventh Infantry Corps with a division of cavalry, composed the Union army's left wing.

The Fifth Army Corps was sent to Hanover, southeast of Gettysburg, and the Twelfth Corps was immediately south of Gettysburg at a distance of eight or nine miles. This was on June 30, and the Union forces were fairly well separted, but they were converging and Gettysburg was their objective.

General Reynolds of the Union forces arrived at Gettysburg early on the morning of July 1. He dispatched a courier to Meade saying that the high ground above Gettysburg was the proper place to meet the enemy. Not long after this message was sent to Meade General Reynolds who dispatched it, was killed. He was on horseback near a patch of woods with his force confronting a large detachment of Confederate troops which was coming toward them. These troops of the enemy were dispersed by the Union batteries and Reynolds was watching the successful solid shot and shrapnel onset when a bullet struck him in the head killing him instantly.

General Abner Doubleday succeeded Reynolds in command of the troops at that point of the field. A brigade of Confederates, a Mississippi organization, charged the Union forces, broke their organization and succeeded in making prisoners of a large part of a New York regiment. Later these men were recaptured and the Mississippi brigade was driven back, a portion of it surrendering. In the fight on the first day at this point of the field or near it, one Union regiment, the 151st Pennsylvania, lost in killed and wounded 337 men out of a total of 446 in a little more than a quarter of an hour's fight.

General Doubleday fell back to Seminary Ridge and extended his line. The forces employed against him here were greater than his own, and after hard fighting Seminary Ridge was given up. The first day's battle was in effect and in truth a victory for the Southern arms. On the night of July 1 General Hancock arrived and succeeded in rallying the Union forces and putting new heart into the men. General Meade on that night ordered the entire army to Gettysburg.

Victory Not Followed Up.

For some reason or other perhaps unknown to this day, what was virtually a Confederate victory on the first of July was not followed up by General Lee early on the next morning. General Meade therefore succeeded in strengthening his lines and in preparing for the greater conflict. One end of the Union line was some distance east of Cemetery Hill on Rock Creek, another end was at Round Top something more than two miles beyond Cemetery Hill to the south. The Confederate line confronting it was somewhat longer.

It is impossible in a brief sketch of this battle to give the names of the brigade and the regimental commanders and the names of the regiments which were engaged on both sides in this great battle. Meade, Hancock, Howard, Slocum and Sickles with their men were confronting Lee, Longstreet, Hill, Ewell and the other great commanders of the South with their men. The line of battle with the spaces in between the different commands was nearly ten miles. It was the Confederate general's intention to attack at the extreme right and left and at the center simultaneously. It was to be General Longstreet's duty to turn the left flank of the Union army and to "break it." Longstreet's intended movement was discovered in time to have it met valiantly. The battle of the second day really began with Longstreet's advance. The Southern general did not succeed in the plan which he had formed to get by Big Round Top and to attack the Third Corps from a position of vantage in the rear. General Sickles defended Round Top and Longstreet could not take it.

When one visits the battlefield of Gettysburg he can trace the course of battle of the second day where it raged at Round Top, Peach Orchard, Cemetery Hill, Culp's Hill, and what is known as The Devil's Den. The tide of battle ebbed and flowed. Little Round Top was saved from capture by the timely arrival of a brigade commanded by General Weed that dragged the guns of a United States regular battery up to the summit by hand.

At the end of the second day's fight it was found that the Southern army had failed to break the left flank of the opposing forces, that it had failed to capture Round Top and that the right flank of the Northern army, although vigorously attacked, had not been broken. There was a tremendous loss of life on both sides, and while in general the day had gone favorably to the Northren cause Gettysburg was still a drawn battle.

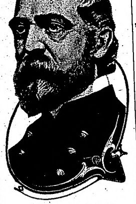
Charge of Gen. Pickett.

It was on July 3, the third and last day of the great battle of Gettysburg that Pickett's men made their charge which has gone into history as one of the most heroic assaults of all time. It was forlorn hope but it was grasped and the men of George Edward Pickett, Confederate soldier, went loyally and with full hearts to their death across a shrapnel and rifle swept field.

When the third day's fighting opened it began with an artillery duel, hundreds of guns belching forth shot and death from the batteries of both contending forces. It is said that this was the greatest duel engaged in by field pieces during the four years of the war between the states.

The Union guns at one time ceased firing, and it is said that the southern commander thought they had been silenced, and then it was that Longstreet's men made an assault and Pickett's men made their charge. The former general's objective was Big Round Top, but his forces were driven back. Picket formed his division in brigade columns and they moved directly across the fields over flat ground. They had no cover and they had no sooner come into effective range than they were met by such a storm of shot as never before swept over a field of battle.

They went on and on, and on closing in their depleted ranks and moving steadily forward to their death. Those of Pickett's men who reached their destination had a short hand-to-hand encounter with the northern soldiers. It was soon over and Pickett's charge, glorious for all time in history, was a failure in that which it attempted to do, but was a success as helping to show the heroism of American soldiers.



Maj. Gen. George G. Meade.

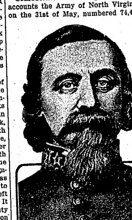
The losses at Gettysburg on both sides were enormous. The Union army lost Generals Zook, Farnsworth, Weed and Reynolds, killed; while Graham, Barnes, Gibbon, Warren, Doubleday, Barlow, Sickles, Butterfield and Hancock were wounded. The total casualties killed ,wounded, captured or missing on the Union side numbered nearly 24,000 men. On the Confederate side Generals Semmes, Pender, Garnet, Armistead, and Barksdale were killed, and Generals Kemper, Kimbal, Hood, Heth, Johnson and Trimble were wounded. The entire Confederate loss is estimated to have been nearly 30,000 men.

The third day's fight at Gettysburg was a victory for northern arms, but it was a hard won fight and the conflict reflects luster today upon the north and the south. Lee led his army back southward, later to confront Grant in the campaigns which finally ended at Appomattox.

Forces Engaged and Losses.

The forces engaged at the Battle of Gettysburg were:

Confederate—According to official accounts the Army of North Virginia, on the 31st of May, numbered 74,468. The detachments which joined numbered 6,400, making 80,868. Deducting the detachments left in Virginia—Jankins' brigade, Pickett's division, 2,300; Corse's brigade, Pickett's division, 1,700; detachments from Second corps and cavalry, 1,300, in all 5,300—leaves an aggregate of 75,568.



Maj. Gen. George E. Pickett.

Union—According to the reports of the 30th of June, and making allowance for detachments that joined in the interim in time to take part in the battle, the grand aggregate was 100,000 officers and men.

Great Defense.

The great advocate—let us call him Mr. McSweeney—was defending a man in a murder case. The case looked hopeless, and McSweeney submitted no evidence for the defense. So the public prosecutor, believing that conviction was assured, ended with just a few perfunctory remarks.

Then, in a quiet, conversational tone, the famous McSweeney began to talk to the jury. He made no mention of the murder. He just described in vivid colors a pretty country cottage rung with honeysuckle, a young wife preparing supper, and the rosy youngsters waiting at the gate to greet their father on his return home for the evening meal. Suddenly McSweeney stopped. He drew himself up to his full height. Then, striking the table with his fist, he cried in a voice that thrilled every bosom:

"Gentlemen, you must send him back home to them!"

BANISHED

Coffee Finally Had to Go.

The way some persons cling to coffee, even after they know it is doing them harm, is a puzzler. But it is an easy matter to give it up for good, when Postum is properly made and used instead. A girl writes:

"Mother had been suffering with nervous headaches for seven weary years, but kept on drinking coffee.

"One day I asked her why she did not give up coffee, as a cousin of mine had done who had taken to Postum. But Mother was such a slave to coffee she thought it would be terrible to give it up.

"Finally, one day, she made the change to Postum, and quickly her headaches disappeared. One morning while she was drinking Postum so freely and with such relish, I asked for a taste.

"That started me on Postum and I now drink it more freely than I did coffee, which never comes into our house now."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Write for booklet, "The Road to Wellville."

Regular Postum (must be boiled.)

Instant Postum doesn't require boiling, but is prepared instantly by stirring a level teaspoonful in an ordinary cup of hot water, which makes it right for most persons.

A big cup requires more and some people who like strong things put in a heaping spoonful and temper it with a large supply of cream.

Experiment until you know the amount that pleases your palate and have it served that way in the future.

The painful duty was thrust upon me recently to select an office boy. The line was well formed, and upon looking them over a young voice piped up:

A little later this lad was before me and I said to him:

Mystery of Sleep.

Sleep, in which we spend about a third of our lives, continues to be one of the mysteries of biology, despite the attempts of scientists to find a solution. Dr. Raphael Dubois of Marseilles, after a prolonged series of experiments on hibernating animals, has come to the conclusion that sleep is due to antitoxin or poisoning by certain waste products, which accumulate in the brain, and are only got rid of by sleep. Dr. Claparede of Geneva thinks that sleep is an instinct devised for the protection of the organism. It was Dr. Ramon y Cajal who formulated the neurotic theory, according to which the neutrones or pyramidal cells in the gray matter of the brain sink down and cease to excite each other during sleep.

But there are objections to these theories, and all others that have been advanced. It is a matter of absolute knowledge that in sleep there is a certain absence of blood in the brain. Anything that lessens the supply of blood to the brain is likely to induce sleep. For this reason, keeping the head cool and the feet warm is recommended as one of the best means of overcoming sleeplessness. Absence of light, noise and strong odors help to produce the loss of consciousness, which is the chief characteristic of true sleep.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

DAIRY PRODUCTS ARE INCREASING

REPORT IS MADE CONCERNING THE 883 CREAMERIES IN THIS STATE.

ADDS MUCH TO OUR WEALTH

$35,000,000 Butter Produced in Year, Minnesota Record—State Report for 1912 Shows 116,000,000 Pounds.

St. Paul. — Minnesota creameries, 883, produced 116,500,000 pounds of butter in 1912, adding $35,000,000 to the state's wealth. This is an increase of about $6,000,000 over 1911. The report for 1912 is not completed but the figures given are substantially accurate in round numbers.

What Report Will Show.

"Our forthcoming report will show an increase in dairy products for every one of the eighty-six counties of Minnesota," said Ole A. Storvick, secretary of the dairy and food commission in commenting on what he regards as a highly creditable showing for the state. "Some counties, Aitkin for instance, have almost doubled their output. The success of dairying in northern Minnesota has been fully demonstrated. We look for even a greater increase this year for we believe that the farmers realize that there is not a branch of farming industry that gives better and safer returns than dairying.

"In 1908 Minnesota creameries produced 86,000,000 pounds of butter and last year 116,500,000. These figures tell how rapidly dairying is advancing."

AUTO UPSET; SIX ARE HURT

Three in Party are Seriously Injured in Accident Near Fisher, Minnesota.

Fisher.—Three were injured, two seriously, as a result of an automobile accident two miles east of Fisher. The injured are Miss Nettie Berg of Sebeka, Minn., Miss Mattie Leon of Thief River Falls, and Emma Wright, of Crookston. All are in a hospital at Crookston.

The accident happened when a party of six was returning from Fisher in an automobile belonging to C. E. Gildersleeve, a Crookston banker. The car was driven by Harry Hitchcock, son of C. A. Hitchcock, of Crookston and besides those injured the party consisted of a sister of Miss Berg and Arthur Bousler. The auto was being driven at high speed when a wheel came off.

According to those in the party who are able to describe the accident the car turned over three times before it came to a stop in a pile of wreckage. The car was found nearly 200 feet from where it had first turned turtle.

Miss Leon is a teacher at the Northwestern Agricultural school at Crookston. She is seriously hurt, being unconscious for hours.

RED WING VETERAN IS DEAD

Hancock, Centenarian and Mason, Stricken—Had Served in the War of the Rebellion.

Red Wing.—Captain David Hancock, civil war veteran and perhaps the oldest member of the Masonic order in the state, died here at the age of 101 years and 2 months. On his one hundredth birthday a year ago Red Wing observed the day with a big celebration.

"Uncle David," as he was affectionately called, walked from his home, more than a mile distant, to the business district once or twice a day until within the past few months. He leaves several sons and daughters. The funeral occurred Friday.

Captain Hancock was a drum major in the Third Minnesota infantry, but derived his title from having commanded a steamboat in Connecticut. He came to Red Wing June 12, 1854. At Grand Army campfires and reunions he was accustomed to play the old fife which he carried through the war.

WANT TO BE INDEPENDENT

Akeley. — The members of the Northern Minnesota Editorial association won the confidence of Chief Bug-ah-nah-ge-zhig at last week's annual outing, which included a visit to the Red Lake Indian reservation, and as a result the aged chief made a statement to Charles F. Scheers, vice president of the association, after being assured that his statement would be published as given regardless of the opinions of the progressive element of the Chippewas.

The chief is anxious for his people to engage in home-making and farm development work. He wants to sell the matured timber and secure the money to aid in drainage and the purchase of modern farm mahinery and furniture for the homes, but he is fearful lest the Indians be fleeced out of their just holdings or at best paid but a small part of the actual amount received or that should be received for the timber.

The sentiment among the Indians is unanimous for the sale of the timber, apparently. They want the money to use and they want it just as soon as possible. They realize that the timber will deteriorate if allowed to stand after maturity.

Chief Bug-ah-nah-ge-zhig is apparently in sympathy with the plan to allow the Indians to select probationary allotments as begun by Walter F. Dickens, superintendent and disbursing agent of the Red Lake agency, and approves of the plan for the Indians to move on the allotments and begin the work as they would under the regular allotments, thus preparing them for the duties they are to perform in the future as American citizens, instead of dependent wards.

MEN LEAVE INJURED GIRLS

Flee From Wrecked Auto to Escape Being Identified—Girls in Hospital.

CLAIM LOW EARNING CAPACITY

TWO RAILROADS PROTESTING MINN. RATE DECISION.

Rock Island and C. G. W. Say They Are in Class With M. & St. L. Companies.

St. Paul, June 25.—Taking the position that their earnings put them on a par with the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railway company, which was absolved in the sweeping rate decision handed down by the United States supreme court two weeks ago, the Chicago, Great Western and the Rock Island roads will protest the decision as far as the refundment of any excess charges are concerned.

This probable stand was inferred from the attitude of representatives of the two roads, following a conference with the members of the railroad and warehouse commission.

Asa G. Briggs represented the Great Western and Attorneys Seymour and Springer appeared for the Rock Island. All three insisted that the refunding of any excess charges would be confiscatory in their cases, and on this confiscatory feature the supreme court had been plain in its findings, they said.

At the conference last week, at which President Gray of the Great Northern and attorneys for the Milwaukee, Northwestern, Omaha and Northern Pacific were present, the statement was emphatically made that the decision would be accepted in its entirety and that there would be no further litigation so far as the roads represented were concerned. Assurances were also made, according to the railroad and warehouse commission, that all legal refunds in the shape of excess charges would be made and that they, too, would be handled without litigation.

The appearance of the Great Western and Rock Island roads at the latest hearing puts a different aspect on the whole thing and it now looks as if several of the roads operating in Minnesota would refuse to pay back any so-called over-charges without a fight. The absolving of the Minneapolis & St. Louis is their cue.

Roughly figured out, the Great Western would have to make refunds of about $250,000 and the Rock Island $75,000. This is for the period during which the injunction granted by the federal court has been in effect.

Sheriffs Enjoy An Outing.

Walker.—The annual summer outing of the Minnesota Sheriff's association was held in Walker for a three-days' session. The first day was spent in a sightseeing and fishing trip on Leech lake. Lake costumes, consisting of straw hats, gaily decorated and kahki trousers were supplied by Mayor Kinkele and the day was spent in the pike beds of Leech lake. Every sheriff who failed to catch the limit prescribed by law, was handcuffed and turned over to Deputy Sheriff Kennedy. In the evening, a fish bake and story telling bee finished the first day's program. A social smoker was given Saturday night by the Commercial club at the Glengarry club house. The Leech lake band which is to play at the Minnesota state fair this fall supplied the music for the visitors during their stay here.

NEW SENSATIONS IN PROBE OF LOBBIES

IS SUBPOENED TO TESTIFY

Baltimorean Names Solons He Declares Susceptible to Influence—Inquiry Activity to Cease Till Next Monday.

Washington, July 1.—Further sensations in the senate's lobby investigation were foreshadowed when it became known that a subpoena had been served upon Martin M. Mulhall of Baltimore, reported to have been for years the active "field agent" and lobbyist of the National Association of Manufacturers.

The subpoena was ordered by Chairman Overman of the lobby committee after representations had been made to him that Mr. Mulhall was willing to give the committee important facts regarding attempts to influence legislation, to elect or defeat candidates for congress and to control the make-up of committee on congress. A sergeant-at-arms of the senate served the subpoena upon Mr. Mulhall in Washington.

Nature of Disclosures.

The nature and extent of the disclosures that are expected were outlined in an article published Sunday, under the sworn signature of Mr. Mulhall, in the New York World and the Chicago Tribune. The statement purports to be Mr. Mulhall's personal history as the representative from 1903 to 1912 of the National Association of Manufacturers and bristles with the names of congressmen whom he alleges were "subservient' or who were punished for their opposition to legislation favoring the association.

The allegations that he had helped to defeat congressmen who opposed the interests of the manufacturers; that this organization had spent thousands of dollars to elect congressmen expected to be sympathetic to their influences; that he had aided in securing favorable members on committees that handled labor legislation; and that his associates had used great efforts to secure the establishment of a federal tariff commission in 1908, as a means of delaying tariff revision, are contained in the long article, under Mr. Mulhall's name.

Members of Congress Named.

The Mulhall article named many former and present members of congress, who were alleged to have been active agents in support of legislation desired by the American Association of Manufacturers. It specified that the employes of congress who had been retained to procure information, and alleged that even the page boys of the house of representatives were used to pick up information about proposed legislation. The writer said he had conducted state and congressional delegations; helped to break up labor unions, and had personal knowledge of the extent to which influence exerted by his associates had swayed legislators and legislation.

Senator Overman declared subpoenas would also be issued for James A. Emer, representative for the National Manufacturers' association at Washington, whom the Mulhall article designated as "chief lobbyist" for the association at Washington, and for former Congressman James E. Watson, of Indiana, referred to in the Mulhall statement as an "insidious lobbyist" for members of the Manufacturers' association, who were leading the fight for a tariff commission in 1908. He said the committee would determine at a meeting Monday, July 1, as to the summoning of other congressmen or former congressmen and officials of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Would Extend Inquiry.

"The lobby investigation has gone far beyond its original scope," said Senator Overman, "and I don't see any course for us to pursue but to ask for more power from the senate and to go into every phase of the

"We have found there is a new kind of insidious lobbying; testimony has been given to show that great interests have been getting together behind certain men, to get them on committees where their opinions would control legislation, though there might be no actual corruption of the individual. As the inquiry goes on, it brings out the fact that there has been lobbying going on that was not suspected."

The senate committee will not renew activity until July 7. Mr. Mulhall has been summoned to appear July 8.

Stays in Water 7 Hours.

New York, July 1.—Charles Durborow of Philadelphia made another attempt to swim from the Battery to Sandy Hook, but was forced to give up by the strong tide within three quarters of a mile of his goal. Durborow was blind from the action of the water on his eyes for fully an hour after he was lifted into the boat. He said he would never attempt the feat again.

FRANZ JOSEF'S KIND HEART

Little Incident That May Explain Why Ruler of Austria Is Loved by His Subjects.

Sense of humor is another strong trait of Emperor Franz Josef. One day, unannounced, Franz Josef visited the military academy at Wiener-Neustadt, entered a classroom and, saying to the officer hearing a recitation: "Don't let me disturb you," took a seat. On the bench behind him he put his general's hat, crowned with its bush of long straight feathers. A boy eyed the green plumes, then slyly stretched his hand out and plucked one. Emboldened by success, he took four and would have taken the rest had he not touched his emperor's arm in the process.

"What are you doing that for?" asked Franz Josef, viewing the depleted bunch.

"For a souvenir," the boy stuttered.

"But why so many?"

"My comrades would each want one, too," was the frank response.

"Well, I suppose there is no way out of it but to give you the whole lot," said the emperor, by this time laughing heartily as he tore loose the bush. Turning to the teacher, whose frown of horror had been lost on the small boy, his majesty remarked, "But, captain, you must kindly lend me your cap to go home in."—Pictorial Review.

THE BEST TREATMENT FOR ITCHING SCALPS, DANDRUFF AND FALLING HAIR

To allay itching and irritation of the scalp, prevent dry, thin and falling hair, remove crusts, scales and dandruff, and promote the growth and beauty of the hair, the following special treatment is most effective, agreeable and economical. On retiring, comb the hair out straight all around, then begin at the side and make a parting, gently rubbing Cuticura Ointment into the parting with a bit of soft flannel held over the end of the finger. Anoint additional partings about half an inch apart until the whole scalp has been treated, the purpose being to get the Cuticura Ointment on the scalp skin rather than on the hair. It is well to place a light covering over the hair to protect the pillow from possible stain. The next morning, shampoo with Cuticura Soap and hot water. Shampoos alone may be used as often as agreeable, but once or twice a month is generally sufficient for this special treatment for women's hair.

Wouldn't Take Chances.

A Chicago lawyer found a new sort of therapeutic treatment. His instructor told him that if he retired into the silence, breathed rhythmically, and said certain words he would be able to cast off all his bodily ailments. He tried it and it worked. Then his three-year-old child got measles and he worked it on him. He was all puffed up. Later his prize setter contracted the mange. He summoned a veterinary. Then a friend expostulated. "Your system worked with yourself and it worked with your child," he said; "why don't you try it on the dog?" "That dog cost me $100 when he was a mere pup," was the answer, "and I can't afford to take any chances."

Had Not Disobeyed.

Robbie is a Washington boy, and many degrees removed from an angel. Not long ago his father bought him a bicycle, on a solemn promise that he would be good for at least a year.

One week later he was detected in some particularly flagrant act, and his father, to punish him, forbade him to ride his bicycle for a whole week.

Robbie promised, but as his father neared home next day he saw his son whirling along on his wheel.

"Robbie," said he, more in sorrow than in anger, "didn't I tell you not to ride your bicycle for a week?"

"Yes, sir," said Robbie, cheerfully, "and I'm not going to disobey you. This isn't my wheel. It's one I borrowed."

ST. HILAIRE AND BROOKS TO PLAY

Much Mooted Question of Supremacy To Be Settled Here July 20

It is probable the St. Hilaire and Brooks ball teams will meet here Sunday, July 20 to settle the much disputed question of supremacy. Early in the season Brooks went to the Saintly city and whaled the daylights out of that team, and later the Saints returned the compliment on the Brooks grounds. To settle the dispute the two teams have agreed to meet here. It surely will be some game, Bill, so plan on postponing any other arrangements and journey out to the grounds where the mighty struggle will be staged.

Agricultural Agents.

Twenty-one counties have already taken advantage of the law enacted by the last legislature, appropriating $1,000 to twenty-five counties as state aid for the payment of county agricultural agents. This leaves only four vacancies, and as there is a movement on in a number of counties to take advantage of this opportunity some of them are bound to be disappointed.

The following counties have already qualified, according to Professor A. D. Wilson, who is superintendent of the agricultural extension and farmers institutes for the university: Big Stone, Stevens, Chippewa, Douglas, Traverse, Pope, Grant, Clay, Wilkin, Norman, Renville, Todd, Faribault, St. Louis, Lac que Parle, Ottor Tail, Washington, Carlton, Swift, Ramsey, and Mower.

YIELD PROMISES BEST IN YEARS

Farmer in Don't Worry Class; Prospects For Big Crop Bright.

The crops in Red Lake and Pennington counties promise to yield this year that would put to shame even the prospectus of a pamphlet of a Canadian estate agent.

While in small portions there has not been sufficient rainfall. Yet taken generally the crops will undoubtedly exceed that of many past years. Wheat, oats, barley, flax, and in fact, grains have taken a shoot skyward that rivals a sprinter in a hundred yard dash, and it certainly would take some ornery weather from now on to reduce it to even an average yield. Hay also shows an abundant crop.

Horse Thieves Busy

If you happen to see a man (or maybe a woman) driving, riding or hiking across the fields in a suspicious manner, as though he (or she) didn't particularly want your company, you had better investigate, and probably you will come in for a share of the $200 reward offered for some horse thieves that are operating in this country.

The latest loss is reported from Fertile where a couple of horses were lost last Sunday. This makes the third theft in the past three weeks and to date not one of the horses have been recovered or the thieves apprehended.

According to the methods used and the easy manner in which they escape detection the thefts are believed to be the work of some organized gang operating in this country.

However, the sheriffs and deputies are hot on the trail and some arrests are expected shortly.

Why Thunder Sours Milk.

It is universally known that milk turns sour after a thunder storm. This has been attributed to the large quantity of ozone which is liberated by the electricity in the air. The experiments of Professor Trillat in Paris do not confirm that theory. He has established that atmospheric depressions cause putrefying gases—normal quiescent—to rise to the surface of certain substances, and in support of his theory points out that odors of all sorts are more permeating after storms. These atmospheric depressions accelerate the decomposition of gases and tend to liberate them. Hence lactic ferment is produced. Professor Trillat has made many experiments with diverse substances under varying pressures and has observed that when the barometer is lowest (during storms, etc.) the decomposition of gases is most rapid.

The "Workin' Stiff."

"He is one of the army of unskilled laborers easily mobilized on any of a variety of industrial frontiers," write Charles Phelps Cushing and Arthur Killick in the issue of Harper's Weekly—"an army estimated now at half a million, content to do the hardest sorts of toil at wages so low that not more than one man in a thousand saves anything." When he gets into trouble the "stiff's" hands are his best credentials. "Look at his hands, sergeant," the magistrate says. "The police court bailiff feels their palms and makes one of two permissible answers, 'Soft as a baby's, yer Honor!' or 'Hard as nails, sir.'"

CAPITAL STIRRED BY LAMAR STORY

INQUIRY PLANNED BY HOUSE

Lamar Tells Amazing Story of His Activities in Lobby Work—$82,000,000 Fraud in Union Pacific Is Charged.

Washington, July 5.—Extraordinary developments occurred in the lobby situation in the house of representatives and before the senate lobby committee. They were:

A brazen confession by one David Lamar, who admitted this name to be an alias, and who described himself as a New York operator in stocks, that he had impersonated members of congress in behalf of the employment of Edward Lauterbach, a New York lawyer, to prevent national legislation hostile to big financial interests.

A detailed charge by Lamar that the Union Pacific company's books had been forged in 1901 on an item covering $82,000,000, one of the results of which, he alleged, was that Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and the late E. H. Harriman amassed enormous fortunes.

Denials by Congressmen Sherley of Kentucky, Calder of New York, Webb of North Carolina, and Bartholdt of Missouri on the floor of the house of representatives that they had had any connection whatsoever with or that they had been controlled or influenced in the slightest degree by the National Association of Manufacturers or its agents.

Demands by these congressmen and others for an immediate investigation of the Mulhall revelations by a special committee to be created by the house.

Reference of these several resolutions to the committee on rules, with instructions to report a comprehensive resolution on Saturday next calling for a thorough investigation of all lobbying operations directed on members of the house.

Witness Enjoys Own Tale.

Lamar, or whatever his real name may be (and the committee proposes to force him to reveal it before he is finally excused), deserves study by psychological experts. As if he were telling a joke the whole country would relish he smilingly related his telephone conversations with presidents of and counsel for the Union Pacific Railroad company, the Standard Oil company, the United Cigars company, and others, all designed to bring about the employment of Lauterbach as their legislative agent.

At one time he said he was Congressman Palmer, at another Congressman Riordan. Again he was Chairman McCombs of the national Democratic committee endeavoring to make an arrangement with Chairman Hilles of the Republican party to benefit through pressure on senators and congressmen the interests with which Hilles now is associated.

He impersonated so many congressmen that he could not remember them all.

Claims He Aided Public.

His sole motive, he claimed, was to impress the big financiers with the ability of his friend Lauterbach. Nor was Mr. Lauterbach the sole beneficiary of his philanthropic conduct. The American people, he declared, were heavily in his debt, for he had saved them the tidy little sum of $30,000,000 in connection with the reorganization of the Union Pacific in 1897. For this patriotic act he said that he and the late Russell Sage, with whom he co-operated, were denounced as a "pair of conscienceless blackmailers."

But this was not all of Mr. Lamar's disinterested service for others. He told how James R. Keene and his son-in-law and some friends acquired $42,000,000 of the stock of the Union Pacific, how he took measures to save them.

He told how "the golden moment" for which he was working arrived, and how Mr. Keene failed to grasp it when he told him to do so, with the result that Keene lost the greater part of his fortune, and the firm of which Keene's son-in-law was the head was forced to suspend.

Tells of "War" on Lauterbach.

And then, touchingly, he described how J. Pierpont Morgan, Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and E. H. Harriman, forced into consolidation of their interests by the panic of 1907, determined to starve Mr. Lauterbach out in the practice of his profession and bring about his ostracism from the business and professional world.

The price of the withdrawal of their opposition was that Lauterbach should have nothing further to do with the witness, Lamar. Magnanimously Lamar offered to release Lauterbach, but the latter magnanimously refused.

"But, Mr. Chairman," continued Lamar, in the most convincing tone, "it was most distressing to me, to see the mental condition of my friend, to see the low estate into which he was falling, in the practice of his profession, and the curtailment of his income. I would have done anything in my power to change that any to ameliorate those conditions.

"I realize perfectly that I could not talk with these men directly. Their hatred and dislike of me was so bitter that they would not even confer with me on any subject.

"And it is perfectly true, therefore, that for the purpose of endeavoring to restore the condition of former friendship and harmony that had existed between Mr. Lauterbach and the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and Mr. Schiff, I did, using the names of other persons, have a number of conversations over the telephone with men connected with the Union Pacific company."

Testimony Given by Lamar.

Lamar, when he first took the stand this morning, admitted he was the man mentioned in the testimony of Robert S. Lovett as having called Wall street financiers on the telephone and impersonated congressmen.

He then gave a history of his alleged dealings with financiers and railroad magnates. In 1897, he said, the late Russell Sage authorized him to proceed to compel the Union Pacific to pay the government $58,000,000 in bonds owing it. Lamar, with Senator Foraker, came to Washington and conferred with President McKinley.

"We were charged with being a pair of conscienceless blackmailers," Lamar said, "but that had no effect on us."

When Sage retired from business in 1901, on Sage's recommendation, Lamar said, he became associated with James R. Keene. Lamar said he warned Keene, when the latter was buying Union Pacific stock, that the railroad would ruin him to get revenge for Lamar's previous activity. He detailed how, when Keene and his associates had $43,000,000 in Union Pacific, he took steps to enjoin the voting of certain stock so that E. H. Harriman would be compelled to buy Keene's stock at a high figure. With Keene's approval he retained Lauterbach's law firm and paid $25,000. Lauterbach and Lamar came to Washington, paid Foraker a fee, and engaged him.

When the injunction was finally decided against Keene, Union Pacific went down and Keene and his friends lost most of their fortunes.

Tells of Phone Talks.

"As the result of the panic of 1907," said Lamar, "Harriman, Kuhn, Loeb & Co., the National City bank, and Morgan & Co. became bound together as with an iron band."

"For the purpose of doing my friend, Lauterbach, a service," he said, "and to restore him to his former friendly relation with Kuhn, Loeb & Co., Jacob Schiff and the Union Pacific officials, and others, did have conversations with Union Pacific officials, and in those conversations I did use the names of other persons. But there was no suggestion of a fee to Mr. Lauterbach. On the strength of these telephone messages Mr. Lovett came here and charged that Edward Lauterbach had tried to blackmail him."

The Lauterbach incident, added, "paled into insignificance," compared with an $82,000,000 forgery which he alleged was committed on the Union Pacific books in 1901.

"I don't know who did it," said Lamar, "the chairman of the board or the office boy, but I do know this $82,000,000 was the fulcrum which enabled Harriman and Kuhn, Loeb & Co. to gain control of these corporations."

Tells Story of "Forgery."

He described a double entry of $82,000,000 representing securities the Union Pacific assumed in taking over the Oregon Short Line and the Oregon Railway and Navigation company. The items, he said, were carried in the "consolidated balance sheet" of the Union Pacific June 30, 1900, but between that time and June 30, 1901, he alleged, some one had erased the $82,000,000 item from one side of the ledger, leaving it as a credit balance on the other side.

"They took all the securities of the Oregon Short Line and the Oregon Railway and Navigation," he said, "and used them as security for an issue of bonds. They got that money and used it to finance the deal for the Northern Pacific and Great Northern transactions and the flotation of Great Northern Ore properties, which they sold out at an enormous profit."

Later, Lamar alleged, the principals in the transaction went to Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and secretly got nearly $200,000,000, which he believed was for their own use.

Denial Made by Cravath.

Immediately after Lamar had finished this phase of the story, Paul D. Cravath of counsel for the Union Pacific railroad put in this reply:

"In view of the statement regarding the account of the Union Pacific Railroad company which David Lamar has gone out of his way to make before this committee, and, inasmuch as persons not familiar with David Lamar's character, who may read this statement in the newspapers, may be misled thereby, I deem it my duty to make the following statement for the records of the committee:

"For several days persons connected with the Union Pacific Railroad company have been informed that an effort was being made to circulate and secure publication of a prepared story about an alleged falsification of the accounts of the Union Pacific company involving $70,000,000 or $80,000,000 of its surplus.

"We were informed, in substance, that this story was so palpably false and scandalous and so plainly offered for an improper purpose, that the newspapers would not publish it. Information then came that the story would soon be made public in such a way that the newspapers would have to publish it.

"It now appears that the medium for the publication of this story was to be this man David Lamar, who has confessed himself to be the most unconscionable of liars of modern times."

Overheard on the Train.

"O, that's the oldest story in the world. Noah told it to his boys in the ark."

"Yes, old chap, I know it's a chestnut; the only new stories are the ones you tell."

WOMAN SURVIVOR OF BATTLE OF GETTYSBURG

Copyright, Underwood & Underwood

That woman played a prominent part in the greatest battle of the Civil war that was fought just fifty years ago, is apt to be forgotten until a mute reminder such as is seen in the photograph is brought to our attention. Fifty years back is a long time to remember, yet here one of those who fought under the stars and bars, five decades ago, is greeting one of the women nurses and one of the few remaining ones whose husband was the comrade in arms of the grizzled old veteran.

SIDELIGHTS OF GETTYSBURG REUNION

The great reunion of the blue and the gray on the battlefield of Gettysburg has passed into history. It was in all respects the most unique gathering of the soldiers of the 60's ever held. Men who fought each other fifty years ago this year fraternized as long-separated brothers. Naturally such a gathering would be productive of many incidents, both pathetic and humorous. As many stories were floating about as there were veterans at the reunion.

The camp is full of unexpected meetings. Every day brings forth numerous meetings between men who have not seen one another for many years. Many are commonplace, but some are extraordinary. For instance, here is one:

I. D. Munsee of Erie county, Pennsylvania, a soldier in the 111th Pennsylvania, was captured by the confederates at Peachtree Creek, Ga., when he was one of Sherman's army on the celebrated march to the sea. He was being conveyed to the rear by a confederate soldier when the union batteries opened fire upon the party among whom he was a prisoner. The man who was guarding Munsee was hit and fell, knocking Munsee down and lying on top of him.

Seeing his chance of escape, Munsee lay very still under the unconscious confederate while the battle raged around them. That night he slipped from under the body and escaped to the union lines.

"I thought that fellow was dead," said Munsee, "but I saw him today. Poor fellow, his mind's bad, and he didn't recognize me, but I was sure of him. I couldn't even get his name, but I'm goin over later to the Georgia camp and try to find out who he is."

Here is a story which was told by A. T. Dice, vice-president of the Reading railway:

Once upon a time there were a veteran in gray and a veteran in blue. They came to Gettysburg and in the course of events and visits to hotels they happened to meet. They looked over the sights of Gettysburg and the monuments of the field. But they found they must part.

The one in blue lived in Oregon; the one in gray in New Orleans. They went weeping together to their station and passed by train after train, deferring the parting that must come. Just what they said, just how they reached the final grand idea of the meeting, Mr. Dice did not know.

But, however, yesterday they finally decided that the time for parting had come. The one from Oregon could not figure how to reach home via New Orleans and his gray comrade, while willing to see the west, didn't have the money for a ticket.

They lined upon on the platform as their trains stood waiting and then before the crowd, they slowly stripped off their uniforms and exchanged them there while the curious flocked to see them.

The Oregonian who came proudly to town with a coat of blue, went as proudly away with one of gray and the veteran from Louisiana who boasted the gray of the south sat with swelling chest in his new uniform of blue.

Wearing a tattered uniform of gray, Alexander Hunt of Virginia was the central point of interest on the streets of the town. Mr. Hunter was wearing the identical suit and hat which he wore at Gettysburg fifty years ago.

The suit was in rags and has a bullet hole through one of the sleeves. He carried all his accoutrements used at Gettysburg, and wore a union belt [illegible]

A striking contrast is seen in the menu provided for the soldiers fifty years ago and what they enjoyed this year:

1863—Breakfast—Hardtack, bacon, beans and coffee.

Dinner—Bacon, beans, hardtack and coffee.

Supper—Beans, hardtack, bacon and coffee.

Supper—Salmon salad, macaroni and cheese, fresh bread, butter and coffee.

Chief Clerk George G. Thorne of the state department at Harrisburg told of the call made by a Union veteran early on the morning of the fiftieth anniversary of the start of the battle, who related that his conscience troubled him because of the fact that on that fateful morning many years ago he had succumbed to temptation and stolen a quantity of onions from the Thorne garden, which was located near the historic Seminary ridge. He told Thorne that he desired, at this late day to pay for the onions and thus relieve his conscience.

Needless to say, his offer of money was refused, but the Thornes would like to learn the identity of the soldiers who upset eight beehives in the dead of night and appropriated all the honey they contained.

A remarkable coincidence of the camp was the meeting of two men of exactly the same name, coming from towns of the same name, but in different states. One fought on the union side in the battle of Gettysburg, and the other with the confederates.

These two men are John Carson of Burlington, N. J., and John Carson of Burlington, N. C.

They met by the merest chance. The Jersey Carson was walking along one of the streets, and saw a man in gray. Just to be friendly, the Jersey man stopped him and gave him a greeting. It was not until they had talked for several minutes that they discovered their names were identical, as well as the names of their towns.

A grandson of Francis Scott Key, composer of "The Star-Spangled Banner," is here. He is John Francis Key, aged eighty-two, of Pikeville, Md., and he is a veteran of the Second Maryland infantry of the confederate army.

Wearing a suit of gray, Key came into town, weak and almost dropping. He has been in failing health, but declared he was "going to see Gettysburg on this occasion or die."

One of the oldest veterans in the big camp is Captain W. H. Fleig of Houston, Texas, who was ninety years of age on his last birthday, February 23. During the war he served with distinction in the marine department of the confederate navy. Captain Fleig is one of the best preserved men in camp and is more active than many of the other veterans a score of years less advanced.

Gen. "Tom" Stewart of Pennsylvania is telling an amusing story of a "runaway vet" he came across in the big camp. The veteran is eighty-five years old, and his son at home announced that under no circumstances should his aged parent go to Gettysburg. The desire to be here and meet his former comrades was so strong in the heart of the old gentleman that he climbed out of a window of his home and ran away, turning up here in good [illegible] happy and well [illegible]

Fifty years to the hour from the time when the first shot preceding the battle was fired a reunion meeting of the blue and the gray was held in the big tent. The gray cavalry men who fought the skirmishes that led up to the three days' fight pledged themselves in the shadows of the stars and stripes to "forget" and their brothers in blue swore by the stars and bars that the fight was over for all time.

There were several women from the village in the tent and six one-time schoolgirls, gray-haired and aged now, sang "Rally 'Round the Flag, Boys," while the veterans wept like boys, but with pride. The six women who sang the battle song were among those who thronged the streets of Gettysburg after the advance guard of the southern army left it 50 years ago. On the night when Buford's men came riding into the village on the heels of Wheeler's men in gray, maidens strewed flowers along the streets and bells in the churches pealed out the news of the coming of the blue and the town went wild.

Of all the scores of girls who welcomed the vanguard of Meade, only a half dozen could be found, and they stood, white-haired with tears in their eyes on a platform in the big tent and sang to the weeping soldiers in the seats below.

"I'm afraid we can't sing like we sang 50 years ago," said the matronly woman who acted as leader as she led the way up the steps to the platform.

"We don't care; just sing again," shouted the veterans. As the first notes of the war-time melody came from them in quavering tones, the veterans both of the north and of the south sat quiet with eyes fixed upon the singers. The hum of the chorus came from every side, and the old men wept openly.

Aside from the old soldiers themselves, an interesting figure is Mrs. Longstreet, widow of the commander at the front of the Confederate lines in the third day's battle. Mrs. Longstreet walked a mile through the broiling sun out to the old Rogers house to interview General Sickles.

Some time ago Mrs. Longstreet sent a long telegram as representing the southern veterans in protest against the old Union veteran being thrown in jail in New York because of some financial affairs. It was said that Sickles misunderstood the spirit and his pride was so hurt that their meeting today would not be cordial.

"General, I have written an article about you for publication," said Mrs. Longstreet at the meeting, and she read several pages of the highest tribute to the old corps leader, whom she characterized as having come back and being once again in the saddle. Half a hundred old Sickles' men gathered on the lawn and the reading became dramatic. General Sickles leaned back in his big chair, closed his eyes, and looked back to meeting with Longstreet.

Here his widow was praising to the world the valor which she claimed had gone unrecognized by the government. Tears flowed down the Sickles cheeks now tanned by his ninety-third summer, and his old followers doffed their hats and mingled their tears with those of their old leader, wetting the ground upon which long ago had been soaked by their blood.

James H. Lansberry of St. Louis, Mo., who enlisted in the Third Indiana cavalry from Madison, Ind., recited to his comrades the details of his capture in the town of Gettysburg by Confederates 50 years ago. Following the skirmish just outside of town which marked the opening of what was to be a world-famed engagement, he had been detailed to assist in carrying a wounded officer to the old seminary in Gettysburg. While in town frantic women flocked about him and begged that he tell of the battle. He remained to tell the story, with the result that he had to spend several days in following the Confederate army as a prisoner. After tramping 50 miles over rough country without shoes he succeeded in escaping and finally made his way back to Gettysburg, where he remained till August in assisting in the care of the wounded, which were housed in the seminary, churches, barns and public buildings.

One of the unadvertised reunions of the celebration occured in the confederate section of the camp. A fife and drum corps of men in blue tramped up and down the streets of the confederate part of the city of tents.

They stopped before the tents, played such a fanfare as only drums and fifes can make, summoned forth the occupants and shook hands, threw their arms about the gray shoulders and in a dozen other ways showed their feelings of friendship.

They kept it up for hours and visited practically every "reb" tent. Their reception was as warm as their greeting.

One of the most interesting places in camp was the lost and found bureau, located under the benches in the big tent. Everything found on the grounds was brought there and thousands applied every day for missing articles.

There were at least 100 crutches piled up in the bureau, dozen or so applicants having called for them. Those who come to redeem their lost crutches seldom can recognize them and most of them go away with somebody else's.

There was one wooden leg also lying unclaimed. It was brought in by a Boy Scout, who had found it under a tree.

Several sets of false teeth were found.

One of the big events was the "charge" of the survivors of Picketts' division on the "bloody angle."

Under the hot sun the men in gray marched across the field that had not seen anything more warlike than a blacksnake in 50 years, up to the walls that form the angle. The "enemy" in blue was waiting with weapons ready, and when they met across the wall they shook hands. Afterward they looked over the ground for the site of a $250,000 monument they hope to have congress erect there.

Worldly Advice.

"Equivocal advice, that," said Senator Hitchcock in a tariff argument. "Such advice can be taken in two ways. It's like the advice of Rowndar.

"A youth told Rowndar that he was passionately in love with a parlor maid eleven years his senior.

"'She's all the world to me,' said the youth. 'What would you advise me to do?'

Predicament of a Suffragist.

A well-known university professor who has taken much interest in the woman suffrage movement was persuaded to carry a banner in a parade that was held in New York some months ago.

His wife observed him marching with a dejected air and carrying his banner so that it hung limply on its standard, and later she reproved him for not making a better appearance.

"Why didn't you march like somebody, and let people see your banner?" she said.

"My dear," meekly replied the professor, "did you see what was on the banner? It read, 'Any man can vote. Why can't I?'"

Source of Strength.

We do not flatter ourselves that the intellect of our time, judged by the power of individuals, is exceptionally great. No doubt, men of commanding genius are still with us, but they are not more numerous or more original than in former times. What then is the peculiarity that has produced such great results? In my opinion what has been accomplished is due in great part to the spread of higher education, which has evolved an army of competent investigators possessing enthusiasm for research which now, for the first time, is led into useful paths by the few great minds, whose powers thus receive a wider range and become more productive. It is in this that our great strength lies.—Prof. Arthur Schuster in Science.

CUBS' FOOD

They Thrive on Grape-Nuts.

Healthy babies don't cry and the well-nourished baby that is fed on Grape-Nuts is never a crying baby. Many babies who cannot take any other food relish the perfect food, Grape-Nuts, and get well.

"My baby was given up by three doctors who said that the condensed milk on which I had fed her had ruined the child's stomach. One of the doctors told me that the only thing to do would be to try Grape-Nuts, so I got some and prepared it as follows: I soaked 1½ tablespoonfuls in one pint of cold water for half an hour, then I strained off the liquid and mixed 12 teaspoonfuls of this strained Grape-Nuts juice with six teaspoonfuls of rich milk, put in a pinch of salt and a little sugar, warmed it and gave it to baby every two hours.

"In this simple, easy way I saved baby's life and have built her up to a strong, healthy child, rosy and laughing. The food must certainly be perfect to have such a wonderful effect as this. I can truthfully say I think it is the best food in the world to raise delicate babies on and is also a delicious healthful food for grown-ups as we have discovered in our family."

Grape-Nuts is equally valuable to the strong, healthy man or woman. It stands for the true theory of health. "There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

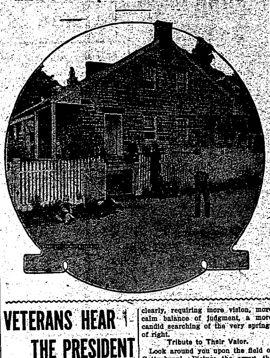
MEAD'S HEADQUARTERS AT GETTYSBURG



VETERANS HEAR THE PRESIDENT

Mr. Wilson Delivers Address at Gettysburg Celebration.

DRAWS LESSON FROM BATTLE

Declares Great Army of the People Must Fight Peacefully to Perfect the Nation All Love.

Gettysburg, Pa., July 4.—National day in the semi-centennial celebration of the Battle of Gettysburg was made especially notable by an address delivered by President Woodrow Wilson. In his audience were many thousands of the veterans who fought in the great battle, as well as a great throng of other visitors.

The president's address follows:

Friends and Fellow Citizens: I need not tell you what the battle of Gettysburg meant. These gallant men in blue and gray sit all about us here. Many of them met here upon this ground in grim and deadly struggle. Upon these famous fields and hillsides their comrades died about them. In their presence it were an impertinence to discourse upon how the battle went, how it ended, what it signified! But 50 years have gone by since then and I crave the privilege of speaking to you for a few minutes of what those 50 years have meant.

What have they meant? They have meant peace and union and vigor, and the maturity and might of a great nation. How wholesome and healing the peace has been! We have found one another again as brothers and comrades in arms, enemies no longer, generous friends rather, our battles long past, the quarrel forgotten—except that we shall not forget the splendid valor, the manly devotion of the men then arrayed against one another, now grasping hands and smiling into each other's eyes. How complete the union has become and how dear to all of us, how unquestioned, how benign and majestic, as state after state has been added to this great family of free men! How handsome the vigor, the maturity, the might of the great nation we love with undivided hearts; how full of large and confident promise that a life will be wrought out that will crown its strength with gracious justice and a happy welfare that will touch all alike with deep contentment! We are debtors to those 50 crowded years; they have made us heirs to a mighty heritage.

Nation Not Finished.

But do we deem the nation complete and finished? These venerable men crowding here to this famous field have set us a great example of devotion and utter sacrifice. They were willing to die that the people might live. But their task is done. Their day is turned into evening. They look to us to perfect what they established. Their work is handed on to us, to be done in another way but not in another spirit. Our day is not over; it is upon us in full tide.

Have affairs paused? Does the nation stand still? Is it what the 50 years have wrought since those days of battle finished, rounded out, and completed? Here is a great people, great with every force that has ever beaten in the life blood of mankind. And it is secure. There is no one within its borders, there is no power among the nations of the earth, to make it afraid. But has it yet squared itself with its own great standards set up at its birth, when it made that first noble, naive appeal to the moral judgment of mankind to take notice that a government had now at last been established which was to serve men, not masters? It is secure in everything except the satisfaction that its life is right, adjusted to the uttermost to the standards of righteousness and humanity. The days of sacrifice and cleansing are not closed. We have harder things to do than were done in the heroic days of war, because harder to see clearly, requiring more vision, more calm balance of judgment, a more candid searching of the very springs of right.

Tribute to Their Valor.

Look around you upon the field of Gettysburg! Picture the array, the fierce heats and agony of battle, column hurled against column, battery bellowing to battery! Valor? Yes! Greater no man shall see in war; and self-sacrifice, and loss to the uttermost; the high recklessness of exalted devotion which does not count the cost. We are made by these tragic, epic things to know what it costs to make a nation—the blood and sacrifice of multitudes of unknown men lifted to a great stature in the view of all generations by knowing no limit to their manly willingness to serve. In armies thus marshaled from the ranks of free men you will see, as it were, a nation embattled, the leaders and the led, and may know, if you will, how little except in form its action differs in days of peace from its action in days of war.

May we break camp now and be at ease? Are the forces that fight for the Nation dispersed, disbanded, gone to their homes forgetful of the common cause? Are our forces disorganized, without constituted leaders and the might of men consciously united because we contend, not with armies, but with principalities and powers and wickedness in high places. Are we content to lie still? Does our union mean sympathy, our peace contentment, our vigor right action, our maturity self-comprehension and a clear confidence in choosing what we shall do? War fitted us for action, and action never ceases.

Our Laws the Orders of the Day.

I have been chosen the leader of the Nation. I cannot justify the choice by any qualities of my own, but so it has come about, and here I stand. Whom do I command? The ghostly hosts who fought upon these battlefields long ago and are gone? These gallant gentlemen stricken in years whose fighting days are over, their glory won? What are the orders for them, who rallies them? I have in my mind another host, whom these set free of civil strife in order that they might work out in days of peace and settled order the life of a great nation. That host is the people themselves, the great and the small, without class or difference of kind or race or origin; and undivided in interest, if we have but the vision to guide and direct them and order their lives aright in what we do. Our constitutions are their articles of enlistment. The orders of the day are the laws upon our statute books. What we strive for is their freedom, their right to lift themselves from day to day and behold the things they have hoped for, and so make way for still better days for those whom they love who are to come after them. The recruits are the little children crowding in. The quartermaster's stores are in the mines and forests and fields, in the shops and factories. Every day something must be done to push the campaign forward; and it must be done by plan and with an eye to some great destiny.

How shall we hold such thoughts in our hearts and not be moved? I would not have you live even today wholly in the past, but would wish to stand with you in the light that streams upon us now out of that great day gone by. Here is the nation God has builded by our hands. What shall we do with it? Who stands ready to act again and always in the spirit of this day of reunion and hope and patriotic fervor? The day of our country's life has but broadened into morning. Do not put uniforms by. Put the harness of the present on. Lift your eyes to the great tracts of life yet to be conquered in the interest of righteous peace, of that prosperity which lies in a people's hearts and outlasts all wars and errors of men. Come, let us be comrades and soldiers yet to serve our fellow men in quiet counsel, where the blare of trumpets is neither heard nor heeded and where the things are done which make blessed the nations of the world in peace and righteousness and love.

Unclaimed Lottery Prizes.

Many lottery prizes remain unclaimed. In France at the present time there is said to be $600,000 in lottery money going abegging for want of claimants. At the recent Brussels exhibition lottery the first prize of $40,000 remained unclaimed for weeks, but the owner of the winning ticket was discovered at last. Just before the drawing of the lottery a young Belgian miner [illegible] and buried [illegible] dead some time did the advertisements for the lottery winner remind the young man's friends that he had bought a ticket, which might have been buried with him. They obtained permission to exhume the body, and in a waistcoat pocket was found the ticket, which, had he lived, would have made him rich.

REPUBLICANS PLAN ATTACK ON TARIFF

FIGHT ON UNDERWOOD-SIMMONS BILL TO BE LAUNCHED LATE IN WEEK.

TO ASSAIL IMPORTANT PARTS

Senators Smoot and LaFollette Ready With Substitutes — Democratic Leaders Hope to Pledge Followers to Unit Rule.

Washington, July 8.—Republican members of the senate quietly have been preparing for some weeks for the attack to be made on the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill, when it gets back in the senate late this week. While a program of tariff policy has not been laid out by the Republicans, leading representatives of the party have prepared amendments, substitute schedules and protection arguments, directed at many of the important sections of the Democratic bill.

Five Weeks for Discussion.

Senator Simmons, chairman of the finance committee, who will bring the bill in from the committee with the seal of Democratic caucus approval, estimates that five weeks will be enough to wind up general debate and discussion and to obtain a vote on final passage. Prominent Republican senators doubt whether the tariff can be disposed of in the senate in that time.

The Democrats are not yet in complete harmony over the measure, because of the insistence of some western and southern senators that the free sugar and free wool plans of the administration be modified. An attempt will be made to put a binding rule through the caucus, pledging every Democrat to vote down amendments in the senate and to support the bill in its entirety. Pronounced opposition to this plan exists within the party ranks.

Root and LaFollette Plans.

Two views of the Republicans' attitude are shown in the work that has been done by Senator Smoot of Utah and Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin. Senator Smoot has prepared amendments to scores of the Democratic items, and will offer a substitute for the Democratic wool tariff plan. His proposal will be for a substantial reduction in raw wool and on manufactured goods, but on such a basis that a reasonable protection would be retained.

Senator La Follette has been at work for weeks with the aid of experts, preparing substitute schedules for many section of the Underwood-Simmons bill. He also has again attacked the woolen and cotton schemes and is prepared to make a long and stubborn fight, in the effort to rally Republicans, Progressives and some Democrats to the support of a woolen tariff that will be much below the present rates, but will preserve some protection. It is expected, however, that the LaFollette proposal will suggest much lower rates than those to be made by Senator Smoot.

Lobby Investigations Interesting.

Lobby investigations, which grew out of the tariff revision bill, and have gone far beyond its realm, promise to engross the attention of congress this week. The senate's investigating committee will begin hearings today that are expected to last two weeks or more. Interest will center about the activities of officers of the National Association of Manufacturers, who have been charged by Martin M. Mulhall, one of their former employes, with being engaged in a general attempt to influence legislation and control the election of members of congres.

Edward Lauterbach, the New York lawyer, about whom centered the extraordinary activities of "David Lamar," appeared today and the senate committee resumed its probe hearings.

MANY ATROCITIES CHARGED

Federal Gunboats Shell Insurgent Position, Some Missiles Striking the American Club.

Douglas, Ariz., July 8. — On the morning of July 4, the bombardment of Guaymas was at its height, according to refugees just arriving here.

The insurgent state troops brought into play three cannon, captured from the federals, shelling the gulf town and the two federal gunboats lying in the harbor. The Tampico in return bombarded the insurgent positions in Empalme, where shells tore into the American club house. No Americans were reported injured.

Soon after the Tampico was forced to change anchorage, moving to the mouth of the harbor. State officials charge the federals with many atrocities against the residents of Guaymas.

Cooks and Waiters Striking.

St. Louis, July 8.—In sympathy with the striking cooks and waiters, all union bartenders in the hotels and cafes concerned have walked out. Strikers paraded the downtown streets and stopped in front of each of the hotels to hoot the management. Police are stationed at the hostelries day and night. A fund of $1,500 has been voted to support the striking waiters and bartenders. The negro waiters, imported for strike duty, have received contracts calling for at least five months' work.

Offer Six Women for Orozco.

Mexico City, July 8.—The Mexican government is willing to exchange six women for Pascual Orozco, Sr., who has been in the hands of Emiliano Zapata's forces for several months. These women are Zapata's mother, his wife, his sister and his three sisters-in-law. The women were taken prisoners at Villa Ayala in the state of Morelos. [illegible]

GOPHER NEWS NOTES.

Minnesota Events of the Week in Condensed Form.

Pipestone.—Ruthton, in this county, has a newspaper. The Review has been started by John Conway of the Woodstock News.

St. Cloud.—Mike Weber, age 21, sustained a fractured skull and other injuries which may prove fatal when he fell from his motorcycle.

Springfield. — Sringfield celebrated the Fourth of July. An automobile parade was a feature, Congressman W. S. Hammond was the speaker.

Sleepy Eye.—Judge I. M. Olsen of the Ninth Judicial district has purchased a home at New Ulm and will move there with his family about Sept. 1.

Little Falls.—Little Falls will celebrate the Fourth. Two ball bames with St. Cloud, a program of sports, a G. A. R. parade, and other events are on the program.

St. Cloud.—Walter and Lloyd Tenvoorde and Alfred Rau, boys, were painfully injured about the face when a can of lime, into which they had poured water, exploded.

Winona.—The Electro-Process Company, which last fall moved from Winona to Dubuque, is in financial difficulty and a meeting of the stockholders has been called to close the business.

Winona.—The Lake Geneva cadets, who were in the Twin Cities on Sunday making a trip to test the practicability of automobiles and wireless telegraphy in warfare, arrived in Winona Tuesday.

Springfield. — William Weckworth, who lived five miles form Springfield, hung himself with a rope in his haymow. His wife died three years ago and five children are left orphans. No reason is known for his act.

Bemidji.—The site which Bemidji will offer the normal school board will include the strip of land projecting into Lake Bemidji and known as Diamond point. The property is owned by A. A. White of St. Paul, who discussed the proposition with the Commercial club members. The property desired is a strip of about twenty-five acres on the shores of Lake Bemidji, with a gradual slope toward the beach. The spot is ideal, and has always been considered Bemidji's most choice water front property.

Little Falls. — Delegates from the Park Region district G. A. R. and W. R. C., held their eleventh annual encampment here last week. The Park Region Drum corps of Staples and Little Falls band were on hand to greet the veterans as they arrived. The speakers of the day were Major F. C. Johnson of this city, H. C. Taylor of Long Prairie, department commander; O. A. Lende of Canby, state senator; D. T. Jenkins of Staples, Mrs. Carrie Nelson of Minneapolis, deparment president, and Mrs. Ada Miller of Fergus Falls.

St. Paul observed the quietest independence day it has celebrated in years. The cannon cracker, the mud can and other noise-producing affairs were an almost unknown quantity. This was due to the activity of the police and a sane Fourth celebration for the children under the direction of the Commercial club. In the morning 3,000 children gathered in the vicinity of the Elk's club at Rice Park and, led by two bands and the city officials in automobiles, marched to Harriet island, where they had the time of their lives.

Minneapolis.—The nineteenth annual Northwestern conference will be held August 17 to 31 at the First Baptist church under the direction of the Northwestern Bible and Missionary Training school. The principal speaker will be Rev. J. L. White, of Macon, Ga., who will speak twice daily. His theme will be "The Christ of John in the Revelation." Rev. W. M. Vines of Charlotte, N. C., Rev. Luther Little of Seattle, and Rev. William Spurgeon of London, a coucin of the late Charles Spurgeon, will be other speakers. Rev. W. B. Riley, pastor of the church, will give 10 addresses on Zachariah's "Apocalypse."

Winona. — Former Congressman Tawney of this city, implicated in a remote degree in the confessions of Colonel M. M. Mulhall, for ten years a lobbyist and field worker for the National Association of Manufacturers, declares he never had any communication with the lobby or with anyone connected with the association. He was, however, active in securing the defeat in the sixty-first congress of the same proviso adopted by the last congress as an amendment to the sundry civil bill which President Taft vetoed, exempting labor organizations and their members from prosecution with funds appropriated for the enforcement of the Sherman anti-trust law and which President Wilson did not veto, although he disapproved of the provision.

Tower. — Tower celebrated the Fourth. Rev. Mr. Peterson was the speaker of the day. The usual program of sports was presented and the city was filled with guests. A ball game between the Tower team and the Ohios of Virginia for a purse of $50 was a feature.

Winona.—Joseph F. Woleber, 42 years old, committed suicide by shooting himself through the head with a shotgun. He was struck on the head recently with a piece of iron while employed in a foundry. It is believed the blow affected his mind. A wife and two children survive.

St. Cloud.—Claude Meyers of St. Joseph was the victim of a peculiar accident when driving his automobile the other day. The machine hit a hole in the road, throwing him from his seat against the wind shield and breaking his nose.

Madelia.—The crew of a freight train discovered that a switch in the local yards had been tampered with and flagged the next train, which was passenger train No. [illegible] in time to prevent what might have been a serious wreck. Investigation showed that [illegible]

AMONG THE HEAVY EATERS

Remarkable Gastronomic Feats That Are Hardly Believable, Though All Authenticated.

Champion Fried Egg Eater of the Berkshires was the title of Louis Morris of Housatonic, Mass., before he entered in a recent egg eating contest on a wager. He had a record of 22 eggs and the wager was on his contention that he could easily increase this record to 25. When he reached the seventeenth egg he was seized with an attack of acute indigestion and a doctor worked over him for an hour before he was restored to consciousness and pronounced out of danger. He also has a record for 54 ears of green corn.

At the beefsteak dinners of many political clubs astounding records are made in the consumption of viands. Some of those who take part think nothing of eating 10 and 12 pounds of meat at the sitting. At one clambake held at College Point recently eight baskets of food were eaten by one diner. This basket included a leg and a breast of a chicken, 25 clams, two ears of corn and four potatoes. This record is declared accurate and authentic and is posted up in an East side club room.

A Rhode Island farmer had a record of half a bushel of walnuts, of which he was extraordinarily fond. He used half a bag of salt while eating them. A New Jersey blacksmith on a recent wager ate nearly a peck and a half of cherries. He said he could go on eating "forever," as he put it, but those who witnessed his feat declared they had seen enough to prove the eater a wonder. A Chicago man inordinately fond of mush and milk, lived on it for a week not long ago, eating four great bowlfuls of it three times a day.

ECZEMA BURNED AND ITCHED

203 Walnut St., Hillsboro, Ill.—"My child had a breaking out on the lower limbs which developed into eczema. The eczema began with pimples which contained yellow corruption and from the child's clothing they were greatly irritated. They seemed to burn, which made the child scratch them, resulting in a mass of open places. They made her so cross and fretful that it was impossible to keep her quiet. They caused her to lose much sleep and she was constantly tormented by severe itching and burning.

"I tried several well-known remedies, but got no relief until I got a sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment, which did so much good that I got a large quantity that cured her in ten days after she had been affected for two months." (Signed) Mrs. Edith Schwartz, Feb. 28, 1913.

As Mrs. Belmont Saw It.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, meeting Winston Churchill in London just before the young first lord departed on his Mediterranean cruise, scored well in an exchange of banter.

"At least, Mrs. Belmont," said Mr. Churchill, apropos, of course, of votes for women—"at least you'll admit that man has a great deal more will than woman?"

"Not at all," Mrs. Belmont replied, "he's only got more won't."

Two Cent Rate July 28

No longer will it be necessary for the general public to produce three cents to ride over a mile of Minnesota railroad, but Mr. G. P. can now stride into the railroad and plank down the necessary two cents which the supreme court has said is sufficient to enable the owners of the roads to enjoy three meals a day and paying expenses, not to mention such a small item as a reasonable dividend.

The date for the change has been set for July 28 instead of July 10 as was first supposed.

It is expected that the lower rates will greatly increase the passenger business, such as was noticed when the schedule went into effect 4 years ago.

"SOONER" LOSES TO HOMESTEADER

As Result of Dispute Over Land One Is Shot, Other Indicted.

The interior department has rendered a decision in which the decision of the Crookston land office and the commissioner of the general land office is sustained in upholding the entry of James Hurby on a quarter section of land in Pennington county.

Under instructions from the department, issued March 3, 1911, the land involved was opened to settlement April 15, 1911, and to entry May 15, with an express provision that no rights would be gained by settlement prior to April 15.

On April 18 James Kotlan filed a homestead application on the land, which application was rejected by the Crookston land officials, Kotlan appealing.

On May 15 James Hurby made entry on the land, which was accepted. On the same day Kotlan filed notice of contest.

In connection with the dispute over the land it is alleged that Kotlan shot Hurby, the grand Jury returning an indictment against Kotlan who is now awaiting trial at the next term of court.

WANT NEW BRIDGE OVER CLEARWATER

FAVORABLE ACTION EXPECTED.

At a meeting of the board of county commissioners held at Red Lake Falls this week a petition asking for the establishment of a bridge across the Clearwater river about 7 miles northeast of here, was presented. The commissioners laid the matter over until the meeting next Monday when it will again be considered. The commissioners were in favor of the bridge but at present there are no funds available to pay the cost of same.

However it is expected that next Monday the matter will be satisfactorily arranged.

Monday the petition to have several of the ditches east of here repaired will also be considered. The engineer appointed has already made his report. These ditches have been gradually filling up, till at present in some places water will not flow through them. It is likely steps will be taken to repair them.

SUNDAY GAME TO BE FOR "BLUD"

Old Rivals to Clash Here Sunday in Deciding Game

Believe us, Bo, there will be some scrap on the local ball grounds next Sunday when the Brooks and the St. Hilaire teams line up for the deciding game. Each team has a game to its credit, and to decide the supremacy, Plummer has been chosen as mutual territory on which to fight it out. It is the avowed intention of each to return with the scalps of the other dangling from their belt, so for pure unadulterated joy and an opportunity to witness a good exhibition of the national game, local fans are decidedly in luck.

May the weather man favor us with an excellent day and may the best team win.

Other cities that offered cites were Cass Lake, Clear Brook, Erikine and Park Rapids.

Why Thunder Sours Milk.

It is universally known that milk turns sour after a thunder storm. This has been attributed to the large quantity of ozone which is liberated by the electricity in the air. The experiments of Professor Trillat in Paris do not confirm that theory. He has established that atmospheric depressions cause putrefying gases—normal quiescent—to rise to the surface of certain substances, and in support of his theory points out that odors of all sorts are more permeating after storms. These atmospheric depressions accelerate the decomposition of gases and tend to liberate them. Hence lactic ferment is produced. Professor Trillat has made many experiments with diverse substances under varying pressures and has observed that when the barometer is lowest (during storms, etc.) the decomposition of gases is most rapid.

The "Workin' Stiff."

"He is one of the army of unskilled laborers easily mobilized on any of a variety of industrial frontiers," write Charles Phelps Cushing and Arthur Killick in the issue of Harper's Weekly—"an army estimated now at half a million, content to do the hardest sorts of toil at wages so low that not more than one man in a thousand saves anything." When he gets into trouble the "stiff's" hands are his best credentials. "Look at his hands, sergeant," the magistrate says. "The police court bailiff feels their palms and makes one of two permissible answers, 'Soft as a baby's, yer Honor!' or 'Hard as nails, sir.'"

CROP CONDITIONS IN WESTERN CANADA

ARE THE MOST PROMISING FOR MANY YEARS.

The deepest interest is attached to the condition of the grain crops in Western Canada, especially among the thousands in the United States who are financially interested in lands in that country. This interest is fully as great among those who have friends there following farming and the growing of grain.

The reports from Canadian government officials convey the information that the area under crop this year in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will probably be no greater than that of last year. Last fall the weather was such that there was not as much fall plowing as had been hoped for. The getting ready of land this spring made a considerable portion of the grain late in seeding. Notwithstanding this, wheat, oats, barley and flax were got in in good shape, although from a week to ten days later than last year. On the 27th of June the reports regarding crop conditions generally in Western Canada were: "Abundant sunshine with timely and copious rain throughout Western Canada gives every assurance of generous harvest. Climatic conditions in recent weeks have been absolutely ideal. Western correspondents agree in predicting every indication of a bumper crop under favorable conditions. Wheat should be headed out in Manitoba between July 10th and 12th, and in Saskatchewan and Alberta from 15th to 17th. The oat crop is looking well, although late and rather short in straw."

This is followed by a report July 5th: "Crop conditions continue in same satisfactory condition as last week. Plenteous rains have fallen all over prairie provinces, followed by general warm and splendid growing weather. Experts agree sufficient moisture for many weeks, while crop is ten to fifteen days late, prospects are extremely favorable and conditional upon reasonable weather for next four weeks. Splendid western crop is assured."

There is, therefore, the best reason to anticipate most magnificent crops throughout Western Canada in 1913.—Advertisement.

Remembered Thrifty Teachings.

A woman who was left to the task of bringing up two small children began early to train them to consider necessities above all else. They could always look back to a home brimming with comfort, although the furnishings were simple epough. They had warm clothing in winter and thin clothing in summer, and as they associated with the children of wealth they must have been thoroughly presentable. Habits are strong, but sometimes they can be broken. The son was the first to go out into the big world and he easily learned new ways of spending. The daughter preserved her sensible, thrifty ways to the last and she is drilling them into children of her own by teaching the value of a bank book in addition to what she learned in her own childhood.

ECZEMA IN WATER BLISTERS

748 Congress St., Chicago, Ill.—"My eczema broke out like little water blisters. Each one was full of water and would itch until I would scratch it open, then the water would run out and it would get sore. I first got the eczema on the back of the hand and I scratched it so hard I made it all sore. Then I got it on my legs just above the ankle and above the knee.

"I used what they call ——— and it stopped the itch but it got worse. Then I used ———. In all I had the trouble for about two years. One day I saw the advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment in the paper. I wrote for a sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and I tried them and then bought some more. Cuticura Soap and Ointment left my sores nice and smooth. I used them for six weeks, and am now cured; the eczema left no marks." (Signed) F. W. Horrisch, Oct. 19, 1912.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

STATE BANKERS IN ANNUAL MEETING

CURRENCY BILL BEFORE CONGRESS IS SUBJECT OF DISCUSSION.

RESOLUTIONS ARE ADOPTED

Important Views Are Embodied In These—Farming Development Is Not Slighted by State Financiers—New Officers.

Duluth.—Reflecting a spirit of constructive criticism, the Minnesota Bankers' association indorsed the work of the committee of the American Bankers' association that went to Washington and succeeded in having changes made in the original draft of the currency bill, and make it clear that while the Minnesota association is irrevocably opposed to the bill as it stands, it is in sympathy with the effort for currency reform and not disposed to take an attitude of hostility while the measure is still in the formative process.

Gist of Resolutions.

The resolutions as adopted provide for the increase of the membership of the committee on agricultural development and education to one from each of the ten congressional districts and one at large. Each district member is to name four other bankers in his district to act with him as a subcommittee. The resolutions also provide for sending Joseph Chapman, of Minneapolis, and three other members of the agricultural development and education committee, to Kansas City to a national agricultural conference Aug. 26 and 27; for the support of the one-cent postage bills for ordinary letters, now pending in the house and senate; for indorsement of Joseph Chapman for vice president at large of the American Bankers' association.

"We recognize that a proper national currency and banking law is imperatively needed. Resolved, That we approve the earnest endeavors of congress to enact such a law, and believe that for the welfare of the country a proper act be put into effect at the earliest moment consistent with the due consideration of the subject.

Commend National Association.

"Resolved, That this association commends the efforts and proposals of the currency committee of the American Bankers' association for the improvement of the terms and provisions of the banking and currency bill lately introduced in congress, and that the executive council of this association be requested to carefully consider the bill and all amendments thereto, particularly with respect to their application to, and effect upon, the commercial and agricultural conditions in Minnesota and the northwest, and to submit their recommendations to the members of congress from this state."

New Officers Elected.

The new officials of the Bankers' association are: President, J. S. Pomeroy, Minneapolis, succeeds D. C. Armstrong, Albert Lea; vice president, D. D. Willard, Mankato, succeeds J. S. Pomeroy; treasurer, J. J. Ponsford, Watertown, succeeds A. G. Wedge, Jr., Bemidji; secretary, George H. Richards, Minneapolis, reelected. For vice president of the American Bankers' association for Minnesota, W. A. Shaw, of Clear Water, succeeds W. H. Putnam, of Red Wing. For member of the executive committee of the American Bankers' association, J. B. Galernault, of Aitkin, succeeds George F. Orde, of Minneapolis.

Aged Indigent Refused Aid.

Winona.—Crippled and barely able to walk with the use of crutches, Gus Weber has appealed in vain for several weeks in different counties of the state to be taken to a poorhouse, but he is declared ineligible. Weber came from Germany four years ago and has resided in no place long enough to become a public charge. The man's feet were frozen and physicians have told him that proper care and rest alone will cure them. Failing in Minnesota to be taken into a poor house, the aged man went to Wisconsin, but there he was equally unsuccessful, and so has returned to Winona.

Will Expend $20,000,000.

Duluth, July 10.—President Jas. A. Farrell of the United States Steel corporation and his party of steel men and their wives returned from an inspection of the corporation's mine leases on the Minnesota ranges. An inspection of the new steel mills at Gary, Minn., outside of Duluth, was made by the party Monday. "We will expend $20,000,000 altogether in the Duluth plant," said Mr. Farrell. President Farrell and party left for Toledo today on the Pittsburg Line freighter James A. Farrell.

Commence Cutting Rye.

Mankato.—The cutting of winter rye has commenced in defferent parts of the county and the yield promises to be above the average. Barley is also ripening and hay cutting is in full progress. All crops are doing finely.

RAGTIME NOT SO HOPELESS

May Yet Become the Real American Music, Is the View of Some of the Teachers.

Duluth.—That ragtime may yet become the real American music, and that there is hope for its reformation, was the concensus of opinion of many Minnesota music teachers assembled here for their annual convention.

"Ragtime contains one prime requisite of music—rhythm," said Mrs. Agnes Fryberger of Minneapolis. "It has long been associated with vulgar words, but there is no reason why this cannot be altered. Syncopation is recognized by musicians. The rhythm is what makes ragtime appeal to the uneducated musical ear and accounts for its popularity."

"The public in its opinion about music usually knows only two expressions; to the masses, music is either pretty or not pretty," said Heinrich Hoevel, Minneapolis, president of the association.

"The different emotions expressed so wonderfully by the great composers pass unnoticed. It should be our aim to awaken the sensibility of the pupil to the fact that there is something more in music than nice tunes and pretty melodies."

DEMANDS 8-HOUR WORK DAY

Government Disturbs Promoters Who Have Figured Contracts on Ten-Hour Basis.

Minneapolis.—Promoters of the Minnesota valley scenic highway, which the United States governemnt will aid with $25,000, struck a serious snag and held an extended conference over the situation at the state capitol. All estimates for the road have been figured on the basis of a ten-hour workday, but Paul D. Sargent, acting director of highways in the federal service, has ruled that contracts must specify an eight-hour day, in compliance with the federal statute of 1892.

A telegram was sent to Mr. Sargent last evening by C. Louis Weeks, assistant attorney general, asking him to waive this requirement on the ground that the work is being done by the state and local communities, merely under government aid. A reply received said the provision cannot be waived.

MANKATO WINS OVER R. R.

Milwaukee Withdraws From Action for Possession of Land.

Mankato.—The suit of the city of Mankato against the Milwaukee railway company, involving title to a strip of land fifty feet wide, at the end of the Main street wagon bridge, after being in court two or three years, was this week settled by the railway company withdrawing all claim to the lot.

According to the city's contention, the lot was a part of Exchange street, and the city gave the use of it for the location of an elevator years ago, when there was an agitation for a better market. The elevator burned two years ago, and the city has ever since been trying to get the property in order to open Exchange street further north. The land is worth several thousand dollars.

Special Election Called.

Fergus Falls.—A special election has been called for July 25 to vote on the question of issuing bonds to the amount of $55,000 for the purpose of improving and extending the waterworks system. It is proposed to extend the mains to a new reservoir on the top of a hill in order to reduce the cost of pumping, and to erect a large standpipe on the top of a still higher hill. It is also proposed to put in an improved auxiliary steam plant and to place the system on a meter basis.

ADVERTISED; SECURED A WIFE

Arkansas Woman Comes North to Wed Clarence Rogers of Simpson, Minn.

Rochester. — Clarence Rogers, a young man of Simpson, has demonstrated the value of newspaper advertising. For many months he has longed to enter the matrimonial sea, and not finding in his section one who met his ideal of a wife, he resorted to the last hope, that of newspaper advertising.

In Arkansas a lonely maid, having a similar desire to wed, read the advertisement of the Minnesota man, and quickly responded. Courtship by mail followed, and within a short time the Simpson man "popped" the question by mail. The next train brought the desired answer, and transportation was immediately sent to the bride-to-be.

Miss Ade Rorie arrived in Simpson Tuesday. The prosepective bridegroom eagerly awaited her arrival at the station, a handkerchief in his right hand being the token of identity. Immediately the couple came to Rochester to secure their license and were married by Judge John Brin.

MINNESOTA PROSPECTS GOOD

Bumper Crop of Small Grains Is Prediction, According to Rail Report.

St. Paul.—Crop conditions in Minnesota at present give promise of a great harvest, although it is too early to make a comparison at this time with the yield of last year.

Reports received daily by the local railroads from points on their lines in the state show a large hay crop, and prospects of a bumper yield in the small grains. The recent hot weather, with late rains, was necessary to save the wheat and oats from falling below an average yield.

Other sections of the Northwest are not faring so well as Minnesota, as reports from the Dakotas show that the rainfall has not been sufficient, the small grain is drying up.

Farm employment agencies in the city are sending out men every day to Minnesota fields, but the demand for labor farther west is light.

Quarrel Over Girl; One Dying.

Duluth, July 11.—As the result of a love feud which two men are said to have carried with them from Italy, John Scotina is dying at a local hospital and the police are seeking for "Tony" Carusa, accused of doing the shooting. The men met on a crowded street and after a brief struggle engaged in a revolver duel, a number of pedestrians being imperilled by the shots. Italians here declare that the trouble first started in Italy years ago over a girl.

Auto Tries to Enter Bank.

Rochester.—C. F. Fisher of this city had a narrow escape from serious injuries when, cranking an auto, the machine started to run over him. It is believed the brake was not firmly set. The machine ran over his body and into the Union National bank, doing no damage because of the slow speed. Mr. Fisher escaped with severe bruises.

Rochester Patients Transferred.

Rochester.—The congested condition of the Rochester state hospital was partially relieved on Tuesday by the transfer of eighty patients to the Hastings asylum. Dr. O. V. Heyerdale, first assistant superintendent, had charge of the patients and was assisted by eight nurses of the state staff. Private coaches were used for the transfer and the trip to Hastings was made without difficulty.

The boy was playing in the tall grass, and unseen by his father, who ran the mower upon him and cut off one leg and nearly severed the other. The child was rushed to a hospital at Gaylord.

Stone Cutter Is Killed.

He was 56 years of age and had lived in Minneapolis and Minnetonka for narly 20 years. He was a son of Count Wedel-Jralsberg, the last person in Norway to bear a title of nobility, and would have been baron, had titles not been abolished.

ONE FATHER HAD OVERLOOKED

Small Girl Will Long Have Suspicion That Her Beloved Daddy Was Shirking Work.

"Father," said little Ruth, appealingly, "why don't you stay at home to work as other little girls' fathers do?"

Father, who, as the business manager of a great corporation, has to travel extensively, smiled fondly at his little daughter. "I'd love to, Ruth," he answered, "but you see I have to earn a lot of money to take care of my little girl and her mother, and I can't get enough work to do here at home."

"Oh, father," cried Ruth, reprovingly, "I don't believe you've ever tried hard enough! Why, I have seen a sign out, 'Man Wanted,' lots and lots of times. There was one over in front of our grocery store this very morning."—Youth's Companion.

How Students Got Fresh Eggs.

An Indianapolis traveling man witnessed a novel feast by students of De Pauw university at Greencastle the other day. He said he was at a station in that city, and standing near was a poultry car loaded with live poultry. The hens were cackling and "carrying on" at a great rate. A crowd of students stood around the car, and whenever a hen produced a nice, new, fresh egg a student reached his arm through the side of the car, seized the egg and made for a nearby store, where he fried it over a gas jet.

"There were at least twenty students around the car," said the traveling man, "and the hens kept them busy all the time I was there. I don't know how many eggs the students got, but it was a busy bunch of hens. Just before my train pulled out I heard one student say to another: 'Gee, I never ate so many eggs in my life!' There was no question about the freshness of the eggs."

Strawberries in Literature.

Dr. William Butler, who died in 1621, is credited with the origin of the remark about the strawberry. "The Lord might have made a better berry than the strawberry, but he never did." Thomas Fuller, the English divine and historian, in his "History of the Worthies of England," that has delighted readers of more than two centuries, styled Dr. Butler the Aesculapius of his age. Izaak Walton in "The Complete Angler," said: "We may say of angling as Dr. Boteler said of strawberries, "Doubtless God could have made a better berry, but doubtless God never did;' and so if I might be judge, God never did make a more calm, quiet, innocent recreation than angling."

Too Far in the Future.

Of a favorite child comrade Mr. Clemens related that they once conversed together gravely considering the little girl's plans for rearing her future children, of whom there were to be two—a boy and a girl. The girl, naturally enough, was to be named after her mother. Asked what would be the boy's name, the child answered, "a reproachful look in her brown eyes":

"Why, Mr. Clemens, how can I know what I shall call him until I know his father's name?"

The girl who fully intends to marry her ideal usually compromises.

The best tradition requires that whenever a lightning calculator tells how many seconds there were in the life of Methuselah some one must shout: "Wrong! You've muffed it this time. Peculiar Pets.

An English major with a penchant for entomology asserts that the hornet is "a gentle, inoffensive creature, very suitable for a pet." This reminds one of an incident in the life of the late Lord Avebury. Traveling one day on a railway train with a pet wasp in his pocket, he hurriedly thrust his hand into his pocket to get his ticket, and the wasp stung him. He did not blame the wasp, however, as his hurried action had frightened the creature. Wasps have frequently become pets, but the major is said to be the first to turn the hornet into one.

Domestic Breadmaking.

With a fear of scarcity of bread through shortage of flour, one recalls Cobbett's view of the woman in the house who, provided with materials, still lacked a loaf. "As to the art of making bread," he wrote, "it would be shocking indeed if that had to be taught by the means of books. Every woman, high or low, ought to know how to make bread; if she do not she is a mere burden upon the community. Yet it is but too true that many women know nothing of the making of bread . . . Even servant women in abundance appear to think that loaves made by the baker are things of their pure creation—things, too, in which no one else can participate. Now, is not this an enormous evil." Cobbett's words, however, failed to touch the kitchen, for the "enormous evil" still exists!

FOUND A WAY
To Be Clear of Coffee Troubles.

"Husband and myself both had the coffee habit, and finally his stomach and kidneys got in such a bad condition that he was compelled to give up a good position that he had held for years. He was too sick to work. His skin was yellow, and there didn't seem to be an organ in his body that was not affected.

"I told him I felt sure his sickness was due to coffee and after some discussion he decided to give it up.

"It was a struggle, because of the powerful habit. One day we heard about Postum and concluded to try it and then it was easy to leave off coffee.

"His fearful headaches grew less frequent, his complexion began to clear, kidneys grew better until at last he was a new man altogether, as a result of leaving off coffee and taking up Postum. Then I began to drink it too.

"Although I was never as bad off as my husband, I was always very nervous and never at any time very strong, only weighing 95 lbs. before I began to use Postum. Now I weigh 115 lbs. and can do as much work as anyone my size, I think."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Write for booklet, "The Road to Wellville."

Postum comes in two forms.

Regular Postum (must be boiled.)

Instant Postum doesn't require boiling, but is prepared instantly by stirring a level teaspoonful in an ordinary cup of hot water, which makes it right for most persons.

A big cup requires more and some people who like strong things put in a heaping spoonful and temper it with a large supply of cream.

Experiment until you know the amount that pleases your palate and have it served that way in the future.

80,000 AWAITING ORDER TO STRIKE

TRAINMEN ON 45 DIFFERENT EASTERN ROADS WOULD BE AFFECTED.

WHITE HOUSE CONFERENCE ON

To Await White House Decision of Their Deliberations There—Every Employe East of Mississippi Involved.

New York, July 15.—Whether a strike of upwards of 80,000 conductors and trainmen on 45 eastern railroads shall be declared within the next few days depends upon whether the railroads recede from their present position and withdraw from their refusal to arbitrate the wage and other differences between the companies and men.

This declaration was made in statements by the men's representatives after the grievance committees from the roads, gathered here in conference, had ratified the strike vote of the men recently taken and had authorized A. B. Garretson, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Conductors, and W. G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, to issue the formal strike order to their respective organizations.

Up to the Roads.

Peace prospects centered upon the attitude of the roads, the men declared, with the possibility that a way out of the deadlock would be supplied by the conference in Washington, where amendments to the Erdman law, under which previous disputes between the roads and their men have been arbitrated, will be considered with a view to pressing their speedy passage upon congress.

The general committee of the two organizations authorized Messrs. Garretson and Lee to delay the strike order long enough to permit them to attend the Washington conference between President Wilson, representatives of the railroads, and their employes, and prominent men. The men's representatives will take part in the conference in the hope that it will result in the passage of Erdman law amendments, increasing from three to six, or more, the number of arbitrators authorized to act in disputes between railroads and their employes.

Presidents Garretson and Lee are in Washington. Shortly before their departure they issued a statement explaining the action of the committee yesterday and their attitude with regard to the Washington conference.

Statement of Men.

"The committees of the various roads, acting independently of each other," says the statement, "unanimously ratified the strike vote of the membership on their respective lines and empowered the executive officers of the organization to fix the date for retirement from the service, should the attitude of the managers' committee remain unchanged, and after taking such action returned to their homes.

"With the purpose in view that no reasonable means for effecting a friendly settlement should be neglected by us, they authorized sufficient delay in making the strike order effective to permit the undersigned to attend the conference arranged for tomorrow in Washington with President Wilson, called for the consideration of the amendments to the Erdman act as embodied in the Newlands bill, in the hope that if such amendments were made immediately effective it might induce the companies to abandon the position heretofore maintained by the conference committee of managers and lead to a withdrawal of their former refusal of our proposition to arbitrate under the provisions of the federal law."

Roads Are Notified.

The railroads' were notified today of the action of the men's committee in ratifying the strike order. A formal letter was sent to the roads and at the same time a copy was made public. The labor leaders declared emphatically that no further overtures would be made to the roads.

"Our position is clear," said Mr. Garretson. "We offered arbitration weeks ago, but our offer was rejected."

As to whether the engineers and firemen would join in a sympathetic strike, Mr. Garretson said:

"The engineers and firemen are not bound to go out on strike with us. On the contrary, they are bound to remain at their positions until such time as they think their lives and the lives of their passengers are endangered by having inexperienced men on the train crews."

Engineer Dies Under Engine.

Jackson, Mich., July 15.—Three men were killed and a dozen persons were injured in two railroad wrecks on the Michigan Central near here. J. Martin, engineer, of Detroit, was buried under his engine and crushed to death when a train of empty baggage cars, running from Chicago to Buffalo, left the rails. His fireman, Clayton F. Cole, was terribly scalded to death. A few hours later, two passenger trains on the Grand Rapids division collided head-on on the Grand river bridge. One was killed.

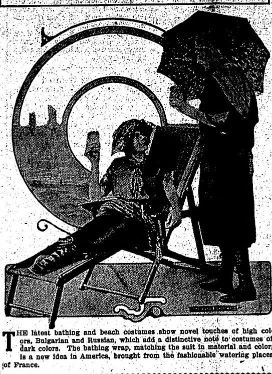
HIGHLY COLORED BATHING SUITS



THE latest bathing and beach costumes show novel touches of high colors, Bulgarian and Russian, which add a distinctive note to costumes of dark colors. The bathing wrap, matching the suit in material and color, is a new idea in America, brought from the fashionable watering places of France.

LOOSENESS IS FIRST ORDER

Lines of Regulation Russian Blouse Not Followed When the Material Is Laced.

The lines of the regulation Russian blouse are not followed out when the material is laced, no matter whether it is heavy or thin. The excessive looseness and drag of the material is emphasized in lace even more than in cloth because all the garments above the waist are continually made in this fashion, although there is an effort to bring back the round, tight bodice of Victorian days.

The neck should be cut high at the back and low in front, if it is possible for a woman to stand this kind of exposure in the afternoon hours. It can be as low as she wishes as far as fashion is concerned, for it seems to put no limit on the daytime decolletage. This makes dressing easier for the woman of moderate means who wishes to wear one gown before and after candle light without the trouble of adding a guimp, for guimps have a way of riding up even when made in the best regulated manner, and under any kind of a boned foundation they are most satisfactory.

Not that the lace Russian blouse should have a boned lining unless one's figure demands it, for we have arrived at the most neglige type of clothes that women have worn since the Grecian era; even if there is a boned lining and a corset below the sagging, drooping, slipping off waist, neither of the supports must be visible.

Rose Drops.

Put in a small granite saucepan three and a half ounces of sugar (sifted granulated sugar is best), add a tablespoonful of water, four drops of cochineal, and four drops of essence of rose. Stand over the fire, and as the mixture begins to melt stir gently for two or three minutes and then take from the fire. Have ready large sheets of oiled paper, and pour the sirup in drops about the size of large peas in rows on the paper. As soon as they are firm and hard, remove the drops with a limber knife or spatula, place on a sieve in a warm place until thoroughly dry, then pack in glass jars, or tight boxes.

Lingerie Hat.

The popularity of the embroidered linen hat is well deserved, and a flowered model is especially attractive. The design on the crown is a wreath of forget-me-nots done with the solid stitch, the center of which is punched work.

About the brim at intervals are embroidered motifs of forget-me-nots and punched work combined. The extreme edge of the brim is scalloped and buttonhole-stitched. Beneath this is sewn a frill of lace. A wreath of tiny flowers encircles the crown and a rosette and streamer of pale blue ribbon adorns each side. Why not make one?

Supports for Flowers.

Did you ever fit a piece of pasteboard into the top of a tall vase to support a tall, graceful flower? It would show too plainly to be of use in a glass vase, other than the smoky glass, says Harper's Bazar. The lead supports to be used in shallow bowls or jars, Japanese fashion, are invaluable. You will like them for tulips, daffodils, or iris. It matters little whether they are beautiful in themselves or not, since the flowers usually conceal them.

Flowers in Finger Bowls.

It is a pretty touch to have a flower like those used for the decoration of the table floating in each of the finger bowls. A bit of old-fashioned herbage, which sometimes takes the place of the time-honored rose geranium leaf, is a spring of lemon verbena.

Flowers in Bags.

Take paper bags for flowers when you go out into the fields or woods to pick them, says the Ladies' Home Journal. Use a number of small bags and keep them tightly closed. Wild flowers will not wilt when gathered and carried in this way.

DRAPERIES OF THE MOMENT

Details to Which Woman Must Conform If She Would Be Considered "Smart."

Long lines are emphasized in the most successful draperies, giving height and dignity to wearers.

In skirts the fullness is kept either decidedly up around the hips, with a narrow lower line, or down around the feet.

Slashed skirts have their fullness draped up and caught under clusters of flowers or held in under straps of material or beads.

Skirts with tunics or overskirts frequently have them plaited along the central front line, held flat under stitched bands. This gives a decidedly oriental effect.

Draped skirts that show an upward line at the bottom of the dress have inset panels of accordion plaited chiffon.

Net and lace on bodices are draped into the "scarf sleeve," into butterfly bows and in graceful, loose lines that are attached to train around the arm by means of loops or hung in loops across the gown as a tulle scarf might be held.

Lines of chiffon and silk roses are garlanded or draped over sleeves and corsage of bodices.

Tulle figures largely in the overdrapery on evening gowns.

The main rule in drapery is to drape on the figure with an unlimited amount of goods and an eye to "la linge"—that most important feature in the spring gown.

When Sending Wedding Gift.

Arrange as neatly as possible in a plain white box, unless the gift is contained in a fine box of its own, and write a friendly note and mention the name of the article sent. It assists the recipient in knowing just who sent certain gifts, and also in identifying the gifts, as often it is a mystery to know whether a certain article is a fish fork or a can opener.

Silk and Linen.

Silk coats with linen skirts are popular in Paris. These jackets are often of figured silks. The weave of the linen used is open and soft and is known by the name of crash. The coat is one of those little basque effects reaching the top of the hips. Only the youthful figure should attempt this type of costume.

Fashions in Waists.

Women are beginning to rebel, just the least bit, in regard to the large waists that fashion decrees that they shall have. There may be a reversion before long to the hour-glass waists, but it will probably be only the young women who adopt it as the present [illegible]

Even in the Child Mind.

This incident was related by Mark Twain with great glee about a certain little girl friend who "shone as an authoress." One day she handed her devoted sympathizer the sheets of a story which read thus:

"A man was seated in a chair by the fireside brooding over his troubles. He was sad because his wife was dead. Suddenly a specter appeared before him, and it was his wife. She said: 'Dear, I could not bear to see you so sad and discontented, so I have come to comfort you. You must not be sad. You must be bright and happy. It was best that I should leave you when I did, because I was going to get a divorce.'"

HOW COCA COLA REFRESHES.

The remarkable success which has attended the sale of Coca-Cola has been explained in many different ways. Some have attributed it to "good advertising;" others to "efficient management," others, to its "delicious flavor" and still others to the fact that it was the first in the field of "trade-marked" soft drinks.

In this connection, the opinion of a manufacturing chemist who has analyzed Coca-Cola and studied its history for many years, will prove interesting. He attributes the popularity of the drink in large part to its quality of refreshing both mind and body without producing any subsequent depression. He points out the fact that the chemical composition of Coca-Cola is practically identical with that of coffee and tea (with sugar added) the only material difference being the absence of tannic acid from Coca-Cola. He points to the laboratory experiments of Dr. Hollingworth of Columbia University and of Dr. H. C. Wood, Jr. of Philadelphia which prove conclusively that the caffeine-containing beverages (coffee, tea, Coca-Cola, etc.) relieve mental and muscular fatigue by rendering the nerves and muscles more responsive to the will, thus diminishing the resistance produced by fatigue. These experiments also demonstrate the fact that the caffeine group of beverages differ from the stimulants in that the use of the latter is followed by a period of depression which calls for more stimulation, thus resulting in the formation of a "habit."—Adv.

Nye's Humorous Compliment.

Bill Nye was once introduced to Wagner, the composer. In "Then and Now" Dean Hole relates: "Nye, the American humorist, brilliant as the best, whose comedy never fails to charm, and whose tragic death I shall never cease to mourn, told me that when he met Wagner he said to him, 'Your music is beyond my comprehension, but I always feel sure when I hear it that it is really much better than it sounds.'"

REALLY CLEVER OF JOHNNY

Unfortunate Mr. Smith Had to Join in the Laugh That Followed Diagnosis of Small Boy.

Reference being made at a banquet some time since to the wonderful sayings of the youngsters, Gov. Ben W. Hooper of Tennessee was reminded of the innocent remark of a little Nashville boy.

One afternoon, the governor said, the little boy returned from school complaining that he had a stomach ache. His mother explained that the ache was due to the fact that his stomach was empty, and that he would feel better if he had something in it.

Two evenings later a young man called to see little Johnny's sweet sister. Sitting in the parlor, waiting for the family to retire, the young man remarked that he had a headache.

"I know what's the matter with it, Mr. Smith!" exclaimed Johnny, with great promptness.

"Do you really, Johnny?" indulgently smiled Mr. Smith.

"Yes," was the startling explanation of Johnny. "It's empty. You'd feel better if you had something in it."

What She Wanted.

One day in the spring the orphans from the asylum were taken in motor cars out to the park. A society woman, accompanied by her stylish little daughter, was driving through the park in a big limousine car. They stopped and watched the procession of little orphans, and the mother explained that the little boys and girls had no homes and no fathers or mothers.

After she had finished she discovered that her little daughter was almost crying, and her eyes were filled with tears.

"Why, what's the matter, dearest?" she asked.

"Oh, mother, was the sobbing reply, "I want to be an orphan. Can I?"—Harper's Monthly.

Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am in good health now. I am all over the Change of Life and cannot praise your Vegetable Compound too highly. Every woman should take it at that time. I recommend it to both old and young for female troubles." — Mrs. EMILY SUMMERSGILL, Swarthmore, Pa.

Baltimore, Md. — "My troubles began with the loss of a child, and I had hemorrhages for four months. The doctors said an operation was necessary, but I dreaded it and decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The medicine has made me a well woman and I feel strong and do my own work." — Mrs. J. R. PICKING, 1260 Sargent St., Baltimore, Md.

Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, is it not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering in a like manner?

Fruits and Vegetables From July to June
—Thanks to Parowax

Preserve all the fresh fruits and vegetables you like—now, while they are plentiful and cheap. Seal them with Parowax and they are bound to keep. Parowax will never fail you.

Think what you will save when winter comes! Think how much better "table" you can set—how your family will devour your own home-canned vegetables, preserves and jellies.

Parowax

is used as indicated in sealing jars, bottles and glasses. It's about the easiest, simplest work one can imagine. But so sealed, vegetables and fruits will keep fresh indefinitely.

The Parowax way is very inexpensive. Two of the four handy layers contained in the 16-oz. carton will seal several gallons of fruit. And what's left over will be found invaluable in the laundry. Parowax shavings in the wash boiler clean and whiten clothes, without the rubbing. A little Parowax in the starch imparts a beautiful finish in the ironing.

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Do you desire to get a Free Homestead of 160 ACRES of that well known Wheat Land? The area is becoming more limited but no less valuable.

NEW DISTRICTS have recently been opened up for settlement, and into these railroads are now being built. The day will soon come when there will be no Free Homesteading land left.

A Swift Current, Saskatchewan, farmer writes: "I came on my homestead, March 1906, with about $1,000 worth of horses and machinery, and just $35 in cash. Today I have 900 acres of wheat, 300 acres of oats, and 50 acres of flax." Not bad for six years, but only an instance of what may be done in Western Canada in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta.

LOCALS

Mr. Albert Brekke was up to Thief River Falls, Thursday between trains.

Mrs. John Norby and children returned Monday, from a short visit at Fertile.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Severl left Monday night for Franklin, Minn., where they intend to make their home.

J. C. Parker of Bemidji was here Wednesday on a short business mission. Naturally Mr. Parker is highly elated that the new normal school is to be located at Bemidji.

For the entertainment of the Brooks and St. Hilaire ball teams which play here next Sunday, a dance will be given Saturday night at the city hall. The Red Lake Falls orchestra has been engaged to furnish the music and this feature is enough to insure an enjoyable pastime. Everybody is invited to attend.

An auction sale of farm machinery stock and household goods was held on the Sever Grothe farm 10 miles northeast of here last Saturday and despite the bad weather the attendance was large and the bidding spirited, everything offered being sold. Mr. Grothe will leave in a short time for Montana where he will make his home.

The jury in the case of the state vs. Louis R. Larson, the Erskine druggist, the charge being the illegal sale of liquor, returned a verdict last evening of guilty. Larson was arraigned for sentence before Judge Gossman today, and was fined $100 and costs, which was paid.

The costs in the case amounted to $88.02, making the total amount of the fine and costs $188.02.

A four week's session of the teachers training school for Red Lake and Pennington counties opened at Red Lake Falls last week with an attendance of about 60 pupils. Under the direction of conductor H. E. White the work is progressing in a very satisfactory manner. It is likely that the attendance will be greatly increased.

From now on teachers in the common schools of Minnesota will be required to belong to the reading circle. That is, they will each have to read some book on pedagogy and send in a synopsis of it to the county superintendent of schools. When they do this they will be given a certificate showing that they have read the book. Two reading circle certificates will be necessary for the renewal of a second grade certificate and to renew a first grade certificate. Lists of books to read can be gotten from the county superintendent.

L. L. Clement of St. Paul, United States surveyor, with a party of seven men, left Thief River Falls Wednesday morning for Mud Lake where they will establish the lake's old lines and sub-divide the land which was formerly lake bottom. The lake is 18 miles northeast of Thief River Falls and it is estimated that since is has been drained 5000 acres of rich lake bed have become available for agricultural purposes. The title to the land will be held by the government instead of by the owners of the former shore line.

More County Fair Prizes

The Great Northern Railway company will also give a $50 silver cup at the Red Lake County Fair as a premium to some farmer of the county. We understand that the railroad wants to offer this cup for the best exhibit of clover and hay, but the fair management will try to induce them to give this fine premium for the best hog exhibited at the fair.

The Northern Pacific Railway has likewise offered a $50 silver cup for the best dairy cow exhibited. With these two valuable prizes to compete for there should be excellent exhibits in these lines, and the farmer who wins one of them may well be proud of the fact. The farmer winning either of these cups three years in succession becomes the owner of the same.

The new tariff bill has a clause prohibiting the importation of goods manufactured principally by children under fourteen years of age, or coming from countries which have no child labor laws.

That's wholesome. It will be pretty hard to attack such a provision.

But suppose there were a law prohibiting the exportation, or the admission to interstate commerce, domestic products manufactured principally by children under fourteen or in states having inadequate child labor laws.

Wouldn't that be wholesome, too? Or would that be going too far? And can the law go too far in the protection of humanity from oppression?

THE CREATION OF A NEW TRUST

Centralizing of the Retail Trade in Large Cities of the Country.

By THOS. J. SULLIVAN

Perhaps the two greatest evils that confront the country today are the centralizaion of capital and trade and the congestion of humanity in the large cities. The solution of this stupendous problem is a task far beyond the conception of the human mind.

For years the men who sway the minds and mould the opinions of the public—the magazine and newspaper writers and political leaders—have with all the power and invective at their command pointed out the nefarious practices of what they termed "Big Business" and "the Interests." These titiles were bestowed upon them simply to designate them as concerns which combined their capital for the purpose of illegally controlling either one industry or another.

No man will dispute the fact that residents of small prosperous communities where a general business is carried on, do not enjoy pronounced advantages over the people living in cities where the population is congested.

But the publicists who are holding the "Big Interests" up to the scorn of human kind, should look farther, as there is a "New Big Interest" appearing upon the financial horizon which threatens to eclipse anything which as as yet appeared. We refer to the catalogue and mail order retail traders.

As an example, we lill take one of the large mail order houses of Chicago and a little meditation will show what their business means to the small town. They are capitalized at the enormous amount of $50,000,000, sold at $100 per share, $10,000,000 is Preferred stock and $40,000,000 is Common stock.

We are credibly informed that this concern did $83,000,000 worth of business last year, and paid a dividend of seventeen per cent. Wouldn't these figures appal you? Ought that not be material for the pen of the "Muckraker," or are the magazines silenced by the counting room receipts for advertising?

Where did this $83,000,000 come from? It came from the consumer, everywhere between the waters of the Atlantic and the shores of the Pacific, from people who prefer buying "cheap goods" from a picture book, rather than good goods over the counters of their retail merchants.

And what return does big corporation give the local town for the money that they take out of it? None. They deliver the cheap goods and that is all.

They sell only for cash—if money does not accompany the order, the goods are not shipped. Your financial reverses, sickness or other misfortunes do not concern them.

They pay no taxes in your community, contribute nothing to the support of your schools or churches, not one dollar of their money goes to the aid of local charity, the improvement of your streets or the beautification of your town.

They bear none of the cost of maintaining your police and fire departments.

They are merely leeches in the side of industrial humanity. They drain the small communities of its dollars, and weakened by the loss of its financial strength, the local town totters and falls a victim of the greed of the "New Big Business."

The evil which is bound to follow in the wake of the "New Big Business" ought to furinsh food for thought, and cause the heedless mail order buyer to pause and consider before again offending.

Shortage of Harvest Hands.

Help for the Harvest fields this season is going to be hard to secure. Local organizations must get busy and round up the situation. Rulings of the Interstate Commerce Commission prohibit the railroads from making rate concessions for this class of business. Transient harvest laborers seldom have sufficient funds to carry them from the larger cities to the fields and arrangements will have to be made to advance fares in whole or in part in order to secure reliable and competent help. This has been accomplished by many localities through concerted action taken by leading farmers with their local Board of Trade or Commercial Club. The danger is DELAY in perfecting arrangements. Something should be done at once to avoid troubles experienced in previous years. The railroads are willing to help and do all they can. The Soo line has requested the following information from its agents:

1. Number of men wanted.......
2. When wanted........to.......
3. Wages per day without board $..

It is probable that the extension of the new cement walks to the Soo depot will be commenced in a short time or as soon as the resolution by the village council shall have been passed and published.

PARCELS POST EXTENSION

After August 15, 20 Pounds Can Be Sent by Mail a Distance of 150 Miles

Other Improvements Also Proposed; Zones to be Changed

Plans for the extension, improvement and reduction in rates of the parcel post were announced this week by Postmaster General Burleson.

The changes, which are to become effective on Aug. 15, include an increase from 11 pounds to 20 pounds in the maximum weight of parcels, a material reduction in the postage rates in the first and second zones.

While, for the present, the maximum weight limit of 20 pounds and the reduction in rates will apply only to the first and second zones, from any given postoffice—a distance of about 150 miles—the changes directed today constitute the first long step towards a universal extension of the system and a general reduction in the rates of postage on parcel matter.

The first zone shall include the territory within the local delivery of any office and the first zone rate of postage will apply to all parcel post mail deposited at any office for local delivery or for delivery by city carrier or on rural routes emanating from that postoffice.

The second zone shall include the remainder of what is now the first zone, together with the present second zone, and shall include all the units of area located in whole or in part within a radius of approximately 150 miles from any given postoffice.

The rate of postage on parcels weighing in excess of four ounces in the proposed first zone will be reduced from 5 cents for the first pound and 1 cent for each additional pound or fraction thereof to 5 cents for the first pound and 1 cent for each additional two pounds or fractions thereof, and the rate for the second zone will be reduced from 5 cents for the first pound and 3 cents for each additional pound or 8 cents for the first [illegible] al pound or fraction thereof to 5 cents for the first pound and 1 cent for each additional pound or fraction thereof.

The maximum weight of parcel-post packages will be increased from 11 pounds to 20 pounds, the increase of weight to apply to the first and second zones. No change has been made in the size or form of the packages.

Statistics collected by the department show that one-third of the total number of parcels mailed are handled within the proposed first and second zones, and the postmaster general believes the increase in the weight limit and the reduction of the rates of postage in the first and second zones, as proposed, will benefit greatly more than one-third of the public, and that the producer, the consumer and the local merchant will profit materially by the changes.

The Pioneer wants all the news. If you know an item of local or general interest, send it in.

ELWEL ROAD LAW AID CONSTRUCTION

State Furnishes One-Half, County Quarter and Adjoining Property Rest

Many Roads Planed Under This Law; Ten Years To Pay.

Many counties taking advantage of the Elwell Law, and are constructing highways at a low cost and on easy terms, There is now a fund of $21,600,000.00 in the state of Minnesota for the building of roads, or $200,000 for building roads in each county in the state. Under the Elwell law the state pays half, the county one quarter, and the benefited property owner one quarter. The state, the euonty and the individual benefited have ten years in which to pay their share of the cost of the road. The county is the financial agent and it issues the bonds or certificates of indebtedness of the county, payable in one to ten years for the entire cost of and all roads built within the county limits.

"In proceeding under this law, first enlist the co-operation of the county commissioners by petition or otherwise and make preliminary survey which need not be expensive, by way of a competent engineer, and file this preliminary estimate of the cost of the improvements with the county auditor and a copy of the same should be filed with the state highway commission. The county commissioners should then approve the road, afterwards the highway commission approving same.

After a proper hearing before the county commissioners, and a determination to build the road, viewers are appointed by the county commissioners to spread the assessment of one-quarter of the cost of the road. These viewers are three in number and must be men who are not in any financial way interested in the construction of said road. The assessment may be spread in the discretion of the viewers any distance which is proper and right and where they think there is benefit.

"In northern Minnesota the general plan is to spread the assessments three miles either side of the center of the road, and on a good gravel road, costing $1,500 per mile, the assessment averages 1 cent an acre per year for each of the following ten years and interest on same.

Saints Beat Brooks, 13-11

In a game marked by good, bad and indifferent playing St. Hilaire defeated Brooks here last Sunday in a game which decided the question of supremacy at the national pasture. The score was 13 to 11.

The saints started out like sure winners, and the first few innings scored almost at will, while Brooks could do nothing with the pitching of Dr. H. B. Owens, who however, weakened in the latter part of the game, Brooks scoring freely but the great lead of the Saints could not be overcome.

At Last.

After many postponements the two-cent passenger rate and the reduced freight schedule was put into effect Monday, this rate applies to traffic wholly within the state.

In applying for refunds, receipts for passenger fares an original or duplicate or expense bill, or prepaid bills of lading are declared sufficient evidence to file with the companies. Lacking these, the claimants should make affidavits on forms approved by the state commission and to be obtained from any local agent.

Shortage of Harvest Hands.

Help for the Harvest fields this season is going to be hard to secure. Local organizations must get busy and round up the situation. Rulings of the Interstate Commerce Commission prohibit the railroads from making rate concessions for this class of business. Transient harvest laborers seldom have sufficient funds to carry them from the larger cities to the fields and arrangements will have to be made to advance fares in whole or in part in order to secure reliable and competent help. This has been accomplished by many localities through concerted action taken by leading farmers, with their local Board of Trade or Commercial Club. The danger is DELAY in perfecting arrangements. Something should be done at once to avoid troubles experienced in previous years. The railroads are willing to help and do all they can. The Soo line has requested the following information from its agents:

1. Number of men wanted........
2. When wanted........to........
3. Wages per day without board $...
4. Wages per day with board $....

NICARAGUA TREATY PLAN CONSIDERED

PRESIDENT'S HAND IS SEEN

Belief Is That Bryan's Idea of Protectorate Is Administration Policy—Plan Is Outlined—Desired by the Banana Republics.

Washington, July 22.—Secretary Bryan's plan for the extension of the protecting wing of the United States over Nicaragua broached to the foreign relations committee of the senate Saturday with the approval of President Wilson, has become the absorbing topic of diplomatic and congressional consideration.

While official utterances have not given the purpose of the administration toward Central America, members of the senate evince a growing conviction that the principle to be applied to Nicaragua is one that the Wilson administration would be glad to see extended to the other Central American republics.

Will Not Discuss Plan.

Members of the foreign relations committee who were present when Secretary Bryan unfolded his plan Saturday, continue to assert they cannot discuss the new developments.

The original Nicaraguan treaty has been the subject of open discussion among senators. This compact did not go further, however, than to guarantee the United States exclusive canal rights, and a naval base site in exchange for a payment of $3,000,000 in gold. The latter project, to extend a virtual protectorate over Nicaragua, has assumed the character of an international policy which members of the senate are discussing with emphatic expressions of opinion. It is believed that Senators Bacon, Clarke of Arkansas and some other influential members of the foreign relations committee will take a general attitude of opposition toward the Bryan-Wilson plan; while Senators O'Gorman, Burton and several others are known to favor many of its essential points.

No Guarantee of Debts.

Mr. Bryan has not proposed, it is understood, that the United States shall assume or guarantee the debts of the republic of Nicaragua. The desire of Nicaragua for control of its customs resources by the United States, so that it could secure loans to refund its pressing debt, has been known for some time and met the opposition of the senate foreign relations committee when it came before that body in the form of a definite treaty agreement.

Mr. Bryan's plan calls for a definite statement of policy that would guarantee Nicaragua's independence, would guarantee the control by the United States of that country's dealings with foreign nations, and would put into definite terms the recognized principles of the Monroe doctrine, prohibiting foreign nations from securing a foothold on the American continent.

To Watch Debts.

It is understood, however, that the only agreement on the question of the international finances of Nicaragua would be embraced in that part of the treaty by which Nicaragua would bind itself not to "assume or contract any public debt," in the discharge of which "the ordinary revenues of the nation, after defraying expenses of the government, shall be inadequate."

Under this guarantee of financial stability, it is believed, Nicaragua would find it possible speedily to revise her fiscal system, and secure foreign aid for necessary public development.

The only specific payment to be made by the United States is the $3,000,000 in gold to be paid for exclusive canal rights over the Nicaraguan route, and the naval bases in the bay of Fonseca and on the Great Corn and Little Corn islands in the Caribbean sea.

The Platt Amendment.

The Platt amendment under which the United States became the virtual protector of Cuba, adopted in 1901, received much Democratic support. Mr. Bryan proposes to incorporate almost without change the general language of this provision in the Nicaraguan treaty. Many Democratic senators declare that the policy proposed would be but a strong pronouncement of the attitude already announced by President Wilson as to the maintenance of independence and stability of government in the American republics.

Three Drowned; Many Spectators.

Cincinnati, July 22.—In view of many persons who were standing about the wharf, Fred Salsman, 26 Margaret Mullin, 19, and Anna Hall, 20 were drowned, and the swiftness with which they were carried under a coal fleet prevented any attempt at rescue. Salsman was taking a new launch out for its maiden trip, and had not proceeded far when his engine broke down. The boat drifted against a coal fleet and all were sucked under. None of the bodies have been recovered.

MINNESOTA CROPS VERY PROMISING

MUCH RYE IS ALREADY IN THE SHOCK; BARLEY WILL SOON BE READY.

NEWS OF SOUTHERN SECTIONS

Recent Storms Do Some Damage in Certain Counties—Corn on Boom Most Places—Hay Is a Good Crop.

Albert Lea.—Crops have been booming recently and rye is all cut, the crop being a good one. Barley is being harvested in many cases and all will be in the shock within a few days, but the straw is lighter than usual, although well filled.

Most of the wheat is approaching the "dough stage," a time that is very critical, but with favorable weather a good crop will result. Corn is simply great and should be the largest crop ever raised here. It is farther advanced than is usual at this season and some fields are tasseling.

Hay a Good Crop.

Hay is a good crop and the second crop of alfalfa is ready, indicating three crops for the season. Potatoes promise well and no bugs have been reported.

Apples will be a good crop, but not as heavy as was indicated early in the spring, as more than the usual number fell off early.

Much Corn Broken Down.

Caledonia.—Heavy rains and hail have caused damage in this section to small grain and corn. Some of the corn is practically ruined. Farmers report that in some localities the crop has been damaged fully one-third, while other fields will yield a good average crop. The harvesting of rye and barley is well commenced and the crops in general promise to be good. Hay cutting is in full progress and will be the best yield in the history of the county. The potato crop promises to be the best ever grown here, while gardens and pastures are in good condition. The apple crop will be light.

Corn Crop Well Advanced.

Luverne.—Rock county has one of the best hay crops in its history. The hot weather has been favorable for corn and the crop is farther advanced than is customary at this season.

BEMIDJI IS WILD WITH JOY

News of Selection of That City as Site for Normal School Causes Wild Demonstration.

Bemidji.—Fireworks flamed through the sky Wednesday in every direction, hundreds of persons promenaded the streets, cheering and singing, and mingled with the noise they made could be heard the rattle of guns and detonations of firecrackers.

The wild scenes began as soon as a bulletin from St. Paul flashed the news that Bemidji was to have the new sixth normal school. The clanging of the fire bell announced the message and gave the signal for the celebration.

An impromptu automobile parade formed and a mile of machines heavily loaded with men, women and children circled the business streets and lake shore boulevard.

The occupants of each car pounded tin pans, dangled cow bells, tooted horns and whistles, fired revolvers and made any other noise possible. From out of the pandemonium continuously came the shout, "We win."

Church bells in all parts of the city joined in and locomotives in the yards and shops shrieked. Even the burglar alarms on the banks were set going.

The Bemidji band led a lock-step parade, headed by Mayor William McCuaig and joined by a block-long procession, which included many of the leading business and professional men of the county.

ENTOMBED MINERS RESCUED

Prisoners in Eveleth, Minn., Shaft Stand in Water That Part of Time Is Neck Deep.

Eveleth, Minn., July 19.—The five men who were entombed at the Spruce mine here Wednesday as a result of a cloudburst were rescued 36 hours later, and much of that time had stood in water waist deep and at times neck deep.

They were almost famished, and were crazed from the dreadful strain of the darkness and vitiated air in their small quarters 150 feet below the surface and with the prospect of starving or suffocating.

The miners were located by rescuers by means of tapping on a pipe which had been drilled 40 feet into the mine. After the first signals were heard, the work of excavating was resumed with double energy and the men were soon located and brought to the surface.

DASH LEADS TO ARRESTS

Wyoming, Minn., Citizens Play Detectives and Secure Arrest of Alleged Swindler.

St. Paul.—Amateur detective work by two citizens of Wyoming, Minn., resulted in the arrest of three men at the Union depot. They are alleged to have swindled a 13-year-old boy in that town of $58. The three men, I. Kerr, C. Kerr and J. Claus, were arrested by Patrolman Paynsley as they stepped from a Northern Pacific passenger train, on complaint of A. Richner and W. G. Ward, employes of the Crex Carpet company at Wyoming. They will be held at Central police station awaiting a formal complaint.

The three men had decided to quit work at the Crex Carpet company plant, according to the story the two others told the police here, and went to the office while Mr. Richner and his assistant were absent and presented a pay check for 52 cents. Robert, 13-year-old son of Mr. Richner, asked for information.

They told the boy, it is alleged, that the sum due was $58.52, Mr. Richner said, reading the number of the pay check, printed beside the sum due, as the full amount called for. The boy paid them and they disappeared, he said.

Richner and Ward traced them to the railway station, where they had purchased tickets for Oshkosh, Wis., and had taken a train. The two men sped to St. Paul in an automobile, arriving ahead of the train, and confronted the three at the Union depot.

STATE LAND'S ORE RECORDS

123,555 Tons of Smelting Iron Shipped in One Week—$225,000 in Royalties Expected.

St. Paul.—Thirteen mines on state lands shipped 123,555 tons of iron ore during the week ending Saturday, according to figures given out by State Auditor Samuel G. Iverson. He said this was the heaviest tonnage ever shipped during a like period in the history of mining in Minnesota.

There are seventy mines on state lands, but only thirteen reported having made shipments. Heaviest shipments were made from the Grant, Leonidas, Scranton and Missabi Mountain mines.

Auditor Iverson said he believed that during 1913 all records for ore shipments will be broken. Since the first of the year, he reported, there have been 1,046,402 tons of ore shipped from Minnesota mines. Mr. Iverson said today he expected quarterly reports from the mining companies soon, giving the state $225,000 in royalties.

Horse and Girl Escape.

Rochester.—While the buggy in which she was riding was smashed to pieces when struck by a moving train, Miss Julia Boler, of this city, was miraculously saved from instant death by being hurled to the top of the carriage. She was about to drive across the tracks of the Great Western in this city, when she noticed a freight backing. In an instant she turned her horse in a frantic endeavor to avoid a collision, but the approaching cars struck the buggy, tossing Miss Boler into the top of the buggy and grinding the wheels of the rig into kindling. Before the train could be stopped the shattered rig and its occupant were carried forty feet, when the breaking of the harness released the horse and the wreck fell clear of the rails. Neither Miss Boler nor the horse received any injury.

Fleeing Greek Captured.

Pipestone.—A Greek named George Nickels, wanted for attempted murder at Flandreau, was arrested here. Nickels, in company with another Greek, Peter Gilles, operated a confectionery store at Flandreau. A few days ago the two had an argument over business affairs and Nickels procured a gun and, while walking to their sleeping apartments, dropped a few steps behind Gilles and opened fire upon him. One of the bullets took effect in Gilles' back, and, seeing his victim fall and believing him to be mortally wounded, Nickels fled from Flandreau.

IN SUCH PAIN WOMAN TORE HER CLOTHES

Testifies She Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Malone, N. Y.,—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has certainly done me a lot of good. I first heard of it when I was a girl and I always said that if I ever had female trouble I would take it.

"I suffered from organic inflammation and would have spells when I would be in such pain that I would tear my clothes. One day my husband got the neighbors in to see what the matter was but they could not help me. My first thought was for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I sent my husband out for it and took it until I was entirely cured. I am a woman of perfect health and my health and happiness came from Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine. You may rest assured that I do all I can to recommend your wonderful medicine to my friends."—MRS. FRED STONE, Route No. 3, Malone, N. Y.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled. It may be used with perfect confidence by women who suffer from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the standard remedy for female ills.

Alone Twenty-Four Years.

It was stated at an inquest on a woman at Newington, England, recently that she had been a tenant of Ponsonby buildings, Blackfriars, for 24 years, and the porter said he had never known her to have a visitor. Her sister happened to call, and at her request he burst the door open and found the woman dead. Further evidence showed that the cause of death was bronchitis, and that the woman had been dead for two days.

The Clocks We Wear.

The three marks on the back of a glove and the clocks on the stocking are due practically to the same circumstance. The glove marks correspond to the fourchette pieces between the fingers, and in other days these pieces were continued along the back of the hand, braid being used to conceal the seams. A somewhat similar origin is assigned to the ornamental clock on the stockings. In the days when stockings were made of cloth, the seams occurred where the clocks do now, the ornamentation then being used to conceal the seams. The useless little bow in the leather band lining a man's hat is the survival of the time when a hat was made by taking a piece of leather, boring two holes through it and drawing it up with a piece of string.—Harper's Weekly.

Trees and Lightning.

The electrical resistance of trees is quite great, a quality which protects them to a considerable degree from lightning stroke. This resistance varies greatly with the character of the tissues and also with the temperature. This fact results in an annual and daily period of resistance. The cambium layer shows the least electrical resistance, followed by the phloem and sapwood.

CLOUDED BRAIN

Clears Up on Change to Proper Food.

The brain cannot work with clearness and accuracy, if the food taken is not fully digested, but is retained in the stomach to ferment and form poisonous gases, etc. A dull, clouded brain is likely to be the result.

A Mich. lady relates her experience in changing her food habits, and results are very interesting:

"A steady diet of rich, greasy foods such as sausage, buckwheat cakes and so on, finally broke down a stomach and nerves that, by inheritance, were sound and strong, and medicine did no apparent good in the way of relief.

"My brain was clouded and dull and I was suffering from a case of constipation that defied all remedies used.

"The 'Road to Wellville,' in some providential way, fell into my hands, and may Heaven's richest blessings fall on the man who was inspired to write it.

"I followed directions carefully, the physical culture and all, using Grape-Nuts with sugar and cream, leaving meat, pastry and hot biscuit entirely out of my bill of fare. The result—I am in perfect health once more.

"I never realize I have nerves, and my stomach and bowels are in fine condition. My brain is perfectly clear and I am enjoying that state of health which God intended his creatures should enjoy and which all might have, by giving proper attention to their food." DAPHNE'S HOPE BOX

A Feminine Conceit and Joke That Led to Much Pleasant Gossip.

By SELINA LILLIAN HIGGINS.

"How very nice of Nellie," said Mary Lincoln, as she and her best friend Daphne Willis, parted at the village post office after receiving and opening two boxes, exactly alike.

"The lace is exquisite," spoke Daphne, glancing with taste and pleasure over the neck collar neatly done up in tissue paper with a dainty sachet bag beside it. "Nellie is very thoughtful."

They had been great friends, those three. All through Nellie's engagement Mary and Daphne had been closest to her of her many acquaintances. She had promised not to forget them when she reached the city on her wedding tour. Now Nellie had redeemed her promise.

"I shall wear the collar at the regular club party next week," said Mary. "You will be there, Daphne?"

"I think not. My aunt is not very well, you know, and needs me most of the time. Besides," and Daphne gave a nervous laugh, "I fear I am getting past the party age, Mary."

"Nonsense!" cried her devoted friend. "Twenty-three, and you look like sixteen. It's just the breaking up of our old circle that gives you the blues. Now you wear that handsome collar—lace always becomes you. Don't go giving it away, as you usually do everything that anybody asks you for."

"Oh, I shall not do that," declared Daphne. "It will always be a tender reminder of our dear Nellie. I shall put it away in my 'hope box.'"

Just here Mary made a pretense of clinching her pretty pink and white fists and grinding her pearly teeth in a feint of the most dreadful rage.

"Daphne Willis," she scolded severely, "if even I happen across that 'hope box' of yours, I'll—I'll stamp on it; yes, I will! The idea! you keeping a 'hope box,' as if you were some fading old maid with yellow teeth and wrinkled cheeks and scrawny neck, when everybody says you grow more and more beautiful—"

"You Are a Good Friend, Miss Willis."

"That's enough!" retorted Daphne, closing the cherry lips of her staunch champion with a kiss—"I know I am beginning to feel very old, and I think it a duty to be prepared if any likely old bachelor—why, yes, even some respectable widower—should happen along, you know!"

It was all a joke, Daphne's "hope box," a feminine conceit that appealed to Daphne because it led to pleasant quip and gossip among her bright girl friends. In her own mind Daphne felt pretty well convinced that she would never marry. She had a pleasant, permanent home with her aunt. She felt that she was past the frivolous age. Daphne had encountered some ideals during the years, but they had turned out selfish and prosaic. None of them had ever come up to her standard of a real man.

Her "hope box" was a satin-lined cedar chest, given to her by a dear girl friend one birthday. Daphne had accumulated a store of both pretty and useful things. It pleased her aunt to look over not only her presents but the exquisite needlework of Daphne herself, while her industrious niece experienced a certain pride in having pretty trifles to exhibit to her girl visitors.

It was nearly a year after the wedding of Nellie that Daphne received a letter from a cousin who lived at Merton. She had been in correspondence regularly with this relative, and several times Miss Dalby had referred to a neighbor, a Mr. Paul Barnes.

"I have great news for you, Daphne," this last letter ran. "I have often told you what a fine young man Mr. Barnes was. His parents left him quite an estate, and I suppose he got lonely in the old homestead. At any rate, he is about to marry, and what do you think? he has picked out the poorest girl in the village. It is one Lina Temple. She is a wild, headstrong girl, and the whole family are a worthless lot. It seems that her father once risked his life for Paul's father, and the young fellow has a generous nature that never forgets. I am pretty sure he has no genuine love for Lina. In fact, it is pretty well known that some Quixotic idea of lifting the girl from poverty to comfort and making a true woman of her is his idea. She is so poor her folks cannot afford any kind of an outfit, and very quietly some friends and myself are helping her out. If you have any little trifles to contribute, I shall be glad."

Good-hearted Daphne had something of a struggle with herself. Then her generous soul impelled a sacrifice.

"I shall never marry," she said to herself. "I shall be making some one happy," and the "hope box" went to Miss Dalby.

Two months later Daphne's aunt died. It was natural that Miss Dalby should ask her to make her home with her. This she did, and Daphne found herself installed at Merton.

"I have often thought of the wedding you wrote me about," observed Daphne, the first evening of her arrival.

"Oh, did I never write you!" exclaimed Miss Dalby. "The match was broken off. We got up quite a handsome outfit for Lina Temple. She never used it, for she eloped with a circus performer two days before the date for the wedding."

"And Mr. Barnes?" inquired Daphne.

"I think, secretly, he was relieved, for the girl was not of his class—headstrong, capricious, all for tinsel and glitter. He acted the man completely, however. He followed the elopers, made sure that the new husband would be good to the wild, untutored girl, and, they say, even started him in a new business."

Of course, Daphne met Paul Barnes, and there seemed to spring up a mutual interest between them. One evening as he stood at the garden gate, the tender influences of the sweet June night seemed to bind him lingeringly to the spot.

"You are a good friend, Miss Willis," he said. "I never told you, but I have heard of your kind thought to make happy the young lady I at one time thought to make my wife."

"And you are a good man, Mr. Barnes," replied Daphne with genuine impulse, although she flushed a trifle consciously. "It was a noble thought to strive to guide her untutored steps aright."

"Shall we walk to the lake and back? It is such a beautiful evening," he suggested, and there was a strange, wistful tremor in his voice.

The moonlit shadows lengthening on the long, dewy grass, the holy stars shining down through the lace-like mistiness of the enraptured night. Daphne listened to words that rang so true their echo thrilled and lingered, even as she came back to the house, her heart beating with the joy of a new-found happiness, her face radiant with telltale blushes.

She went up to where Miss Dalby sat and put her arms around her, and hid her conscious face on her shoulder.

"Dear cousin," she whispered, "you told me you had stored my old 'hope box' in the garret."

"Yes, dear," replied Miss Dalby, smiling wisely.

"I should like to have it back again, if you please," said sweet Daphne Willis.

WILD DOGS PEST OF AFRICA

Hunting in Packs, They Do Incalculable Damage to Sheep and Other Live Stock of Farmers.

There is no wild animal in Africa which deals out such wholesale destruction to certain kinds of game as the hunting dog. Leopards have been known to be chased up trees; hyenas have been found in process of being mobbed to death; the lion himself, when found, solitary, is sometimes pursued by a pack.

Bush pirate and Ishmael as he is, strangely enough toward man the hunting dog seems to betray little or no aggressive tendency.

Wandering about in bands over huge areas of wild country, and seldom remaining more than a few days in any one locality, the hunting dog is probably less frequently encountered than any other kind of carnivore, and therefore in less degree than any other has he the experience of man and his ways. There is at least no doubt that when this experience has been acquired few creatures show more haste in escaping from man's presence or display more intelligence in doing so. But if there is little ground of complaint against him as regards man personally, it is a very different matter where the latter's flocks and herds are concerned.

When the farmer first begins to graze his sheep in a wild country, one of the chief, if not the most dangerous, of his enemies is the hunting dog. Sweeping down upon a flock, a pack of these animals will in a very few minutes entirely annihilate it, killing and rending apparently for the mere pleasure of doing so, and then, having completed the slaughter, will probably be miles away wreaking the same destruction elsewhere, ere the irate owner and his friends have time to arrive upon the scene.

A long crusade against them in Cape Colony resulted at length in their virtual extinction in the settled parts, but in all the wilder corners of South Africa the same thing still goes on, and raids upon small herds of native goats and sheep are everywhere, where these pests exist.—Blackwood's Magazine.

Then Shut Up Shop.

Not long ago Samuel G. Blythe, the magazine writer, and Otto Carmichael, the late Washington newspaper correspondent, were driving about Muncie, Carmichael's home town, when the latter expressed a desire to see the schoolhouse where he received his first impressions along educational lines. So the nose of the automobile was pointed southward, and a few miles out of Muncie they arrived at the old schoolhouse, a one-room brick structure, dilapidated and fast falling into decay, having been abandoned many years ago in favor of the modern "consolidated" schools.

"That," said Carmichael, his voice trembling with emotion at sight of the old building, "is where my education began. How many memories of happy childhood days it recalls!"

"Yes, I see," remarked Blythe, dryly, letting his eyes wander over the doors and windows that were completely boarded up, "they educated you and then shut up shop."—Indianapolis News.

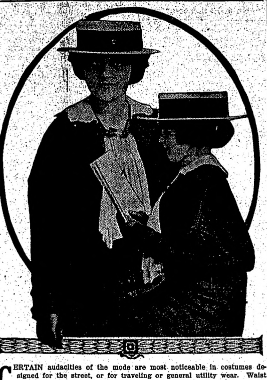
FEATURE OF SUMMER COSTUMES



CERTAIN audacities of the mode are most noticeable in costumes designed for the street, or for traveling or general utility wear. Waist lines, for instance, are ignored; garments are cut without reference to it, as if the figure were as uniform in size as a stove pipe. These straight up and down lines, it must be conceded, have a marked distinction of style when properly worn. They are not for the stout figure and it is ridiculous for heavy women to attempt them. But, for those who may affect them, they provide a very pleasing variety in gowning.

A good example of one of the boyish-looking models is shown in the traveling gown of covert or serge or ratine, for this style is developed in a great number of fabrics. It looks easy going and comfortable. The belt, of the same material as the gown, is drawn about the hips. The absence of shoulder seams provides an easy adjustment of the coat, and an easy readjustment, after one has lounged about in it.

The skirt is provided with a very little draping and tailored with overlapped seams. It is narrow and has a short split to the ankle, insuring freedom in walking.

When the coat is removed a light weight, washable silk waist is revealed and this is ornamented with some hand embroidery. The skirt fits well about the waist and the figure looks trim and neat in simply the waist and skirt.

A straight sailor hat is in harmony with this plain out-of-doors gown, although there is no apparent preference for this particular shape. There are so many more graceful shapes designed for outing and traveling that there is no good reason why one should attempt the most severe of hats. But, with this hat, as with the gown, certain types wear the banded sailor particularly well. It is a neat, light, practical little hat, shading the eyes and protecting the head. Veils look well with it and they are provided in ample variety to choose from. Washable veils of lace or bordered net or chiffon are to be worn with this gown and hat and they provide completely for the comfort of the wearer.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

LACE SCARFS IN HIGH FAVOR

So Popular They May Constitute, If Desired, the Only Trimming for Summer Gown.

The lace business is so revived that women are finding a new way of earning a livelihood, or rather reviving a very old one. All the French salons and those of Belgium are working overtime to supply the demand. Therefore it is quite natural that scarfs should come into fashion and that they should be the only trimming on a simple summer gown, if one so desires.

If a woman owns anything in the way of a fine lace scarf, either black or white, she should be sure to arrange it in some fanciful fashion over her shoulders and down her arms and not throw it on casually whenever she wears the gown. Chantilly shawls can be draped in this fashion and made to form one of those winglike transparent draperies that Callot invented and all the civilized world took up.

The trouble about one of these lace shawls is that it has too much body for summer drapery, and is better when made a part of the gown and put over material instead of the skin. For summer tulles and silk net are the best choices and it does not make any difference how vivid is the color. Conservative women may not care to use blue tulle over a scarlet gown, but the majority will not mind. There will be artists aplenty to give it approval.

Gay Ribbons Used.

Ribbon is coming into its own again. Time was when it was relegated to being tied into bows and there its sphere of ornamentation began and ended. Now its field is less restricted. It is made into flowers, it is used for sashes wide and sashes narrow, it forms frillings and rufflings and bands and edgings, and it is fashioned into whole frocks, with plenty of lace to hide the inevitable joinings.

Silks for Wraps.

Moire silks are one of the accepted novelties for wraps, combination purposes and for garnitures. Brocades and matelasses in variety are being largely used for outer garments, combinations, trimmings, and confidence is expressed in an increased distribution during the forthcoming fall season. Plain and printed chiffons are staples.

De Medici Collar Effect.

Wired lace is good.

Made to fit and stand high.

But failing such an expensive one. Trilling of lace, chiffon or net will do.

Baste it inside the coat or dress collar.

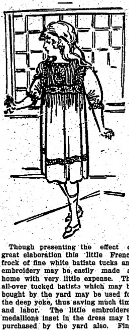
CHILD'S DAINTY FROCK



Though presenting the effect of great elaboration this little French frock of fine white batiste tucks and embroidery may be easily made at home with very little expense. The all-over tucked batiste which may be bought by the yard may be used for the deep yoke, thus saving much time and labor. The little embroidered medallions inset in the dress may be purchased by the yard also. Fine, double-edged, embroidered batiste joins the waist with the little straight skirt below, which is laid into the waist in tiny tucks. Dainty Valenciennes lace insertion crosses the shoulders and is edged with a narrow ruffle of lace. The skirt is also lace trimmed.

Latest Princess Slips.

The Balkan blouse dresses were scarcely launched on the market before a separate lining, in the form of a slip, was made to take care of this new requirement.

These new garments are cut on perfectly straight lines. They hang from the yoke-line to the skirt edge, with no curves appearing under the arms. Being quite snug-fitting around the hips, all bulkiness is eliminated in the dress, while extra fulness for the Balkan blouse is supplied by gathering in the top of the slip at the yoke-line, from which point it falls to the hips in the soft blouse effect which is now so fashionable.

Use of Many Flowers.

Even the greatest milliners use the field flowers in preference to large ones and their only recommendation is novelty. Somehow they do not seem quite suitable for the hat of a grown-up person, but perhaps this is only a mental suggestion left in our minds by custom.

Every one is trying to bring the ostrich feather back again into fashion, but whether or not women will ever give up the dashing little fantasie is hard to tell.

Ribbon for the Waist.

Paradoxical.

"I would walk on hot plowshares for your sake, my love."

"Yes, and the minute you tried it you would get cold feet."

SCALP TROUBLE FOR YEARS

368 Harrison St., Elyria, Ohio.—"My case was a scalp trouble. I first noticed small bunches on my scalp which commenced to itch and I would scratch them and in time they got larger, forming a scale or scab with a little pus, and chunks of hair would come out when I would scratch them off. It caused me to lose most of my hair. It became thin and dry and lifeless. I was troubled for over ten years with it until it got so bad I was ashamed to go to a barber to get my hair cut.

"I tried everything I could get hold of, ——— and ———, but received no cure until I commenced using Cuticura Soap and Ointment when the scale commenced to disappear. The way I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment was to wash my scalp twice a day with warm water and Cuticura Soap and rub on the Cuticura Ointment. I received benefit in a couple of weeks and was cured in two months." (Signed) F. J. Busher, Jan. 28, 1913.

WHY CREAM TESTS VARY

Article From Dairy Record Explains Perplexing Problem.

The per cent of butterfat in cream may vary greatly under differing conditions and for different purposes. The hand skimmed and gravity raised cream will differ from centrifugal cream. Then diffent richnesses of cream are needed for different purposes. For city trade a 20 to 25 per cent cream is usually found best for ordinary purposes. At times a 16 to 18 per cent cream may be wanted, while for whipping cream 30 to 40 per cent is best. For creamery purposes a fairly rich cream is wanted, from 30 to 45 percent. For ice cream making we like a rich cream that we can standardize down to the desired richness.

From the standpoint of both producer and manufacturer a rich cream is thus desirable. On the part of the farmer there are several advantages in skimming a rich cream. There is much less bulk and weight to handle with a rich cream; less room is then needed in the cooling tank and the time and labor of cooling are greatly reduced. The farmer has also less expense for hauling or shipping. In everry way the work of handling is lessened. Perhaps a little more attention should be paid the condition of the cooling tank and milk house, as rich cream tends go absorb odors and taints more rapidly than thin cream. The keeping quality of the cream is better, however, as the more concentrated a liquid is the less chance there is for bacterial growth. The farmer also keeps more skim milk at home, and the feeding value of skim milk on a dairy farm makes this desirable. It is cheaper and better to keep the skim milk at home than to haul buttermilk from the creamery. Any good separator should skim just as close when delivering a rich cream as a thin cream; if it does not there is something wrong with the separator or its operation.

In handling cream one of the greatest difficulties occurs in the variations in test. Cream containing 40 per cent fat may be delivered one day and on the next delivery the test may drop to 35 or 30 per cent. Or the test may increase in the same way, varying more or lets from time to time. Such variations in tests are often puzzling to both creameryman and patron, and may cause more or less friction. The farmer does not understand woy his tests should vary with all conditions apparently the same from day to day, and the buttermaker is too often unable to explain these variations. Some of the causes of variation in test are given below:

The position and adjustment of the cream skrew or skim milk screws is important. Turning the cream screw in towards the center of the separator bowl will increase the fat test. It does this by lessening the amount of cream that can come out of the opening, by taking the cream from nearer the center where it is richer. As the separator will take out practically all of the fat anyway the smaller volume of cream must have a higher proportion of butterfat. The effect of the skim milks is just the reverse. On some machines the screws become so loose that they may be moved unintentionally in washing or in handling the bowl. To avoid this the position of the screw normally should be marked so thot any change of position can be readily seen and corrected. Any slight clogging of the cream outlet, by curd or foreign material, will also cause the seperator to deliver a richer cream.

The speed at which the machine is operator is another important factor in determining the cream test. Each separator is designed to yield maximum efficiency of separation at a certain speed. Any increase in speed, therefore, can not give any appreciable increase in efficiency of separation. It can and does increase the rate at which the skim milk leaves the skim milk discharges. As the rate of inflow of milk is not increased to any extent by the change in speed the additional skim milk delivered must be taken from the cream, leaving a smaller amount of cream for an incretsed fat content. This is not a practical way of raising the cream test, as the extra power required is out of proportion to the results obtained.

If the speed drops much below normal the effect is reversed. The separator cannot then develope enough centrifugal force to remove all of the fat from the milk, and an increased loss of butterfat in the skim milk results. In the same way the capacity of the skim milk outlets is lessened, thus forcing more skim milk out through the cream outlet. The inflow remaining very nearly constant, the volume of cream is increased and its test corressondingly lowered. It is thus evident that the farmer must take care to keep the speed of his separator up to normal. Letting it drop means an actual loss of butter fat, less skim milk to fed, and a greater bulk of cream to handle. The speed should be timed at each run, as there are very few men who can estimate speed correctly from day to day.

LANAGER ELECTED; TO IMPROVE GROUNDS

At the annual school meeting held last Sasurday evening at the school house, E. B. Lanager was re-elected treasurer. But little interest was manifested and few attended the meeting.

It was also decided to plant trees on the school grounts and otherwise improve the appearance of the grounds. The work will probably be commenced soon.

The state drainage board will expend $80,000 in widening and deepening the Roseau river. This money was appropriated by the last legislature and was included in the general appropriation bill, instead of in a special bill, and the board was in doubt as to its right to use the money. The attorney general gave an official opinion that the money could be used as appropriated.

Mr. and Mrs. Julius Pleth returned Saturday from a visit to the Twin Cities and St. Cloud. Mr. Pleth has been away for a month in Illinois and Iowa selling Red Lake and Pennington county lands, and succeeded in disposing of six quarters to parties in Illinois who will move up here this fall. Mr. Pleth states that many farmers from those states will be up here this fall to look over the country.

The butter harvest for Minnesota for the past year was twenty-nine million golden dollars. This was $6,656,600.17 larger than it was the year previous. But as large as the total is, it only expresses about one-half the value of the cow to Minnesota. There is a large amount of butter made and sold that is not included in the report of the dairy commissioner, to say nothing of the cheese, the milk and the calves. Fifty million dollars would more correctly represent the dairy products of the state—and that means about $25 for every man, woman and child in the state contributed by the gentle eyed bovine.

Dr. William J. Mayo, the famous surgeon, started the medical fraternity by issuing the following statement last week: After eighteen years of special investigation of cancer of the stomach we are assured that it is a curable disease. Nearly one-third of all cancers occur in the stomach, so our investigation proves that cancer is a curable disease. Of course cancer of the stomach cannot be cured in all cases. Out of a thousand cases operated on from 1894 to Dec. 31 last, 378 resulted in cures, 240 patients were improved and their lives prolonged and 376 were given up as hopeless after exploratory operations. Perhaps all of these cases could have been cured if the disease had been diag- [illegible]

PANTHER RUNS AMUCK; KILLS CATTLE

A panther or leopard, which is supposed to have escaped from the Barnum & Bailey circus, or one of the carnival companies passing through has created a panic in the vicinity of Mentor. A horse, calves and a cow were killed in pastures during the last three days. The mystery was not solved until this noon, when two men working in a hayfield saw the animal and jumped into a hayrack and raced for home, the beast following a short distance, and then disappearing in a grove. As a result the farmers are much excited, and the milking is being done after dark.

It is also reported that there was not the usual number of calls Sunday evening, the young Lotharios having urgent business at home before the shades of night fell. If the beast is not killed or rounded up in the near future, it will interfere materially with Dan Cupid's harvest for the season.

Several local hunters are going out to get trace of the beast.

Must be of Legal Age

Aspiring benedicts under 18 and hopeful would-be brides who have not seen 15 summers, will have to seek other Gretna Greens than Minnesota, according to an opinion handed down by Attorney General Lyndon Smith. District Court Clerks who issue such licenses, the same authority decides, will do so in direct violation of a statute provision, and be liable to a charge of malfeasance, despite the fact the consent of the parent may have been given.

Permission of parents and guardians is necessary, and required where the male is under 21 and the female under 18, but such consent given in writing has no legal standing where the applicants are under those ages.

The opinion was given in reply to an inquiry from Willmar.

Thompson-Lemieux

Last Saturday at Red Lake Falls occurred the marriage of Miss Olive Thompson and Albert Lemieux.

After the ceremony the young couple returned to their home east of here, where guests to the number of a hundred assembled, the evening being spent in dancing after which an excellent supper was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Lemieux will make their home on their farm east of Plummer.

Shortage of Harvest Hands.

Help for the Harvest fields this season is going to be hard to secure. Local organizations must get busy and round up the situation. Rulings of the Interstate Commerce Commission prohibit the railroads from making rate concessions for this class of business. Transient harvest laborers seldom have sufficient funds to carry them from the larger cities to the fields and arrangements will have to be made to advance fares in whole or in part in order to secure reliable and competent help. This has been accomplished by many localities through concerted action taken by leading farmers with their local Board of Trade or Commercial Club. The danger is DELAY in perfecting arrangements. Something should be done at once to avoid troubles experienced in previous years. The railroads are willing to help and do all they can. The Soo line has requested the following information from its agents:

2. When wanted ......to........
3. Wages per day without board $..

MINNESOTA CROPS IN TIP-TOP SHAPE

RYE AND BARLEY HARVESTED

Wheat Threshing Begins in Some Sections — Rochester Reports Prospects for Bumper Corn Crop—Fields on "Jump."

Minneapolis.—The reports from Minnesota indicate an abundance of moisture and the feeling prevails that more rain now will do harm rather than good, as it will damage the ripe grain more than it will benefit potatoes and corn for the next few weeks.

Weather conditions have been favorable for proper maturing of the grain, and only one section reports a need of more rainfall in order to see the crops through, the reports say.

Mankato Threshing Wheat.

Mankato.—Threshing has been commenced and the first report to be received is from Madison Lake, where Frank Fasnacht marketed some new winter wheat. It went twenty-seven bushels to the acre and was of better quality than last year's product.

Wheat Turning Color.

Fergus Falls.—The rye and barley harvest is now well in hand, and wheat is beginning to turn color to a great extent. The present outlook is that the crop will be very much better than it appeared in June, and that there will be a very fair yield. Corn continues to make great progress and some of it is now tasselled out. The hay crop has suffered seriously from rain, much of the tame hay being seriously damaged as there has been no weather to dry it after it was cut, and it has spoiled in the fields.

Pipestone Crop Good.

Pipestone.—The harvest of barley and rye has been commenced in Pipestone county and proves that the crop will be one of the heaviest ever gathered here. Weather conditions have been very favorable for all small grains as well as for corn the past few days.

Bumper Corn Crop Expected.

Rochester.—Farmers in this section of the state are looking forward to a bumper corn crop this year, many predicting the largest yield and the best grade of corn ever raised in the history of corn growing in the state. The hot weather and the rains at opportune times have made the corn grow by jumps.

Grain Is Well Filled.

Albert Lea.—Harvest progressed finely in Freeborn, Mower and Steele counties, all the rye, most of the barley and a considerable part of the oats being cut at this time, while most of the rye and much of the barley is already stacked.

All reports are that the grain has filled exceptionally well this year and a few days of favorable weather will make an excellent quality as well as quantity of the wheat in this part of the state. Wheat cutting this week and the next fornight will see all the small grain in this vicinity cut and most of it stacked and very likely some of it threshed. Corn continues to boom and most of the hill corn is tasselled and very much of it silked with every promise of an excellent yield.

Retailers Choose Minneapolis.

St. Cloud.—The semi-annual meeting of the Minnesota Retail Monument Dealers' association was held at the Commercial club rooms and about fifty out-of-town dealers were present. It was decided that the winter convention be held in Minneapolis, about the middle of January, the dates to be set later. Plans are being made for the national convention which will be held in Boston, Aug. 19 to 23. Three delegates will go from this state, these being Leonard Eckes of Minneapolis, E. Haertell of Fairmont, and J. H. Anderson of Austin.

Eyota Youth Falls 20 Feet.

Rochester.—Charles Krenske, the 8-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Krenske of Eyota, has a fractured skull as the result of a twenty-foot fall through the second story of a barn on the farm of his uncle to the concrete floor below. The youth was at play with several companions, and it is believed he fell head first through a hole in the second story. He was picked up unconscious and little hope is held for his recovery.

Dairy Picnic Is Held.

Gypsies May Have Child.

St. Paul.—Simultaneously with a dispatch from Fond du Lac stating that gypsies that circuited the shores of Lake Winnebago several days ago, bound northward, had with them a white child that Mrs. W. F. McGowan of that city believed, from the little one's appearance, might be Katherine Winters, the missing daughter of Mrs. W. A. Winters of Muncieville, Ind., it was reported to the St. Paul police that gypsies passed westward along Cherokee avenue having with them a little fair-haired girl.

Mankato.—As a result of running a splinter under the nail of one of his fingers about ten days ago, William Saenger, the 8-year-old son of J. B. Saenger, died in a local hospital of lockjaw. AN EXCITING FINISH ON THE MINNESOTA STATE FAIR TRACK

While the most attention is given to the harness horses that will perform during the first five days of the Minnesota State Fair, the gallopers have not been forgotten. The Minnesota State Fair managers recognize this fact, and this year will give their patrons some unusually high class sport along this line.

AGED COUPLE DIE TOGETHER

Pioneers of Pierce County Interred in Single Grave as They Had Often Hoped.

Red Wing.—Emanuel Gelstrom, 75 years old, and his wife, Gertrude Gelstrom, 82 years old, of Trenton, were granted their wish that they might die together.

Mr. and Mrs. Gelstrom were pioneers of Pierce county and settled in a little log cabin when that country was a wilderness. They were happy and contented and as the years sapped their strength they often said they hoped they would be buried in the same grave.

Sickness, caused by old age came, and Mr. Gelstrom was removed to the city hospital here for treatment. He submitted to an operation, but was too weak to withstand the ordeal.

Mrs. Gelstrom, suffering from dropsy and heart disease, lying on her bed prayed for the recovery of her husband and that she might live to see him again. The sad news was broken gently to her. She understood. In a short time she was dead.

A double funeral was held Friday and the bodies of the aged couple now lie side by side in the little plot of ground at the Svea church in Trenton.

The aged couple are survived by two daughters, Mrs. S. F. Fjellner of Trenton and Mrs. Frank Winters of Bothell, Wash.

PREFERS THE ATTIRE OF MEN

Winona.—"I know that a great many people are shocked at my appearance in this uniform, but to my mind, it is much more sensible than the dresses, especially the present day styles," said pretty Mrs. Lee Earl, of Toledo, O., who, accompanied by her husband, walked into Winona on their trip around the world. She is attired in the kahki suit of a boy scout and a wholesome tan from exposure to the elements.

"I don't know how I'll ever go back to the ridiculous frills in which women doll themselves," she continued. "And I don't think this outfit is half as vulgar as the rigs women are wearing today according to fashion."

Male attire and long walks, she said, is the best tonic for women.

Circus Employes Assault Girl.

St. Paul, July 26.—Serious charges will be brought by the state against eight employes of a circus, which visited St. Paul on the complaint of Melba Sherman, 15 years old, 657 Grand avenue. The girl involves the eight men in a story given the police. Policeman C. H. Riley, on duty at the circus grounds was summoned to the aid of the young girl about 8:30 p. m. His informant, a colored man, led him to a spot thirty rods south of the circus tents where the officer found about eight men surrounding the girl who was screaming for aid.

Elk River Pioneer Succumbs.

Elk River.—J. G. Grey, pioneer farmer of this section, died of heart trouble after many weeks of illness. He had resided here more than forty years. He was born in Main, in 1841, and is survived by his wife and three children, Mrs. C. E. Cooley of St. Paul, Mrs. C. F. W. Carlson of Minneapolis, and Raymond H. Grey, professor in East High school, Minneapolis. The funeral was held Sunday, in charge of the Masonic lodge of Elk River.

Bucket Brigade Saves Town.

Prosper.—Three hundred men with buckets, from all of the surrounding towns, saved this village from destruction when a fire, starting in a lumber yard, threatened to sweep the single street. The fire started in a barn where a tramp had been smoking in the haymow. Half a dozen buildings were burned at a loss of $10,000.

Confessed Slayer Can't Be Sentenced.

Winona, Minn., July 25.—John Davis, the laborer who shot and killed Frank Finn at Wabasha last week because he says Finn called him a "cheap skate," must remain in the Wabasha county jail until next November in spite of the fact that he pleaded guilty in justice court and asked for immediate sentence. It was learned that the district court is powerless under the state law to receive his plea during time of vacation because the limit of punishment for the crime alleged is over seven years.

RURAL SCHOOLS COMBINED

Nicollet County Voters of Two Districts in Adjoining Townships Indorse Plan.

St. Peter.—Consolidation of rural schools is to be given a trial in Nicollet county. By a vote of fifty-two to six the taxpayers of districts numbers 43 and 55, located in the adjoining townships of Lafayette and Bernadotte, indorsed the proposition, and it is planned to open the new school in September.

Thirteen sections are included in the consolidated territory, and the school will serve sixty pupils. It will have two rooms, each composed of four grades, and the principal, under the provisions of the state law, must be qualified to teach agriculture and manual training.

Six trustees, to be chosen at a special election to be called by the county superintendent of schools, will administer the affairs of the consolidated district, and the pupils will be transported to and from school.

Under the educational laws of 1911 the new school will receive $750 state aid as a consolidated school, and a sum equal to one-fourth the cost of its new building. It will also be given $300 as a semi-graded school and $5 for each pupil attending forty days so that the school will receive financial assistance from the state to the extent of approximately $1,300 a year. If the experiment proves successful, several districts in other parts of the county will unite.

Random Telegraphic Brevities.

Sick Prisoner Is Released.

Rochester.—Affliction with a disease pronounced incurable by local surgeons has saved Albert Hill, of Fort Williams, Ont., from a possible term in the state prison. Hill came to Rochester a few days ago to consult surgeons, and after a brief stay in the city became penniless. He passed three checks on local banks for $5 each, which resulted in his arrest, he having used different names on each check. In the meantime his financial distress was relieved by money from home. After investigation revealed that no hope was held for Hill's physical condition, the authorities deemed it but an act of justice to allow him to go home.

Winona to Sell Bonds.

Winona.—The county board has decided to open bids on Aug. 19 for the sale of Winona county bonds in the amount of $70,000, the money from the sale to be applied in the erection of the new county jail here. The bonds will carry interest at the rate of 5 per cent and run from five to ten years. The county board will on the day following decide on the type of bridge to be used on the concrete state highways in this county. The arch, concrete and steel bridges are under consideration.

Marshall.—"A lobby does exist at Washington. I know, because I had them to contend with." So stated Dr. Harvey W. Wiley on the chautauqua platform here. "They will be good while the investigation is going on and when that is over they will be right back on the job, mark what I tell you," he continued. One of the best programs yet presented here has just been ended and contracts signed for another one next year. Judge A. Z. Blair, of Adams county, Ohio, told how he came to disfranchise 1,690 voters of that county for bribery.

More Men Wanted By Lumber Mills.

Bemidji.—A shortage of labor has been reported by the lumber mills in this city and the fact that the police recently marched an army of forty "hobous" into the country has caused a complaint to reach Mayor McCuaig with a request that all men out of work be sent to the employment offices where they would be directed to employment. Both lumber mills and box factory are working day and night and are making every effort to keep full crews on the job.

Doctors and Nurses on Outing.

Winona.—The coming Saturday and Sunday will be spent by doctors and nurses of St. Mary's hospital at Rochester, on the river, the trips being provided by the Doctors Mayo on their pleasure steamer, Oronoco. The first Saturday the party will come to Winona and make the trip up the river to Red Wing and the following Saturday the trip will be reversed, the visitors being boarded at Red Wing and coming down to Winona. Dr. W. J. Mayo will leave Saturday for an extended trip through Europe.

Unemployed Being Looked After.

Minneapolis.—Mayor W. G. Nye has issued orders that beginning today policemen will do all they can to assist idle men in finding work. Refusal on the part of the men to take work, if they do not have visible means of support, will bring upon their heads a charge of vagrancy. The mayor divides the present idle forces in Minneapolis in three classes, about 500 men earnestly looking for work, an equal number seeking to avoid work and [illegible]

U. S. IS AROUSED BY MEXICANS' ACT

DEMANDS THAT ASSAILANTS OF DIXON BE PUNISHED IMMEDIATELY.

MUST RELEASE AMERICANS

Representations, Drastic in Phraseology, Made to Huerta Regime—Wounded Official Leaves Juarez Hospital.

Washington, July 29.—Strong representations, the most drastic in phraseology that have been made since the present American administration came into power, have been made to the Huerta government in Mexico.

The United States government demanded not only the prompt arrest, court martial and punishment of the Mexican federal soldiers who shot Charles D. Dixon, an American immigration official, at Juarez, Mexico, but the immediate release of Charles Bissell and Bernard McDonald, mining engineers, imprisoned by federal soldiers at Chihuahua City, and said to be threatened with execution.

Incidents Regarded Serious.

So serious were these incidents regarded in official circles that they overshadowed largely the policy which the visit of Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson had brought to a climax.

The ambassador himself was so exercised over the developments in Mexico that he dictated two strong telegrams, one to the embassy at Mexico City and the other to the American consul at Juarez, and while Secretary Bryan slightly modified their tone, they were approved and promptly dispatched.

The president has Ambassador Wilson's long report in hand, and after conference with Mr. Bryan is prepared to inquire of the ambassador what remedies he would suggest.

No Inkling of Plans.

The ambassador will give no inkling of the recommendation he has in mind beyond the general statement that his plan would conserve the friedly relations between Mexico and the United States and protect, likewise, the interests of Americans in the southern republic.

The ambassador's long experience with outbursts against American citizens, such as those against which the American government has lodged a protest, will make him an important factor in whatever policy is adopted toward the Huerta government.

The demand that the soldiers at Juarez be courtmartialed and that the guilty be punished is a much more pointed request than has hitherto been voiced by the American government. Although McDonald, who is Bissell's fellow prisoner at Santa Rosalia, is reported to be an English subject, the demands for protection covered both men and the American consul at Chihuahua was ordered to go to the extreme of precaution to prevent harm from befalling the two mining men.

El Paso, Tex.—Charles B. Dixon, Jr., the United States immigration inspector who was shot in Juarez Saturday by Mexican soldiers, was relesed from the Juarez hospital and brought to El Paso after American Consul T. D. Edwards had made a demand for his release and for the arrest of the men who shot him.

Mexican Consul Miranda and Guillehmo Porris, ex-secretary of state of Chihuahua, also interceded for the release of Dixon, after conferences with United States officials who represented to the Mexicans the grave impression that had been produced in Washington by the news of the shooting of the inspector.

Several Are Jailed.

Arthur Walker, the negro who Dixon was investigating when he was arrested and the soldiers who made the arrest were immediately placed in jail, according to the report of Colonel Castro, commanding the Juarez garrison, to E. W. Berkshire, supervising inspector of immigration for the United States on the Mexican border.

Dixon was released to Mr. Berkshire and brought to El Paso to a hospital, where his physicians believe he will recover.

Wanted Burden Lifted.

Leonard is only four years old, but he frequently uses expressions amazingly mature. The other day, for instance, he appealed to a devoted young aunt to remove from his sphere of existence the new little baby sister of whom he had become jealous. The tiny lad was at some pains to explain that while he didn't want baby himself, she was so sweet and dear that plenty of other people would.

"But why don't you want to keep her, Leonard?" asked auntie, divided between surprise and amusement.

"Oh, she's such a bother, an' mamma has to fuss with her so much, an' she makes me just suffer," the youngster gravely explained.

RESULTS SECURED BY SPRAYING POTATO

Good Showing for One Hill of Potatoes.

The early blight of potatoes appears in Wisconsin between August 15 and September 25, and does considerable damage to fields not sprayed to control the disease. The excellent results secured by spraying by the horticultural department of the College of Agriculture of the University of Wisconsin show the advantages of such treatment.

This department advises that growers spray at once after August 15, and not wait until the blight appears. If the grower is then careful to note the condition of his vines and the development of the true early blight disease, he can govern the subsequent application of the mixture according to the weather and the appearance of the field. Usually at least three applications will be necessary to get the best results, and in some seasons four applications are advisable.

The amount of spray mixture applied per acre will depend upon the size of the vines. Early in the season 100 gallons of the mixture may be needed to cover from one to three acres. At the last spraying, when double nozzles should be used, 100 gallons will cover from one to one and one-half acres, and possibly two acres in some cases. The mixtures can be economized greatly by avoiding any leakage in the nozzles and running the mixture through as fine a cap as possible and still cover the foliage.

Spraying is generally better adapted to the standard late varieties. Substantial increases in yields have been obtained from spraying early varieties which were planted late. Success from spraying early varieties, which were planted late, is exceptional in this state.

Failures in spraying for blight are often the result of one or more of the following causes: Impoverished soil, weakened potato seed, injury from the potato beetle, carelessness and inattention to essential details.

The first three causes are especially noticed during the dry season. The more favorable the tillage conditions, the larger the returns which may be expected from spraying.

MANAGEMENT OF THE CLAY SOILS

Unless Conditions Are Very Favorable Fertility Remains Quite Unavailable.

(By W. MILTON KELLY.)

The average clay soil possesses an abundant supply of natural fertility, but unless conditions are very favorable this fertility remains in an unavailable condition.

In the management of clay soils the practical point that we need to keep in mind is the fact that we must modify conditions so that this locked up fertility may become available for the growing crops.

These stored up elements in the soil are to be regarded as so much potential energy, which by our methods of cultivation and soil management, may be converted into active energy.

We must therfore seek to adopt such methods as will conserve and preserve this stored-up energy, or fertility, except such as is necessary to produce crops from year to year.

Clay soils must be properly drained before they can be brought under a profitable system of cultivation. Without attempting to name all of the advantages of thorough drainage on clay soils; by taking away the water from under the surface and giving the air and moisture an opportunity to separate the soil particles permits a better growth of roots.

Drainage also prevents the washing of the surface, and assists in conserving available fertility. Its influence on the temperature of the soil, especially in the spring, is of particular importance, as it lengthens the growing season, and makes it possible for us to begin work earlier in the spring, and to perform the work in a more thorough manner during the whole of the growing season. It is impossible to cultivate a soil saturated with water.

In addition to these direct benefits there are a number of indirect ways in which the soil is improved by drainage, such as the influence of higher temperature of the bacterial and chemical changes going on in the soils.

There are bacterial processes that play an important part in this branch of natural economy, and we must so shape our methods of cultivation and management as to get the most benefit from these processes.

These clay soils, which are the most benefited by a thorough system of tile drainage, are the most fertile soils in the country, and they will therefore warrant the largest expenditure in improvement and development.

While not every farmer is able to put in a complete system of tile drainage the first year, he can so plan his work that what he is able to do from time to time will fit into and form a part of a permanent system and not be a haphazard, disconnected work.

I believe more injury has been done clay soils by plowing too deep than by all the cropping yet done in the country. One fact worthy of our attention is that in the cultivation of clay soils we must keep the humus or organic matter as close as possible to the top of the soil until the physical condition of the soil is such that the air may have access to the soil as deep as the organic matter is turned under.

Vegetable matter, when exposed to the action of the air, will soon decompose into carbon or vegetable mold and carbonic-acid. Large quantities of vegetable mold and carbonic acid make the soil plow up light, loamy and free from clods. On the other hand, if this organic matter is plowed under deep, the air cannot reach it in the saturated, wet soil, and the decomposition goes on slowly, and the product will be widely different. Under such conditions the nitrifying bacteria cannot perform their work.

When the air can have free action through the soil, the clods will decompose into carbonic acid, which will liberate the plant food in the soil and provide the growing plants with nourishment.

When it is desired to deepen the cultivation of clay soils, the work should be gradual and there must be a thorough intermixing of the soil with vegetable matter as fast as it is brought up from below.

As a general rule it will be better to apply fresh manure to the clay soils, for the reason that fresh manure mixed with the soil goes through a process of fermentation which not only increases the availability of its fertilizing elements, but also assists in rendering soluble the portions of hitherto insoluble constituents of the soil.

On a large proportion of clay soils there will be more benefits from the manure when it is applied as a top dressing to the grass lands. In this way we grow more manure to incorporate with the soil when it is plowed.

After a clay soil has been improved by underdrainage, tillage, and fertilization so that it will grow good crops of clover, it is an easy matter to adopt a rotation of crops in connection with live stock feeding that will make sufficient manure to return to the soil to maintain it in a high state of fertility.

Strawberry Plants.

Some people say that strawberry plants set out the last of July or the first of August will give a paying crop the next spring, but we believe that to be a bad practice. Better set plants in the spring, permit not a single blossom to come to fruit the first year, and then the second year will give you a bountiful crop.

Species of Grapes.

There are about 40 species of grapes in the world, more than half of which are found in North America. Few other plants on this continent grow wild under such varied conditions and over such extended areas.

Kill Pepper Grass.

Pepper grass is the natural home of the melon aphis, and it should be destroyed wherever it is found near a melon patch. None should be allowed to grow within a quarter of a mile of melons.

Necessary Work in Garden.

We are pretty apt to rather neglect the garden after the planting is over, but the planting is only the start. Cultivation and spraying alone will finish the job to perfection.

Keep the Best Sows.

The late summer and fall market should not be glutted with young brood sows, as they are many times. Young and middle aged sows should be kept on the farm, provided they farrow fair-sized litters of pigs and take good care of them.

Harvesting Is Science.

Harvesting day is a science that not all of us have learned. Cut no more grass in a single day than can be taken care of at once.

D. A. R.'S NEW HOME

Franklin's Old Print Shop Made Permanent Quarters.

Annis Stockton Chapter Dedicates Burlington, N. J., Headquarters With Most Elaborate Ceremonies—First in State.

Burlington, N. J.—Benjamin Franklin's old print shop, in which he turned out paper currency for the Colonial government of New Jersey was opened here with elaborate ceremonies as the home of the Annis Stockton Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution. The exercises centered about the presentation of a high-American flag by the New Jersey Society, Sons of the American Revolution, to the patriotic women, who from their headquarters here will open a campaign to appropriately mark the various spots of Revolutionary interest in this section.

Mrs. Harriet N. M. Pancoast of Palmyra, regent of the Annis Stockton Chapter, presided at the opening of the home. Following the address of welcome by Mayor E. E. Mount, John S. Merrill of Trenton, president of the New Jersey society, Sons of the American Revolution, with his staff and color bearers and escorted by troops of local Boy Scouts, presented the big flag to Mrs. Pancoast. The history of the old house, as it appears on the county records, and the traditions attached to it, were related by Henry S. Haines, state surveyor general. The principal address was made by Mrs. Charles Yardley, East Orange, state regent of the D. A. R.

The Annis Stockton Chapter, by these exercises, becomes the first society of the D. A. R. in New Jersey to purchase and own its own historic headquarters. The officers of the chapter are: Regent, Mrs. Harriet N. M. Pancoast, Palmyra; vice-regent, Mrs. Richard Holeman, Mount Holly; secretary, Mrs. Frank Blackburn, Palmyra; treasurer, Miss Bessie Warnick, Woodbury; chaplain, Miss Sara E. Batchelor, Riverton. The trustees are: Mrs. R. W. Rice, Riverton; Mrs. David G. Baird, Beverly; Mrs. Joseph Roberts, Riverton; Mrs. Lawrence D. Fixary, Palmyra.

Because of the significance of Burlington as the easly home of Annis Stockton, the chapter selected this city as the site of their permanent home. As Annis Boudinot, the famous woman after whom the chapter is named, spent her youth here with her brother, Elias Boudinot, and later married Richard Stockton, one of the five Jerseymen who signed the Declaration of Independence.

Franklin's Old Print Shop.

In the history of his own life Franklin tells how he stopped in Burlington as a poor boy while en route from New York to Philadelphia. He missed the Philadelphia boat and, awaiting the next passage, stayed at the home of an old woman, who "was very kind and with utmost good will" gave him a dinner of beefsteak. When his aged hostess learned he was a printer, she advised that he open up a shop in this town; but with only a few copper coins in his pockets he could not finance the project and went on to Philadelphia, where he had already procured a position.

His employer later received an order from the government of New Jersey for a big issue of paper money, and Franklin, as a trusted and expert foreman, was sent to Burlington to set up the print shop and print the currency. He made Burlington his home for many months before completing the work and then returned to Philadelphia, later to establish there a publishing business still in existence. During his employment here the author of "Poor Richard's Almanac" won the close friendship of many prominent Burlingtonians and in later years frequently visited this city.

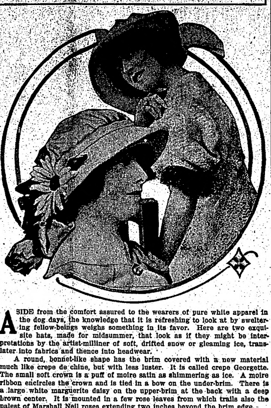
Revive Childhood Romance.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—The childhood romance of Mrs. Augusta Doty, seventy, widow of Jos. Doty of Pleasant Valley, and Peter J. Barnes, seventy-five, ended in their marriage at Pleasant Valley. Barnes went to Kansas years ago, but did not lose track of his childhood playmate. After learning of the death of Mr. Doty he communicated with the widow. The wedding followed.

Original "Star Spangled Banner."

Washington.—The original "star spangled banner" was placed on exhibition at the Smithsonian Institution here. The flag was the inspiration for the famous patriotic song. Col. George Armistead, who was in command of Ft. Henry on September 13 and 14, 1814, kept the flag and it was handed down to his grandson, Eben Appleton, of New York, who loaned it to the institution.

PURE WHITE FOR WARMEST DAYS



ASIDE from the comfort assured to the wearers of pure white apparel in the dog days, the knowledge that it is refreshing to look at by sweltering fellow-beings weighs something in its favor. Here are two exquisite hats, made for midsummer, that look as if they might be interpretations by the artist-milliner of soft, drifted snow or gleaming ice, translater into fabrics and thence into headwear.

A round, bonnet-like shape has the brim covered with a new material much like crepe de chine, but with less luster. It is called crepe Georgette. The small soft crown is a puff of moire satin as shimmering as ice. A moire ribbon encircles the crown and is tied in a bow on the under-brim. There is a large white marguerite daisy on the upper-brim at the back with a deep brown center. It is mounted in a few rose leaves from which trails also the palest of Marshall Neil roses extending two inches beyond the brim edge.

Folds of snowy maline rest against the hair, supported by an under-brim which is really an extension of the crown. This beautiful conception belongs in that class of millinery to which the designer turns when possessed of the airiest of fancies.

A white hemp shape trimmed with ribbon veiled with maline and finished with a pair of wings deserves a special interest. It is a peculiar shape with a poke-bonnet front and a brim that widens and rolls up at the back.

Contrary to the popular mode of the season, which shows wings and quills mounted as in flight, these wings are poised as if at rest, which is exactly right for a hot-weather hat.

The wonderful coat of Irish-crochet lace has a daring touch on the sleeves. They are short puffs, not reaching to the elbow, and are finished with bands of dark brown fur. The idea is eccentric but perhaps intended to remind us of winter and cold weather in the midst of middle-summer heat.

FOR WEAR ON CAR OR BOAT

The most serviceable and durable dressing gown for the traveler is made of some dark, inconspicuous, untransparent material.

Crepe de chine is ideal for summer wear. A dressing gown of this material in a dark color can be worn comfortably for months. It does not show oil easily, and when it is soiled it can be easily washed and will look as well after a trip to the laundry as before. A dark gown, besides the fact that it will not show soil so quickly as a light one, can be comfortably worn on the way to the bath on shipboard and in the corridors of hotel or pension.

A gown of dark blue crepe de chine could be made with a little V-shaped vest of gathered cream or ecru net and with net undersleeves, or a ribbon sash in gay colors and futurist design could be used to give the somber gown a more interesting character.

NEEDLE BOOK TO FIT PURSE

With This Equipment Any Ordinary Mishap to Garment May Be Quickly Repaired.

Almost any of the scraps of pretty silk ribbon that are in the family rag bag may be fashioned into a needle book small enough to go into the average sized purse without overcrowding the receptacle. At the inner side of one cover, which of course is mounted over thin cardboard, should be a tacked-down sheet of fine flannel in which may be stuck needles of several sizes, and at the inside of the opposite cover should be straps of the silk through which reels may be run. These reels, formed of silk-covered matches or toothpicks, should be wound with a few yards of black and white sewing silk, black and white linen thread, black and white or tan silk floss, and, thus equipped, the shopper is prepared to repair any ordinary mishap to her garb.

Soft Bows on Lingerie.

Fastidious women have long been tired of the lingerie garments that are slotted for baby ribbon in all possible places, but the touch of color which the ribbon gives is introduced by single soft bows. On the newest French nightgowns there are two large buttonholes to be found at the front and through these is passed a soft wide ribbon which is tied in a bow. This is much less troublesome than threading ribbons through slots or stitching on a made bow.

Ye Velvet Neckband and Bracelet.

The first is narrow.

Sometimes tabs hang down.

Others in a tight little bow at the back.

The "bracelet" is a narrow velvet band tied in bow on the outside of the arm.

It can be worn on the bare arm or over a very long tight fitting sleeve.

Traveler's Hat Box.

Make your own hatbox of pasteboard and cover it with wall paper or cretonne. Hinge the sides to the bottom of the box with baby ribbon run through eyelets. Make the top to hinge to one of the sides. This can be folded and carried in a trunk, and is more convenient than a regular hatbox.

TAILOR-MADE GOWN

Slimmer Than Ever.

Smart women of this season look slimmer than they have done for a long time. To secure the effect desired undergarments that add to the size are being dispensed with. To take the place of the abandoned petticoats the new muslin, which is very thin, crepons and other transparent materials, are being used, while some women who may be described as ultra-fashionable have conceived a petticoat combination made out of woven silk which fits the hips closely.

Summer Cushion.

It's a beauty.

It is comfortable.

You may sit upon it.

You may use it as a pillow.

It makes an admirable boat cushion.

It may also serve for a life preserver.

It is covered in Spanish or artificial leather.

Covered with genuine leather, the cushion costs $3.50.

Lace Fichu Over Silk Gown.

A charming fichu of maline lace is worn over a gown of soft silk or sheer material. The lace is draped in soft folds across the back and shoulders, gradually sloping toward the front, where it ends in two sharp points.

BOUND TO HAVE EXCITEMENT

Without Proper Materials for Gambling, "Germany" Schaefer Proposed to Utilize Household Articles.

"Germany" Schaefer, the Senators' clown-coach, just can't resist gambling. He once attended a party given by a friend, and as everything was convivial, Germany suggested that a little gambling be done.

"Have you any cards in the house?" he asked the lady of the house.

"No, Mr. Schaefer, we don't have card playing here."

"Well, have you got some dice?" Schaefer insisted.

"I tell you," said the lady, a little testily, "we don't allow gambling of any sort."

"Well, have you got any wash-tubs in the cellar?" inquired the persistent Schaefer.

"Certainly we have. There are half a dozen tubs down there."

"Well, for the love of mud," bellowed Herman, "get me three tubs and a watermelon, and I'll work the three-shell game."—New York American.

We show the stomach little or no consideration until one day we find that it has gone on a strike. We sit back in despair. The stomach is rebellious to the degree in which we have abused it.

The symptoms seem to show that something is wrong with the stomach. The trouble in reality is in the blood which your careless habits have made impure. The proper treatment then is to build up and cleanse the blood. A thorough trial of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do this well. Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and a FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. CASTORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS, if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

Paper Cannon.

To the amazingly long list of articles made of paper there may be added paper cannon, which have been manufactured at the Krupp works, in Germany. These paper field pieces are for special use of the infantry. Their caliber is a little less than two inches, and the pieces are so light that a soldier can easily carry one. But the resistance is greater than that of a field piece of steel of the same caliber. It is not to be understood that these paper guns are in any way to replace those made of steel. The paper arms are intended merely for uses in situations where the movement of field artillery would be impraticable. Paper artillery on the field of battle seems an extraordinary thing, but it is hardly more so than paper wheels for freight cars on railways appeared when they were first introduced, or, for that matter, than paper water pails were.

Alexander Stephens as a Lawyer.

In his own profession of the law Alexander H. Stephens' fine intellectual sincerity stands out fully, and well proves that success requires neither dishonesty nor shuffling. "What business do you follow, Alex?" said his uncle to him in the early days. "I am a lawyer." After an ominous silence the uncle spoke again. "Alex, don't you have to tell lies?" Alex did not have to tell lies. Hear what he says, reviewing his career in old age: "No advocate should ever assert as matter of fact in his client's case what he knows is not such; any code of morals justifying him in this woes not deserve the name." And again, more personally: "My rule from the time I was admitted to the bar was: First, to investigate a case submitted to me, to inquire into the facts and the law applicable to it; then, if I did not believe the party entitled to success before the court, I told him so and declined to appear or prosecute the case."—Gamaliel Bradford, Jr., in the Atlantic.

For "Mr. Fragile."

A man with an express package under his arm, stepped up to the box office window of a New York theater and, addressing Frank Loomis, asked:

"Andbody here named Fragile?"

"No," replied Loomis.

"Well, that's the name on this package."

Loomis took a look. The box was addressed to the manager of the London pictures. Over the address was inscribed:

"Fragile!"

WHY CREAM TESTS VARY

A common fault is to start the inflow of milk before full speed has been reached. To bring the machine up to full speed after the milk has been started requires so much power that it is seldom done, and the machine turns harder throughout the entire run. Uneven or jerky speed will also cause variations in the cream test, as well as greater wear and tear of the machine. If a gasoline engine is used for power it should not be directly conneeted to the separator.

The rate of inflow of milk will affect the cream tests. We find that if we cut down the inflow of milk, leaving other conditions unchanged, we will decrease the amount of both cream and skim milk, but the cream in greater proportion. The smaller volume of cream resulting will thus have a higher fat test. This effect is not great unless a considerable reduction of inflow is made. We then obtain a small amount of very rich cream, but usually lose an increased amount of butterfat in the skim milk. On modern separators the inflow of milk is regulated automatically by a float, so that little attention need be given this factor if the separator is being operated according to directions.

The steadiness with which the separator bowl revolves is another factor. If the bowl trembles or shakes or, for any reason, does not run smoothly the test will vary, usually dropping. Experiments at the Kansas Station illustrate this well. The average cream test in five trials when the machines were running steadily was 29.9 per cent. With the bowls running unsteadily the average test was 19.84 per cent, the variations in test ranging from two to 16 per cent. At the same time the loss of fat in the skim milk was from two to fifteen times as great. The cause of vibration or unsteady running are numerous. The machine not firmly fastened to a firm foundation, or not level, the bowl put together wrongly, or at the wrong height in the separator frame, the bowl out of balance, the bearings worn or not properly adjusted, lack of oil or the use of poor oil, may all cause vibration of the bowl. Any vibration not only effects the cream test, as shown above, but also means a greater loss of fat in the skim milk, more wear and tear on the machine and more power required to run.

The acidity of the milk has but little effect on separation, as long as the milk is not sour enough to clog the machine. Partial clogging of the cream outlet means a richer cream. Milk sour enough to clog the outlets cannot be warmed for separation and the loss of fat in the skim milk is usually greater.

The effect of temperature of separation upon the cream test is variable. Eckles states that the cream test increases as the temperature decreases, the cooler cream having an increased viscosity, which lessens the capacity of the cream outlet. Other authorities state that the higher the temperature the richer the cream. within the range of ordinary separating temperatures, from 70 to 90 degrees F., there is no great change. Below 70 degrees the effect is more marked. The effect of temperature on the efficiency of separation is perhaps more important. Cleanest separation will occur at about 90 degrees, above this temperature there is practically no increase in efficiency, and so no advantage in warming the milk to a higher temperature for separation. As the temperature decreases the efficiency lessens. Down to 70 degrees it is still good, but below that point the loss of butterfat in the skimmilk increase quite rapidly. If milk is separated soon after milking, as it should be, temperature will not be a factor of great importance.

The fat test of the whole milk will also affect the test of the cream, the higher the test of the milk being separated the richer testing cream delivered. For example, with a milk containing 3.1 per cent fat the cream tested 24.6 per cent fat, with a milk testing 4.6 per cent fat the same machine operated under exactly the same conditions delivered cream testing [illegible] per cent [illegible] this to be due to the fact that the fat content of the milk does not affect the relative proportions of cream and skim milk delivered by the separator; the richer milk thus means that the resulting cream must contain a greater percentage of butterfat. So if but a small amount of rich cream is wanted for some special purpose it can be secured by running some cream through the separator with the milk.

The amount of skim milk or water used to flush the bowl may be important, as a part of it will pass into the cream and lower the test. Excessive flushing should be avoided. If only one quart of water or skimmed milk is run into 50 pounds of cream testing 30 per cent. fat, the test will be reduced to 28.8 per cent. With small amounts of cream this lowering of test by the flush water would be even more marked.

Other factors may effect the cream test to some extent, but the above are most important. Only by considering them in his daily work can the farmer keep his cream tests uniform, and even then there will be more or less variation.

TO ADVERTISE THE COUNTY

Julius Pleth Running Ads in Seventy-five Papers of State

Invites Patrons of State Fair to See Red Lake County Exhibit

Julius Pleth, the local land dealer, is planing an extensive advertising campaign for this fall. He recently had printed several thousand pamphlets containing descriptive and illustrated matter relative to Plummer and Red Lake county, together with the land he has for sale. In addition Mr. Pleth is having inserted in seventy-five papers of Southern Minnesota and Iowa a good write-up of his lands and the opportunities of this country, with an invitation to visit the Red Lake county exhibit at the state fair, Sept. 1-6, and see the quality of grain and grass produced on just such land as he offers for sale.

"I am convinced," said Mr. Pleth, "that if we can attract attention to the quality and quantity of crops produced on land selling from $16 to $40, many settlers are bound to locate here. This land will produce as much per acre as land worth 4 and 5 times as much. The Red Lake county exhibit at the state fair this year will be a revelation to the skeptical."

BADLY BURNED SAVING HORSES

Gilbert Peterson Has Narrow Escape When Stable Is Burned.

Two Horses Injured; Hay and Wagon Burn; Loss $150.

Gilbert Peterson, residing six miles east of here, was badly burned about the face and hands Wednesday, as a result of trying to save his horses which were caught in a burning tent. One mare and her colt were also badly burned. It is thought the colt will die.

Peterson and Nick Nelson were cutting hay one-half mile south of here, stabling the horses in a large tent and living in a smaller one. A small fire had been built in front of the entrance to keep away flies and misquotoes, and while preparing the evening meal, the stable and a quantity of hay caught fire, spreading rapidly. Peterson and Nelson cut the ropes tying the horses, Peterson, one horse and a colt receiving bad burns. Nelson and the other horses, seven in number, escaped uninjured. Besides the hay and tent, a wagon was burned, the loss totaling $150.

MAY INVALIDATE HOMESTEADS

U. S. District Court Ruling Would Effect Many Pennington Co. Farmers.

Citizenship Must Be Completed Wiithin Seven Years.

According to an order received by Clerk of Court H. E. Ives from the chief of the bureau of naturalization a large number of foreign born residents of this county are in danger of losing their lands which they secured by homestead entry under their affidavit of intention or first papers. Under a recent federal statute all foreign born persons who have failed to complete their final proof within seven years after they have taken out their first papers will forfeit all rights to citizenship. This law will take effect on and after September 27, 1913, and will effect the standing or all persons who took out papers on or after September 26, 1906.

One United States district court has held that the seven-year period of limitations began to run on Sept. 26, 1906 against all declarations of intention executed prior to that time. If this is held to be the law it will effect a large number of homesteaders in this county. All persons who have taken out first papers prior to Sept. 26, 1906, should call at the clerk of court's office at once and file their affidavits in order to be heard at the January term.—Thief River Falls News-Press.

CHICKENS PLENTIFUL; VIOLATIONS FEW

Game Warden, Geo. F. Munch, of Crookston was here Wednesday evening enroute to Oklee, where it is reported that chickens are being shot. While here Mr. Munch stated that very few violations of the game laws are being reported to his office, practically all citizens throughout the country aiding the commission in suppressing before season hunting.

According to Mr. Munch chickens were never before so plentiful as this year.

Shortage of Harvest Hands.

Help for the Harvest fields this season is going to be hard to secure. Local organizations must get busy and round up the situation. Rulings of the Interstate Commerce Commission prohibit the railroads from making rate concessions for this class of business. Transient harvest laborers seldom have sufficient funds to carry them from the larger cities to the fields and arrangements will have to be made to advance fares in whole or in part in order to secure reliable and competent help. This has been accomplished by many localities through concerted action taken by leading farmers with their local Board of Trade or Commercial Club. The danger is DELAY in perfecting arrangements. Something should be done at once to avoid troubles experienced in previous years. The railroads are willing to help and do all they can. The Soo line has requested the following information from its agents:

1. Number of men wanted........
2. When wanted........to........
3. Wages per day without board $..

JOHN LIND IS SAFE IN MEXICO CAPITAL

HOURS OF SUSPENSE IN WASHINGTON BEFORE NEWS IS RECEIVED.

ATTACK HAD BEEN RUMORED

Envoy Will Make Careful Study of the Situation Before U. S. Acts Further—Big Huerta Demonstration.

Washington, Aug. 12.—John Lind, personal representative of President Wilson to investigate the Mexican situation, arrived safely in Mexico City Sunday night, according to a dispatch received at the state department from Charge O'Shaughnessy of the United States embassy in Mexico City.

News of the safe arrival of Mr. and with his wife and party in the Mexican capital followed several hours of suspense.

Much Uneasiness Felt.

The complete absence of any information of the progress of the party from the time it left Vera Cruz added to the uneasiness which was heightened by vague rumors of attacks on Mr. Lind and his family and associates.

Secretary Bryan remained at his desk until 1:30 a. m. awaiting a report from the embassy at Mexico City. When it finally came it proved to be merely a terse announcement of the arrival of the special envoy, coupled with the announcement that he and his party were safely quartered at the Hotel Lascurain.

With the arrival in Mexico City of Mr. Lind, administration officials declared that no further steps would be taken in carrying out the policy of the United States toward Mexico until Mr. Lind had made a careful study of the general situation there.

Distinct Course of Action.

While the president had mapped out a distinct course of action about which strict secrecy is being maintained, it is known that the instructions to be sent Mr. Lind from time to time will depend largely on developments in the Mexican capital in the next few weeks.

Mr. Lind will make all his recommendations to Charge O'Shaughnessy so that whatever representations are transmitted by the latter to the Huerta government will differ in no way from the notes the American government has hitherto addressed to the defacto authorities in the Mexican capital. Mr. Lind's connection with them, it was stated, would not be apparent.

It was stated authoratively that the American government had no intention of formally calling on President Huerta to resign his office and that any representations made would be to call the attention to earlier promises for a free and constitutional election, pointing out that recognition by the United States must be withheld until such elections take place.

Secretary Daniels announced last night that the cruiser Tacoma had been ordered from Newport, R. I., to the east coast of Mexico to take aboard American citizens desiring to leave the southern republic. Many Americans have found refuge on board the battleships of Rear Admiral Fletcher's squadron but as the battleships can go into only a few of the larger harbors, it was decided to dispatch a vessel of light draft to drop into shallow harbors along the coast.

Senate Supports Wilson.

Further enlightenment as to the errand of Mr. Lind and the policy the president had formed came last night from Senator Bacon, chairman of the senate committee on foreign relations who declared that President Wilson had the hearty support of members of the senate generally, regardless of party lines.

Huerta Watches Demonstration.

Mexico City.—Students and laborers, estimated to number 1,000, paraded the streets of the capital carrying banners as a token of their approval of President Huerta's stand against accepting meditation by the United States.

President Huerta had given his approval to the demonstration and he and the members of his cabinet reviewed the parade from a balcony of the palace. There was no disorder.

Wheelock, N. D., Has Fire.

Wheelock, N. D., Aug. 11.—A fire loss of $25,000 was experienced here in the destruction of the Wheelock State bank and two other buildings. The Williston fire department, summoned to the aid of the local fire company, made the trip here in an automobile.

General Jones Dying; War Hero.

Binghampton, N. Y., Aug. 11.—General Edward Jones, one of the few surviving leaders of the Civil war, is dying at his home in this city. General Jones was born June 3, 1828, at Utica, and went from Boston as colonel of the Sixth Massachusetts regiment at the opening of the Civil war. On reaching Washington, President Lincoln shook Colonel Jones' hand at the depot and said:

"If you had not arrived last night we should have been in the hands of the rebels before morning."

To Revive French Industries.

Havre, Aug. 11.—An Arctic expedition headed by Jules Von Payer has just left for the north polar regions for the purpose of exploring and gathering scientific data in Frans Josef Land. It is understood the expedition incidentally will attempt to revive the French whale and seal fishing industries in the arctic by locating good fisheries. Von Payer is an Australian. His father, Julius Von Payer, led the Tegethoff expedition in the seventies which discovered Franz Josef Land.

County Agent's Films Depicting Work of West Central Section of State a Feature of Conference at Morris.

Morris.—The success of the camera in spreading the gospel of better agriculture among the farmers in the West Central Minnesota Development association was demonstrated so convincingly at the meeting at the Morris school of agriculture of county agents and officers of the association that pictures are to be universally used in all the counties hereafter. Such at least was the opinion of every one attending, when A. L. Norling, agent in Grant county, showed a remarkable series of lantern slides of agricultural scenes taken in his county.

Federal Expert Present.

Among those present was J. C. McDowell, of the United States department of agriculture, in charge of county agents in twelve states in the middle and northern part of the country. Of the 140 county agents in the United States, he has supervision of 100.

Mr. McDowell said that Minnesota and North Dakota led all the states in the union in the number of counties organized to promote better farming. Missouri and Michigan follow closely.

Several Counties Organized.

Ten Minnesota counties have agents and five others have organized. The five are looking for agents. Two appointments announced by Professor Wilson were William Underwood, graduate of the Minnesota agricultural college, to Lac Qui Parle county, and Benjamin A. Gray, a prominent potato farmer from Osseo, Minn., to Norman county.

WINTON MAYOR RAISES "LID"

Closes Town Tight One Sunday Just to Show People What It Would Be Like.

Winton.—After a week's enforcement of the blue laws, Mayor Stein, Sunday, allowed a wide-open town, with the exception of the saloons. This sudden change was brought about owing to complaints of the citizens who bitterly opposed the closing of candy stores and livery barns because of the newly made ordinance. Others ridiculed the law and mayor.

Hereafter all harmless establishments, such as candy stores, will be open. Pool rooms and billiard halls will also remain open. Cows and horses will have the liberty of being at large. Mayor Stein when questioned as to his motive, stated that he simply "was rigid on one Sunday to show the people what the town would be like if everything was closed."

ROBBERS SECURE RARE COINS

Collection of Lifetime, Belonging to Rochester Fire Chief, and Valued at $10,000.

Rochester.—A rare collection of coins valued at over $10,000 belonging to Fire Chief John Boylhart of this city, was stolen in a daring midnight robbery here Tuesday night, when thieves entered the cigar store of Paul Schole. Nothing but the case of coins was taken, the case being found later near the Cole mill.

The coin collection represented the life work of Mr. Boylhart and contained many rare pieces that cannot be replaced, one coin being dated 2,000 years before Christ.

The theft was not reported before morning and no clue has been found to the robbers.

Hog Cholera Epidemic Reported.

Winona.—Hog cholera has broken out at Minnesota City in a slightly epidemic form and the assistance of State Veterinarian Dickinson, of St. Paul, has been secured to help local inspector Archibald stamp out the disease. Quarantine has been established in three instances and will be extended still further if necessary. This is the first epidemic of the kind experienced here in many years.

Post Office Employe Is Accused.

Bemidji.—Edward Gould, for several years a trusted employe of the postoffice in this town, was arrested by Deputy United States Marshal Tufts of Crookston on the charge of embezzlement, it being claimed he opened a registered letter in the local postoffice and took the money. He was arraigned before United States Marshal Simmons and his bail placed at $2,500, pending a preliminary hearing. Gould worked nights, and it is claimed that he had been rifling letters.

MINNESOTANS BEGAN FIGHT

Express Rate Investigation That Resulted in Sweeping Cut Started in This State.

Minneapolis.—The sweeping reduction in express rates just ordered by the Inter-state Commerce Commission is the outcome of proceedings against the express companies begun in 1909 by three citizens of Minnesota; Geo. S. Loftus, Congressman James Manahan; and State Senator B. E. Sundberg, of Kennedy.

Acting as attorney for Loftus and Sundberg, Manahan filed suits against the leading express companies charging that the companies maintained excessively high rates and that there was no competition among the large companies. The hearings held in St. Paul and later in New York brought out evidence on which the Inter-state Commerce Commission last year ordered an average reduction of fifteen per cent in express rates. Continuing the investigation along the same lines the commission finally ordered the cut just announced.

The reduction will mean a saving to the people of from $50,000,000 to $75,000,000 annually.

HAIL DAMAGE VERY GREAT

Anoka Swept by Heavy Storm—Crops Are Practically Destroyed and Other Damage Done.

Anoka.—Anoka and vicinity Thursday night was visited by a heavy hail and electrical storm. Meager reports from the surrounding country in Hennepin and Anoka counties indicate that the hail swept a strip one and one-half miles wide and several miles long. In some districts crops were almost totally destroyed, corn being battered down, small grain crushed into the ground, trees stripped of their leaves, vegetable gardens ruined and many small buildings destroyed by the force of the storm.

INSANE; HOLDS TOWN AT BAY

Ambushes Self in Barber Shop Basement and Routed Only After Fierce Battle.

Anoka.—A man now generally supposed to be insane ambushed himself in the cellar of Horace Hupschin's barber shop in the center of this village and for nearly seven hours held the entire town at bay.

He was captured only after he had wounded John Haley, chief of police, and after the fire department, playing six streams of water into the cellar, had tried unsuccessfully to drown him out. A combination of burning ammonia and oil of mustard finally "smoked' him into a stairway leading to the basement, when the police, assisted by citizens, finally overpowered him.

Le Sueur Progressive Club.

Le Sueur.—David Hinshaw, of New York, national organizer of the Progressive party, met several Le Sueur Progressives at lunch here and discussed matters of importance to the party. A Progressive club was formed, with Ora J. Parker as president, and Herman Weckworth as secretary, and an effort will be made to fully organize the county.

New Minnesota Interurban Line.

Minneapolis.—The Minnesota Central Railway Company, which will be commonly known as the "Central Interurban," has been incorporated in Maine with $1,000,000 capital stock and will begin work immediately upon the construction of a line of road from Minneapolis to St. Cloud, Minn., with a plan for eventual continuation to the Cuyuna range and Mille Lacs. SCHOOLS OF COUNTY UNITE

Rochester and Three Rural Institutions Associate in Providing Industrial Education.

Rochester.—Three rural schools of Olmsted county have become associated with the Rochester schools under the Putnam act, the final action being taken at a meeting of the Rochester board of education, when it was voted to accept the districts as associate schools, the new district becoming known as the Central school district of Olmsted county. A meeting of the officers of the three districts was also held at which it was voted to levy the two-mill tax which goes to the Rochester school fund.

Under the Putnam act one member of each district will have the privilege of attending the regular meetings of the Rochester board of education, having a voice in all matters pertaining to industrial education. Superintendent H. A. Johnson will have supervision of the courses of study and the Rochester school will provide each district with agricultural training.

Each district will be allowed to send its students to the city schools without tuition, and it is possible that one district will close the country school entirely. The city receives $150 from each district, which is paid by the state, as well as the additional two-mill tax.

BLACK AND YELLOW ROAD DAY

Southern Minnesota Development League Sets Aside Day for Designating Highway.

Tracy.—The Southern Minnesota Better Development league set aside Friday, Aug. 8, as a day for marking the black and yellow trail, which extends from Chicago to the Yellowstone park and passes through St. Charles, Rochester, Owatonna, Waseca, Mankato, New Ulm, Sleepy Eye, Springfield, Lamberton, Tracy, Balaton, Tyler, Lake Benton, entering South Dakota at Elkton.

An official party made the run over this trail from Chicago to the Yellowstone park, leaving Chicago Aug. 12.

In the party there were some of the best known good roads advocates in the Northwest, who will make a series of addresses on the advantages of the black and yellow trail as a section of a national highway.

Arrangements were made by the various towns and cities along the route to extend to them a most hearty welcome.

DOG SAVES TWO CHILDREN

Attacks Stray Panther and Gives Up Life While Little Tots Flee.

Red Lake Falls.—Ridicule of the leopard story which has been circulated in this vicinity came near being turned to tragedy here when a large animal of the panther species appeared at the farm home of a Mr. Wagemann, living near this city, and started toward his two children, who were playing in the yard.

The children owe their lives to the courage and sagacity of the family dog, a Scotch collie, which charged the animal and diverted its attention until the children reached the house. The dog was literally torn to pieces in the battle with the beast. Mrs. Wagemann said it all happened so quickly that she could not tell what kind of animal it was, except that it looked like a tiger. After it had killed the dog it escaped into the corn field and was gone.

Business Men Buy Paper.

Mantorville.—The Mantorville Express, edited by H. A. Smith for the last thirty years, has been sold to an organization of the business men of the village. Professor L. F. Knowles, for the last three years teacher of manual training in the schools here, will be managing editor. He plans to make the paper an adjunct of the manual training department of the schools. Editor Smith was forced by ill health to retire from active newspaper work and will leave next week with his wife and daughter for Enumclaw, Wash.

Murder Mystery Is Baffling.

St. Paul, Aug. 9.—Additional light was thrown upon the mysterious murder of Fred Kvamme of Lead, S. D., in the St. Paul Northern Pacific railroad yards Wednesday night by the discovery of the whereabouts of the missing brother, Benjamin; but the police have been unable to determine a motive for the crime, and so far have been baffled in their efforts to find the slayer. Detectives discovered that the two young men had prepared to leave for Fargo, N. D., to get work in the harvest fields.

Aged Rescuer Burns to Death.

Fergus Falls.—Mrs. Phoebe Sterns, an aged woman living about twenty miles southwest of this city, was burned to death. She was making her home with her daughter, Mrs. Charles Snyder, and they were burning some corncobs in the kitchen stove. A granddaughter, 9 years of age, was standing near when a spark struck out from the stove and set fire to the child's clothing. Mrs. Sterns hurried to her assistance and succeeded in putting out the fire, but her own clothing caught while she was doing so.

Sun Stroke Kills Winona Man.

Winona.—John Welch, aged 70, a resident of Winona for forty years, succumbed to the effects of a sun stroke here, which brought on unconsciousness, and he died four hours later at the Winona hospital.

Winthrop.—Emmet Hull of Winthrop, is the winner of the state fair essay contest and will be Sibley county's representative at the farm boys' encampment at the state fair. Reuben Sandberg, also of Winthrop, is alternate.

Parasites.

"Life is a game of touch and go."

Too Much Ball.

"Why did you move away from Chicago?"

"The doctor advised my husband to move to some town with only one team to worry about.

Laws of Physics.

Caustic Calkins dropped his watch on the sidewalk. "Did it stop?" inqueried Solicitous Jones. "As the flagging is four inches thick," replied Calkins, "it did. But I think, if I get a heavier watch it may go through next time."

Heat Lightning.

Heat lightning is ascribed to distant lightning flashes which are below the horizon, but illuminate the higher strata of clouds so that their brightness is visible at great distances; they produce no sound, probably in consequence of the fact of their being so far off that the rolling of thunder cannot reach the ear of the observer.

Right-Handed Plants.

That there are right-handed plants and left-handed plants has been reported to the Cambridge (England) Philosophical society by R. L. Compton. In an examination of eight varieties of two-rowed barley the first leaf was found to twist to the left in 53 per cent of more than 12,000 seedlings, and an excess of left-handed growth was found also in millet and in oats. In corn there seemed to be no marked tendency either way. No evidence of hereditary peculiarity appears to have been obtained and no special significance of the results is pointed out.

AT LONG CORNERS

The Town Prided Itself on Being Exclusive, but Had Many Gossips.

By FRANK GILMORE.

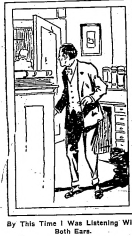
I don't know which was the more unpopular in our town, Anthony Barrett, the banker, or Charlie Meadows, his secretary. I think on the whole that it was Charlie.

Long Corners has always prided itself on being exclusive. But we aren't dudes. So when this fellow Barrett, of whom nothing was known, opened his bank and took Charlie to be his confidential secretary, and they put on the airs of millionaires, and wouldn't mix with the rest of us fellows, it naturally set Long Corners against them.

The first time I met Barrett was at the house of Luella. Luella and I had always understood that we were to be married when I could support her. I couldn't keep her in much style on fifteen a week, which was all that Barrett allowed me as one of his bookkeepers. But I hadn't reckoned on Barrett butting into the game—a man of forty, with nothing known about his past, except that it was reported he had been a jailbird.

Luella grew pretty cold to me when I taxed her about him. At last I had to tell her that if she wanted to flirt with a man old enough to be her father, all right, only she could count me out. She showed me the door then.

I thought for sure she would tell Barrett and he would fire me, but apparently she had too much sense, and things went on in their usual way. None of us fellows in the bank had any sort of respect for Barrett. He didn't treat us like human beings at all. He used to come in carrying a cane, and that made us pretty tired. And Charlie Meadows was just as self-opinionated as he was. So what with all this and Luella's turning me down, I was feeling pretty bad when I happened to overhear a conversation between Barrett and Charlie.



By This Time I Was Listening With Both Ears.

I was putting away some books in the cabinet behind the door of Barrett's private office and the door was a little way ajar, and I heard Charlie strike him for a raise of salary.

"You're getting thirty-five now, Mr. Meadows," said Barrett, in his cold, heartless way, "and that is ten dollars more than you could get anywhere else."

"I guess I'm worth fifty a week to you, Mr. Barrett," Charlie answered in a sort of impudent way.

"Indeed!" said Barrett. "Perhaps you will explain just why you put such an exaggerated value on your services."

By this time I was listening with both ears, as anyone would have done.

"Because, Mr. Barrett," answered Charlie quietly, "I happen to know that you have served a five years' sentence in state's prison for the misappropriation of bank funds."

I just had time to hurry away before Charlie came out. He had been discharged. Barrett thought he could bluff Long Corners. But he couldn't bluff me. I laid hold of Charlie.

"I guess you are feeling pretty sore," I said. "I happened to overhear what Barrett was saying to you. Are you going to make it public?"

"You bet I am," he answered, and his rage made him quite friendly. He had been living under the shadow of the great man and it had turned him into a sort of cheap imitation of him, but now he saw what a fool he had been.

"I'd give a hundred dollars to know just where to hit him first," said Charlie. "I got the whole story from some of his private papers. Confound him! Perhaps he'll try to buy me off. I felt sure I was good for that extra fifteen."

"I'll tell you where to hit him first," I said. "He's stolen my girl—Miss Luella Mason. Isn't that enough? I'm going right round to tell her."

"Wait till tomorrow," he urged. "He may think better of it and offer me a thousand to keep quiet. If he does I'll give you ten per cent."

This sounded good, but I ran him up to a third before agreeing. But on the morrow Barrett was just as cold and self-possessed as ever. And to cap the climax, when Charlie went down to work—his month not being up—Barrett gave him his salary and ordered him out of the office.

"I guess you'll smart for this before many hours are over," sneered Charlie as he went out.

I couldn't neglect my duties, and I was supposed not to know what had happened. I didn't mean to lose my position; I was not going to Luella out of revenge, but as a friend. I knew she was not the girl to tell where she got her information. But I would have given a good deal to have seen Barrett's face when she gave him his walking papers.

I was at her house at eight o'clock, and by good luck she was alone. When she saw me she looked unpleasant; the scoundrel had completely ousted me in her esteem.

"Well, Mr. Coolidge?" she began.

"Well, Miss Mason," I retorted mockingly, "you don't seem very well pleased to see me, but you will thank me warmly enough when I get through. That friend of yours, Barrett, is a thief and a scoundrel."

"Rather hard words to say about a friend of mine," she said. "I suppose you are willing to repeat those words to Mr. Barrett, face to face."

"No, I'm not," I answered. "I don't want to lose my job. It wouldn't be quite fair to be put in that predicament, Luella, when I have only come to you as a friend. Now listen."

She refused to hear me, but I was determined that she should. So I told her everything that Charlie had told me that morning; how Barrett had been cashier in the County and National in Wayne City, and had stolen fifty thousand dollars and served a five-year term for it.

"When did this interesting episode occur?" she asked when I had ended.

"In 1909," I answered.

"Four years ago. But I thought you said he had served a five-year sentence."

"Well, I suppose they let him out early for good behavior," I answered.

I had been so keyed up I hadn't heard the bell ring, and I was still in the middle of my remarks when Barrett walked into the room.

Luella turned from me to him.

"This gentleman," she said, meaning me, "has been so kind as to tell me that old story about the County and National, Anthony." Isn't it a disgusting name—Anthony!

"You seem to have a host of friends, Luella," he answered. "This is the tenth, isn't it?"

"The twelfth," she answered, and then she turned to me. "You are very slow, Mr. Coolidge. Mr. Barrett told me all about that weeks ago, and so have many of his well-wishers. Only you left out the fact that he was pardoned before the first six months were out because the real thief confessed. Good evening, Mr. Coolidge."

Well, I walked out. I wouldn't demean myself by arguing with that sort of man. And I'm still in his bank. That is his confounded hypocritical cunning; he won't discharge me and he won't raise my salary. And Luella and he were married yesterday.

Psychic Channels.

Given a stored up quantity of electricity, it follows that a great resistance will prevent its moving in a certain direction; it also follows that its force will leap over a weak resistance, and will also move toward a strong attracting object, writes William Walker Atkinson in the Nautilus. At first sight, it would appear as if the question of its manifestation were settled—that it must either move along the original line of least resistance, or else along the line of the original greatest attraction from the outside. Stop a moment and consider this proposition, and see if you can find any way to overcome the stated condition. Is there a way to overcome it? Yes! Here it is; Establish new lines of attraction and least resistance by erecting a system of wires leading in the desired direction, and connect the system with the stored-up power. See it? Simple, but marvelously efficient. The stored-up power will forsake the old lines of least resistance—will turn away from the old attracting power—and will, instead, leap joyously and swiftly to the new attractive line of easiest passage, the system of wires erected by you.

Talked Too Much.

Some people can't stand it to have people ask them questions. In a book on "Court Fools," the following true incident is related: Selim, the son of Bajazet, the renowned Turkish conqueror, was one with whom the most favored of his followers could not with impunity venture on freedom of speech. When he was engaged on his Egyptian expedition, one of his officials the most closely attached to his person, hazarded the question as to when his majesty expected to be at Cairo.

"I shall be there," said Selim, "when it may please God. As for thy arrival there, it pleases me that thou shalt stay here."

And herewith, on a sign from the sultan, the unlucky questioner was instantly put to death.—Pathfinder.

Porto Rican Children Studious.

That Porto Rican children are as apt or more apt than American children in their studies is the assertion of Miss Grace E. Josselyn of the Porto Rican Missionary society.

"My experience has been that the Porto Rican children are usually bright and clever when it comes to assimilating studies," she said. "I think they are as apt or more apt than American children. Of course, they have not had a long time in which to pursue their studies.

"Thirteen years ago, when the United States commenced its government of the island, there was only one school in Porto Rico. Today there are two thousand, one thousand of which are public schools."

Joys of Discovery.

What is it that confers the noblest delight? What is that which swells a man's breast with pride above that which any other experience can bring to him? Discovery! To know that you are walking where none others have walked; that you are beholding what human eye has not seen before; that you are breathing a virgin atmosphere.

To give berth to an idea—to discover a great thought—an intellectual nugget, right under the dust of a field that many a brain-plow has gone over before. To find a new planet, to invent a new hinge, to find the way to make the lightnings carry your messages. To be the first—that is the idea.—Mark Twain.

Sensational.

"He has written a new play."

"Original?"

"Yes. The heroine is a married woman."

"Oh, I know. And falls in love with another man."

"No. There's the original part of it. The play shows marriage to be a sacred relation that some people take seriously, and get a good deal of happiness out of."

GLACIERS OF ALASKA

Some Are Retreating, but Many Are Growing Larger.

Were Probably First Known as the Result of Captain Cook's and Admiral Vancouver's Explorations in 1778 and 1794.

Washington.—It is very probable that more American travelers are familiar with the picturesque fiords and glaciers of Scandinavia than have viewed the incomparable scenery afforded by the coast of their own Alaska, where the somber inlets are bounded by sheer and towering cliffs and where the great fields of slow-moving snow-ice lose themselves in some bay or inlet or pitch off suddenly into the ocean itself. The stream of visitors to this splendid American scenery is annually increasing in numbers, and to those who indorse the "See America First" program Alaska offers a magnificent field.

Alaska glaciers were probably first known as the result of Captain Cook's and Admiral Vancouver's explorations in 1778 and 1794, some of the maps of the early voyagers showing that certain of the bays or fiords were ended by vertical walls of ice, from which blocks fell into the sea. In more recent years discussions of these huge glaciers have been given in the reports of Dall, Gilbert, Tarr, Brooks, Grant, Mendenhall, Martin and others, of the United States geological survey, and in the publications of such organizations as the National Geographic society and the Harriman Alaska expedition.

The most recent contribution on the great glaciers of Alaska is bulletin 526 of the United States geological survey, "Coastal Glaciers of Prince William Sound and Kenai Peninsula, Alaska," by U. S. Grant and D. F. Higgins. The report is profusely illustrated with photographs and with maps of the individual glaciers, as well as two comprehensive maps of Prince William sound and the southwestern part of Kenai peninsula, showing the location of scores of glaciers. The report is in fact a guide and handbook to this wonderful scenic region which must prove invaluable to the tourist.

Yale Glacier, Alaska.

Many valuable data and important measurements of glaciers in the United States, Alaska, and elsewhere have been brought together from time to time, and it is probably the general impression that since the vast ice sheet which covered the northern part of North America began its retreat the glaciers of the continent have been continually shrinking. It is therefore interesting to note from the illustrations and descriptions in bulletin 526 that some of these Alaska glaciers are progressing and growing larger rather than retrogressing, many huge forests being upturned and devastated by the irresistible advance of the ice. In other glaciers the retreat within a period of ten years has been more than a mile. The great magnitude of some of these glaciers is seen in the descriptions, which indicate the height of the tidal ice cliffs that form the termini of the glaciers as being from 300 to 400 feet. Slowly moving down the mountain valleys, some of them steeply pitched and others relatively flat, these stupendous ice fields include billions of tons of ice. Many young Americans can find here memorials of their alma mater, for along College fiord are Yale glacier, Harvard glacier, Smith glacier, Bryn Mawr glacier, and Vassar and Wellesley glaciers.

FALL CURED WOMAN'S SPINE

Tumble Downstairs Did What Surgeons of Many Countries Couldn't Do.

Wilmington, Del.—An expenditure of $16,000 and treatment for years in sanitariums in Germany and Paris failed to accomplish what a fall downstairs did here. Mrs. William Meim of Ellendale, Del., was cured of a dislocated spine in this unusual manner. The fall forced her spine into place. She said she was well.

She is past middle age, and has long been a sufferer. She had consulted the best surgeons in this country, but in vain. Six years ago she went abroad, and after a course of treatment returned disheartened. In the fall her head was cut and she was severely bruised about the body. She found, however, that she could use her spine. A doctor made a hurried examination and announced the fall had forced it into shape.

INCREASED DEMAND FOR HARNESS HORSES

Prize Winning Team at the Albany County Fair.

(By J. M. BELL.)

In spite of the marked increase in use of automobiles all over the country, it is a well-known fact among horse dealers that the right kind of harness hors is scarce and high. The real lovers of horse flesh still evince a lively sentiment regarding their equine friend, and this sentiment exploits itself in a practical way by good prices for the first class light harness horse, or roadster.

Style, speed, conformation and disposition are the firm cardinal requisites of a high-class light, harness horse, every quality above mentioned is a necessary one and in order as mentioned. Without these four accomplishments an animal of the roadsted class cannot command the top-notch price on the market, so it is greatly to the advantage of the farmer, who at the same time is a breeder, to remember these requisites. It may be safely said that without style the light harness horse does not elicit admiration, that without speed he cannot "keep pace with the times" that without beauty of appearance or conformation he will not set off handsome trappings and equipage—and lastly that lacking a docile disposition he is practically useless for the purpose for which he is meant.

No animal used by man needs to be so carefully handled and trained as the roadster, for oftentimes he is driven by women and children therefore upon his docilit; depends the safety of their lives.

In these days of horse terrifiers—such as motor-cars, bicycles, traction engines and the like, a horse must be thoroughly broken to be sold as safe, or "lady broke." He must be fearless as far as all ordinary objects are concerned, yet he must be imbued with the proper amount of spirit when occasion demands.

As it is a conceded fact among horsemen that the American trotter is the fastest light harness horse in the world, it is natural to suppose that the farmer who wants to raise light harness horses will choose a trotting bred sire, and a dam in whose veins flows a generous infusion of their trotting or thoroughbred (running blood). This line of breeding should bring desired results in the way of colts which will later on develop into road horses of a high type.

There are some families of trotters remarkable for their beauty of appearance and symmetry of form individuals making stylish single drivers, while many handsome carriage teams are of the standard trotting blood. Then again there are families of thoroughbreds that combine beauty with speed, and also show considerable speed at the trot.

The writer well remembers a race horse, strictly thoroughbred, who in doing his work, under the saddle would trot a mile in 3:05 and he was a good race horse at that. The late Senator Leland Stanford of California raised many great trotters (as all horsemen know) by breeding his great stallion Electioneer to mares that are practically thoroughbred. So it goes, running and trotting blood makes a trotter, and a trotter must necessarily be a good roadster even if he is never put into regular training.

We will suppose that a farmer has a pair of light harness horses that he has raised, breeding, style, conformation, education and speed are up to the standard. This pair will perform well in single and double harness, now if the breeder wants to sell from $600 to $800, may be a little more, could be asked and received.

The writer feels assured that the above figures are not extravagant in the least, as the demand for a high type of light harness horse is very good, but horses of this class must come up to the requirements of the trade.

COMFORTABLE HENS ARE THE LAYERS

Anything in Poultry Line Finds Market, but High Prices Paid for Choice Goods.

(By M. K. BOYER.)

Each year the poulterer better understands the care of poultry, knows their wants and has discovered how to keep them comfortable. The comfortable hens are the ones that do the laying.

About thirty years ago when poultry farming was young, as a business, a cry arose that it would not be long before there would be such a surplus of stock that prices would go tumbling, but notwithstanding that there are ten successful plants today to every one thirty years ago and the demand not half reached!

With the increase of supply came the increase of demand and today we are no nearer meeting the demand than we ever were.

However, there is a change in the market which must not be lost sight of. Almost anything in the poultry line sells, but the choicest prices are alone given to the "fancy goods."

The word "fancy" implies more than appearance. It means also quality. Poultry and egg buyers are becoming particular, but they are willing to pay for their goods. If they want the brown eggs they will not take white, and if they prefer the white the brown ones offer no temptation. The market today demands choice, plump, fresh stock. Have you got it? If so, the market is waiting for you.

We have today quite a number of breeds, and all, to a certain extent, are practical. But they will not, any one of them, fill all the purposes; therefore, it is necessary for a man to select only such breeds as will best serve his customers.

Of the entire list of breeds none will meet the demands of Americans so satisfactorily as do the American varieties and in this class the most popular are the Wyandottes, the Plymouth Rocks, with the Rhode Island Reds closely following. Also our American strains of Light Brahmas and Leghorns.

The Brahmas belong to the Asiatic class as a breed, but the Light Brahma as bred by our people is so different from that bred in England that one would hardly suppose them to be of the same family. This is also true of the Leghorns, which belong to the Mediterranean class.

Rye a Poor Ration.

Rye is the poorest of poultry grains. Corn and buckwheat should be fed sparingly, as they are very fattening. Wheat leads as a well balanced food, and barley is a close second. Feeding too much buckwheat has a tendency to produce a white skin and light colored yolks in eggs.

Comfort for Calf.

Plenty of pure water and a shady place to fight flies are two things that are easy to provide for calves, yet mean much to them.

SELECTING AND PREPARING SOILS

Many people make the fatal mistake of expecting alfalfa to do well on soils that are not fit properly to produce any kind of crop, says Bulletin 36 of the Purdue university (Indiana) station. There is just as much need of care in selecting and preparing soils for alfalfa as for any other crop and probably more, because of its deep rooting habits and large plant food requirements.

Deep, loamy soils with open subsoils are undoubtedly best for alfalfa, but there is plenty of evidence to show that it may be successfully produced on almost any type of soil, from light sandy or gravelly loams and peats or mucks to heavy clays, provided that it is well drained, sweet, and properly supplied with organic matter and available plant food. In 348 trials conducted by the Purdue station in recent years in cooperation with farmers throughout Indiana, 68 out of 83 clays, 167 out of 188 loams, and 69 out of 77 sandy soils gave satisfactory results.

Many soils that at present are not fit for alfalfa culture may be made so by providing drainage facilities, correcting acidity, adding organic matter, or supplying needed plant food, according to the requirements. Good drainage is essential in order that the roots may go deep into the soil. Hardpan must be broken up or avoided altogether. Soils that are sour may be made sweet by thorough drainage and the application of lime.

A good supply of decomposable organic matter in the soil helps the bacterial action in making plant food available, facilitates the inoculating process, and together with a good drainage prevents heaving in the spring. For soils that are out of condition in this respect, a good way to supply organic matter if sufficient manure is not available is to raise and plow under a crop of cowpeas or some green manuring crop before attempting to grow alfalfa.

Peat and muck soils may be used for alfalfa if they are well drained and properly supplied with mineral plant food. Potash is nearly always lacking in these soils and often phosphoric acid and lime must also be supplied. Soils that are subject to flooding are not good for alfalfa.

Cleanliness With Ration.

Always discard any decayed potato or other vegetable, and cut away any decayed portion, before boiling them to feed to the poultry. A hen dislikes a rotten potato as much as you do, and if forced to eat it, she is harmed thereby.

Largest Incubator.

PITY ALL FOR HIS FRIEND

Kind Man's Own Trouble Lost in Contemplation of Woe in Store for "Old Biggs."

Lady Constance Stewart Richardson, who has come to America to dance because she is, as she puts it, "stony broke," said the other day:

"Some of my happiest hours have been passed in America. The Americans are the kindest people in the world. When I think of them, I am reminded of George Grave.

"Everybody has heard stories of the meanest man—well, George Grave was known as the kindest man.

"'How is Biggs Doing?'

"'Bad,' George replied. 'Very bad, indeed. Poor old Biggs!'

"'Why, what's the trouble with him?'

"'Why, you see,' said George, 'I've had my salary reduced on account of the hard times, and so I'll only be able to lend Biggs half as much as usual this year for his vacation.'"

ITCHING TERRIBLE ON LIMB

R. F. D. No. 3, Clarkfield, Minn.—"My trouble was of long standing. It started with some small red and yellow spots about the size of a pin head on my leg and every morning there was a dry scale on top covering the affected part and when those scales were falling off the itching was more than I could stand at times. The first year I did not mind it so much as it was only itching very badly at times, but the second year it advanced all around my leg and the itching was terrible. I had to be very careful to have my clothing around the affected part very loose. At night time I often happened to scratch the sore in my sleep. Then I had to stand up, get out of bed and walk the floor till the spell was over.

"I bought lots of salves and tried many different kinds of medicine but without any success. I got a cake of Cuticura Soap and a fifty-cent box of Cuticura Ointment and when I had used them I was nearly over the itching. But I kept on with the Cuticura Soap for six weeks and the cure was complete." (Signed) S. O. Gorden, Nov. 20, 1912.

Has Made His Own Way.

William C. Redfield, the new secretary of commerce, began making his way in the world at fifteen. At that age he was employed as a clerk in the Pittsfield (Mass.) postoffice at three dollars a week. His next step was as salesman for a paper company. From Pittsfield he went to New York, securing a similar place with a paper house. Some time later he became an accountant for a tool manufacturing company, rose to the presidency of the concern, and after thirty years as a manufacturer resigned, having been elected to congress.

London 'Bus Vanishing.

In view of the inquiry now in progress in London in connection with the city's motor traffic, including the question of the motor 'bus, it is of interest to note that while in 1903 there were 3,500 horse 'busses plying the streets of the metropolis this number has now been reduced to 100, and it is expected that by the beginning of 1914 the horse 'bus will have finally vanished. Richard Tilling, whose well-known firm started the famous Tilling 'busses in the year of the great exhibition with a single one-horse omnibus, recently stated that "there will not be a single omnibus horse seen in London by the end of this year." Old horse 'busses are now used as bungalows and cricket pavilions, and though the average original cost of each was $700, they are now sold for about $15 a piece.

The corn and grain contest which was held at the School of Agriculture at Crookston during the Short Course last February awakened considerable interest among the farmers of the counties within the ninth congressional district. A similar contest will be held next February. The farmers should save a bundle or two of the best grain as soon as it is harvested in order that the best sample possible from their fields may be entered in this contest. Large premiums will be offered, many of them having great value. Last year a gasoline engine worth a hundred dollars was given for the best ten pound sample of wheat. If the farmers will select the best grain from the standing field or from bundles and see to it that this grain is carefully handled and graded, they will be able to make a very good showing. This corn and grain contest is a permanent affair and had over four hundred entries last year, and there will be a greater number even this year. Full particulars will be sent out soon from the School regarding the contest.

According to the Continental and Commerce National bank of Chicago, which has collected crop statistics for several years, the six principal crops will fall below the yield a year ago. The wheat estimate is 739,000,000 bushels, which is 9,000,000 more than a year ago; oats, 1,000,000,000 bushels, 415,000,000 less; corn, 2,800,000,000, 324,746,000 less; hay, 66,610,000 tons, 6,081,000 less; rye, 36,854,000 bushels, 1,210,000 more, and cotton 14,700,000 bales, an increase of 1,000,000 bales. This should mean prosperity and good prices for the Northwest, as the bank estimates show that the three states having the largest yields and exceeding that of last year are Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota. The only cloud in the sky is opening the markets of the United States to the agricultural products of other countries on a near free trade basis by the proposed tariff bill, which will probably be in force within a couple of months.

A move is on foot to ask congress to provide a way whereby states may tax nonresident catalogue houses on the amount of business they do in such states. For instance, catalogue houses in Chicago do thousands of dollars worth of business in Minnesota, yet contribute not a cent in taxation to the state, and they do this business in competition with local merchants who are taxed heavily for the support of schools, building of roads, etc. The local merchant is discriminated against, and the catalogue house should either be required to pay a license, the same as a pack peddler or pay a tax in proportion to the business it does in the state.

UNCLE SAM OFFERS 8,406 VIRGIN FARMS

Nearly 9000 160-acre farm homes will be drawn by the "lucky ones" as the result of throwing open of 1,345,000 acres of land upon the Ft. Peck Indian reservation in Northeastern Montana next month. This is the last great land drawing Uncle Sam has to offer his people and one of the greatest in the history of government land openings in point of fertility. Government agricultural experts estimate that when this vast strech of virgin soil is tilled it will add about 25,000,000 bushels of grain annually to the production of the U. S.—enough to feed an entire nation.

The interior department is making extensive preparations to rush a big crops of clerks to Glasgow, Havre and Great Falls, Mont., which are to be the registration points. These land offices will be open September 1 next and the work of filing for this land will then begin. The people will have a chance to continue filing until September 20.

The actual value of this land is is said by government experts to be about $25.00 an acre, but the apprisal for its opening for settlement is only from $2.50 to $7 per acre. The drawing will take place in this way. The names of all who file will be placed in a big box and the envelopes drawn out one by one and numbered, until enough envelopes are taken from the box to correspond with the number of quarter sections available—8,406.

Actual settlement will begin May 1, 1914. Settlement is the same as under the homestead law, except that the appraised valuation must be paid from $2.50 to $7 per acre—one-fifth down at time of entry and the rest in five annual payments.

4000 ATTEND FAIR LAST THURSDAY

The Twelfth Annual Pennington County Fair, which closed at Thief River Falls last Friday, surpassed all previous fairs in attendance, the number of exhibits entered. The stock exhibits showed remarkable improvement over those of a few years ago and indicate the increasing prosperity of the farmers. The grain display would have done credit to a state exhibit.

The entire fair was a pronounced success, due to the hearty co-operation of the farmers and citizens of the cities with the fair officials.

State Has $1,000,000 Deficit

The deficit of the state of Minnesota for the fiscal year which ended Sunday, is more than a million dollars. Expenditures for the year were $18,959,762.01, while receipts totaled $17,809,401.76, as shown in a statement issued by State Treasurer Walter J. Smith. The cash balance at the close of business Saturday was $1,842,397.90, compared with $2,992,728.55 a year ago. The general revenue fund shows an overdraft of $590,065.86, though receipts of this fund during the year were $10,235,011.18. The cash balances in other funds total $2,432,433.76.

The revenue fund deficit will be cleared up in another month, as the first semi-annual payment of railroad taxes is due Sept. 1.

Mr. Weston will be escorted by several notables including Governor Eberhart, Mayor Nye of Minneapolis and party, and many others and the trip will be made on a special train.

The Chicago Great Western road will make a four weeks test of giving lower freight rates. Arrangement was made to this effect by the officers of the road, the railroad commission and the attorney-general's office, and was approved by Federal Judge Williard this week. The test is to satisfy the stockholders that the lower rates are not confiscatory.

James Bolinski, a man with half a dozen aliases, and charged with approximately the same number of burglaries, broke jail at Thief River Falls Monday. He had been arrested charged with breaking jail at Waupaca, Wisconsin on August 5. He escaped from the jail at Thief River Falls by picking the lock of his cell and sawing through the heavy iron bars of the window. A reward of $100 has been offered for his capture.

The contract for the construction of the new Red Lake high school building was last week awarded to Contractor Jas. Brady. Contractor Johnson of Crookston is to do the brick work, he having a sub-contract from Mr. Brady for that part of the work. Mr. Brady's bid was $32,268.00. This is for putting up the building exclusive of heating, pluming and ceptic tank. Contracts for these other necessary features will be awarded later.

Subscription Rates $1.25 Per Year In Advance

The corn and grain contest which was held at the School of Agriculture at Crookston during the Short Course last February awakened considerable interest among the farmers of the counties within the ninth congressional district. A similar contest will be held next February. The farmers should save a bundle or two of the best grain as soon as it is harvested in order that the best sample possible from their fields may be entered in this contest. Large premiums will be offered, many of them having great value. Last year a gasoline engine worth a hundred dollars was given for the best ten pound sample of wheat. If the farmers will select the best grain from the standing field or from bundles and see to it that this grain is carefully handled and graded, they will be able to make a very good showing. This corn and grain contest is a permanent affair and had over four hundred entries last year, and there will be a greater number even this year. Full particulars will be sent out soon from the School regarding the contest.

According to the Continental and Commerce National bank of Chicago, which has collected crop statistics for several years, the six principal crops will fall below the yield a year ago. The wheat estimate is 739,000,000 bushels, which is 9,000,000 more than a year ago; oats, 1,000,000,000 bushels, 415,000,000 less; corn, 2,800,000,000, 324,746,000 less; hay, 66,610,000 tons, 6,081,000 less; rye, 36,854,000 bushels, 1,210,000 more, and cotton 14,700,000 bales, an increase of 1,000,000 bales. This should mean prosperity and good prices for the Northwest, as the bank estimates show that the three states having the largest yields and exceeding that of last year are Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota. The only cloud in the sky is opening the markets of the United States to the agricultural products of other countries on a near free trade basis by the proposed tariff bill, which will probably be in force within a couple of months.

A move is on foot to ask congress to provide a way whereby states may tax nonresident catalogue houses on the amount of business they do in such states. For instance, catalogue houses in Chicago do thousands of dollars worth of business in Minnesota, yet contribute not a cent in taxation to the state, and they do this business in competition with local merchants who are taxed heavily for the support of schools, building of roads, etc. The local merchant is discriminated against, and the catalogue house should either be required to pay a license, the same as a pack peddler or pay a tax in proportion to the business it does in the state.

UNCLE SAM OFFERS 8,406 VIRGIN FARMS

Nearly 9000 160-acre farm homes will be drawn by the "lucky ones" as the result of throwing open of 1,345,000 acres of land upon the Ft. Peck Indian reservation in Northeastern Montana next month. This is the last great land drawing Uncle Sam has to offer his people and one of the greatest in the history of government land openings in point of fertility. Government agricultural experts estimate that when this vast strech of virgin soil is tilled it will add about 25,000,000 bushels of grain annually to the production of the U. S.—enough to feed an entire nation.

The interior department is making extensive preparations to rush a big crops of clerks to Glasgow, Havre and Great Falls, Mont., which are to be the registration points. These land offices will be open September 1 next and the work of filing for this land will then begin. The people will have a chance to continue filing until September 20.

The actual value of this land is is said by government experts to be about $25.00 an acre, but the apprisal for its opening for settlement is only from $2.50 to $7 per acre. The drawing will take place in this way. The names of all who file will be placed in a big box and the envelopes drawn out one by one and numbered, until enough envelopes are taken from the box to correspond with the number of quarter sections available—8,406.

Actual settlement will begin May 1, 1914. Settlement is the same as under the homestead law, except that the appraised valuation must be paid from $2.50 to $7 per acre—one-fifth down at time of entry and the rest in five annual payments.

4000 ATTEND FAIR LAST THURSDAY

The Twelfth Annual Pennington County Fair, which closed at Thief River Falls last Friday, surpassed all previous fairs in attendance, the number of exhibits entered. The stock exhibits showed remarkable improvement over those of a few years ago and indicate the increasing prosperity of the farmers. The grain display would have done credit to a state exhibit.

State Has $1,000,000 Deficit

The deficit of the state of Minnesota for the fiscal year which ended Sunday, is more than a million dollars. Expenditures for the year were $18,959,762,01, while receipts totaled $17,809,401.76, as shown in a statement issued by State Treasurer Walter J. Smith. The cash balance at the close of business Saturday was $1,842,397.90, compared with $2,992,728.55 a year ago. The general revenue fund shows an overdraft of $590,065.86, though receipts of this fund during the year were $10,235,011.18. The cash balances in other funds total $2,432,433.76.

The revenue fund deficit will be cleared up in another month, as the first semi-annual payment of railroad taxes is due Sept. 1.

Mr. Weston will be escorted by several notables including Governor Eberhart, Mayor Nye of Minneapolis and party, and many others and the trip will be made on a special train.

Death of Audley Morisette.

Audley Morisette, aged twenty years, well known to the people of Red Lake Falls, died July 30 at North Yakima, Wash. He was the son of Peter Morisette, now at North Yakima, and the grandson of Mrs. O. LaFreniere, with whom he had made his home for several years at Red Lake Falls.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

LOCALS

Miss Myrtle Dargan, who has been employed in the local postoffice, left Monday for Red Lake Falls for a short visit before leaving for Deerwood where she will work in the new newspaper office which H. E. Mussy is starting at that place.

The Chicago Great Western road will make a four weeks test of giving lower freight rates. Arrangement was made to this effect by the officers of the road, the railroad commission and the attorney general's office, and was approved by Federal Judge Williard this week. The test is to satisfy the stockholders that the lower rates are not confiscatory.

James Bolinski, a man with half a dozen aliases, and charged with approximately the same number of burglaries, broke jail at Thief River Falls Monday. He had been arrested charged with breaking jail at Waupaca, Wisconsin on August 5. He escaped from the jail at Thief River Falls by picking the lock of his cell and sawing through the heavy iron bars of the window. A reward of $100 has been offered for his capture.

The contract for the construction of the new Red Lake high school building was last week awarded to Contractor Jas. Brady. Contractor Johnson of Crookston is to do the brick work, he having a sub-contract from Mr. Brady for that part of the work. Mr. Brady's bid was $32,268.00. This is for putting up the building exclusive of heating, pluming and ceptic tank. Contracts for these other necessary features will be awarded later.

After being lost for over a week in the woods surrounding town, a valuable horse belonging to E. L. Wichterman was last week recovered. The horse escaped over a week ago and at the time a harness was on the animal. Although the horse broke through several wire fences he was uninjured and the harness in no way damaged.

Perhaps more favorable and more pleasant weather could be furnished, but those hereabouts are inclined to think the present brand just about perfect. The warm weather of last week thoroughly ripened practically all crops. Harvesting now is general throughout the country, with prospects that threshing will commence in about ten days.

Fred L. Farley and family drove, Sunday afternoon, in the Farley car, to the home of R. H. Green in Equality township. They were accompanied by Miss Carrie Green, who has been here in attendance at the summer school. On their return they were accompanied by Mrs. Green, who is spending the week with relatives in the city.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

INTERESTING FACTS FROM STATE FIRE MARSHAL'S REPORT

The sixth annual report of the State Fire Marshal, which has just been published, contains many interesting facts.

The fire losses for the past fiscal year was one-third less than the year previous. In 1912 there were 2,512 fires reported to the Fire Marshal Department, with an aggregate loss on building and contents of $3,823,251. In the same period in 1911 the loss totalled $5,665,688, or a decrease of $1,842,437. During the year 1912 the Minnesota Fire Marshal investigated the cause and origin of 304 fires. Of this number 183 were classed as incendiary, 36 as suspicious and 46 as unknown. Careful study and observation forces the conclusion that the percentage of fires resulting from carelessness and those that are incendiary total about 65 to 70 per cent of all fires reported.

HARRY K. THAW ELUDES KEEPERS AT MATTEAWAN

WAITING AUTOMOBILES RUSH HIM AWAY—BELIEVED HE REACHED COAST AND GOT ABOARD A YACHT.

REWARD OF $500 IS OFFERRED FOR CAPTURE

Guard Placed Under Arrest—Rigid Investigation is Begun—Wife Fears That Husband May Carry Out Alleged Threats on Life.

Matteawan, N. Y., Aug. 18.—Harry Kendall Thaw, the slayer of Stanford White, escaped from the hospital for the criminally insane here at 7:45 o'clock Sunday morning. A dart for liberty through an open gate, a dash into the open door of a powerful automobile that stood on the outside, and a flight like a rocket for the Connecticut state line, 30 miles away, accomplished his escape.

The hospital authorities feel certain he is outside the state. Once beyond its boundaries, Thaw is free. Only perhaps years of litigation can bring him back and then only in one event—that he be adjudged insane in the state into which he fled.

Names of Confederates.

Five confederates manned the car in which Thaw escaped and a big black limousine which trailed it past the asylum gate. The police have the names under which they registered at a local hotel Friday night and are seeking them. The hospital authorities believe Thaw has fled to the shore of Long Island sound and boarded a yacht waiting, with steam up, to rush him to Europe.

A reward of $500 for Thaw's apprehension has been offered by Dr. R. F. C. Kieb, superintendent of the asylum. Howard H. Barnum, the attendant at the gate, past whom Thaw fled in his break for freedom, is under arrest and other arrests are expected to follow in the rigid investigation begun by Dr. Kieb.

The shades were drawn in the dormitories and the inmates were asleep when Thaw left his room. He was fully dressed. The milk man's cart was rumbling on the road outside as he walked through the storeroom and into the outer court yard of the grounds.

Passes Lone Gatemen.

Barnum, sole attendant at the road gate, was pacing back and forth when Thaw closed the store room door behind him, and apparently did not rising.
grasp the significance of Thaw's early

Long years of residence at the asylum and repeated declarations by Thaw that he would never attempt to obtain his freedom except by legal means had established his status as a "trusty."

There was little out of the ordinary in his appearance, even at so early an hour, in the courtyard, and if Barnum saw him—as to this no one, save the hospital authorities, can say and they refuse to talk—he raised no question.

A six-cylinder touring car of 60 horsepower, followed by a limousine, also black, loafed lazily along the road as the milkman drew near the gate.

Awaits His Chance.

Thaw, standing a few feet away, apparently unconcerned, waited till Barnum unlocked the gate and swung it wide to let the milkman enter. At the same moment the two cars drew up on the further side of the road, opposite the gate, and stood still, their engines throbbing.

As Barnum stepped aside for the milk man to drive inside the grounds, he heard the gravel crunch beneath Thaw's feet and, looking up saw him flash past him for one of the waiting cars. With a shout, Barnum started in pursuit, but a flying leaped landed Thaw safe within the car. The wheels were slowly turning before the keeper had fairly reached the roadway. They were throwing up a cloud of dust before he had gone 25 feet.

Keeper Shouts the Alarm.

"Thaw's gone! Escaped!" he shouted, bursting into Dr. Kieb's presence, and in a moment the hunt was on.

The great black car flashed like lightning through Stormville, 10 miles east of Matteawan, along the road to the Connecticut line.

Early risers in the little hamlet saw three men—and Thaw—crouching low to escape the sweep of their rush through the air. They were going 70 miles an hour. They were 10 minutes out of Matteawan. At the speed which the black car traveled through Stormville Thaw should have reached the state line within half an hour.

HARRY K. THAW

The New York state hospital for the criminal insane at Matteawan housed Thaw not as a murderer, but as an insane person.

The jury which sent him there acquitted him of the murder of Stanford White on the same grounds as caused his incarceration in the hospital for the criminal insane—that of insanity. Hence he could not be taken back to New York on the murder charge.

He could not, therefore, be arrested in any other state for extradition, the hospital authorities assert, as he is charged with no crime.

Alarm Spread Broadcast.

Within a moment he was at the telephone and, as Barnum poured the story into his ears, repeated it over the wire to police headquarters. Matteawan became the center of a widening ripple of telephone and telegraph alarms as Dr. Kieb planned pursuit.

He might as well have tried to chase a 12-inch shell. The ten-minute start, the high power of the car in which Thaw made his flight, the nearness of the Connecticut state line toward which Thaw was heading, and the inferior power of the pursuing cars militated against him and made the chase hopeless. Five minutes' ride away he met William Flannigan, a liveryman.

"I saw him," Flannigan shouted. "He was near Fishkill village and going 60 miles an hour. I saw him coming and just had time to crowd my horses close over to one side of the road. Just let him keep on; he'll break his neck."

A rigid investigation inclined Dr. Kieb to the belief that Thaw planned flight on a yacht in Long Island sound and that if he reached the yacht it was by relays of automobiles, stationed along the road to throw pursuers off the trail.

Wife Closely Guarded.

New York.—Uiformed policemen guard every entrance to the hotel where Evelyn Nesbit Thaw is staying.

Always fearful of her husband, she showed her terror to a marked degree on learning that he was at large. Her mother, Mrs. Charles J. Holman, was frightened even more than she and urged Mrs. Thaw to go into seclusion until Thaw is found.

"Harry has threatened to kill me," Mrs. Thaw said, "and I believe my presence in New York prompted him to escape. Four years ago he told me: 'I suppose I'll have to kill you next.'

Say Flint Is Worst Enemy.

"Many men will have cause for fear now that he is free. He considers Dr. Austin Flint his worst enemy and undoubtedly will try to make trouble for him.

"The state of New York has a great deal to answer for in this case. What Harry Thaw has been allowed to do at Matteawan is an outrage to think of—bribery connived at and keepers bullied by all the power of his money. And now he is allowed to escape. I suppose $20,000 or $30,000 looked pretty good to some people.

"One thing is certain: Harry won't stay in hiding long. He'll be heard from soon. A few drinks make him a raving madman and when that happens he'll head straight for New York. He's crazy to get here and he won't be able to stay away. I have made up my mind, however, not to worry. If anything is going to happen I can't stop it. I am glad my baby is in London, though, and I think he'll be safe there."

Possible $75,000 Hail Damage.

Minot, N. D.—From fifty to seventy-five thousand dollars hail damage to the crops of Renville county was done in the terrific storm that swept this district, according to belated reports just received.

Will Arrest Thaw on Sight.

New York, Aug. 18.—New York's 10,000 policemen have orders to arrest Harry K. Thaw on sight. A general alarm for his apprehension was sent out to every precinct in the city. The police acted on request of the Matteawan asylum authorities. Here is the description of Thaw sent out by the police: "Height, 5 feet, 11¼ inches; weight, 166 pounds; brown hair and eyes; dark complexion." The clothing worn by Thaw at the time of his escape was not described.

Jerome Offers no Comment.

Lakeville, Conn., Aug. 18.—News of the escape of Harry Thaw broke in upon the quietude of the week-end visit of William Travers Jerome, former district attorney of New York, at his summer home here. Mr. Jerome conducted the state's case against Thaw and since retirement from office had been retained on different occasions to oppose Thaw's efforts to secure release from the institution. Regarding the escape, Mr. Jerome said: "I have no statement to make [illegible]

Holds Thaw Dangerously Crazy.

New York, Aug. 18.—Alienists who figured in the trials of Harry K. Thaw and his subsequent attempts to prove his sanity and be set free from Matteawan, with the exception of those who testified in behalf of Thaw, were unanimous in the opinion that he still is insane, and a dangerous individual to any community. "Harry K. Thaw is crazy, and consequently a dangerous man," Dr. Austin Flint, the eminent alienist, told a reporter.

Woman Acquitted; Town Celebrates.

Steamboat Springs, Col., Aug. 18.—Anna Bernard, known in Colorado as the "Cattle Queen," was acquitted by a jury of the charge of cattling stealing. Immediately upon report of the jury's verdict, "Queen Anne" and her friends leased all the motion picture houses in the town for the night and all business houses and saloons closed, while the people of the city celebrated her acquittal with her. Bonfires were built and men, women and children marched through the [illegible]

WILLIAM SULZER IS IMPEACHED

SUMMARY OF THE CHARGES

Diversion of Campaign Contributions for Stock Speculation Is Alleged—Story of the Executive's Fight With Tammany.

Albany, N. Y.—William Sulzer, governor of New York, has been impeached by the lower house of the state legislature, and will be tried by the senate and the circuit court of appeals, sitting together as a court of impeachment. The article of impeachment, which were adopted by a vote of 79 to 45, charge the governor with perjury and larceny of campaign funds and with other slightly less serious offenses.

An important part of the charge is that Mr. Sulzer diverted campaign contributions to his private use and invested them in stocks. Just before the impeachment Mrs. Sulzer made a statement to the effect that she had taken part of the campaign money and bought stocks with it in Wall street. She will probably take the witness stand at the trial to tell this story.

Charges Against Sulzer

1—That Governor Sulzer, in filing his statement of campaign expenses, set forth that his entire receipts were $5,460 and his expenditures $7,724; that this statement "was false and was intended by him to be false;" that his list of receipts failed to include 11 specific contributions, ranging in amount from $100 to $2,500.

2—That Governor Sulzer attached to his statement of campaign expenses an affidavit declaring that the statement was "a full and detailed statement of all moneys received or contributed or expended by him directly or indirectly." That this affidavit "was false and was corruptly made by him," and that he was "guilty of willful and corrupt perjury."

Governor Sulzer.

3—That Governor Sulzer "was guilty of mal and corrupt conduct in his office as governor and was guilty of bribing witnesses." The specific charge is that while the Frawley committee was investigating the governor's campaign accounts he "fraudulently induced" three witnesses (his campaign manager, a personal friend, and a stock broker) "to withhold their testimony from said committee."

4—That the governor was guilty of 'suppressing evidence" in violation of the state penal law. The specific charge is that he "practiced deceit and fraud and used threats and menaces with intent to prevent the Frawley committee from procuring the attendance and testimony of certain witnesses."

5—That the governor was guilty of 'preventing and dissuading a witness from attending under a subpoena" the sessions of the Frawley committee. The witness referred to is Frederick L. Colwell, alleged to have acted as Sulzer's agent in certain stock transactions.

6—That prior to his election the governor appropriated campaign contributions to his own use, "and used the same, or a large part thereof, in speculating in stocks . . . and thereby stole such checks and was guilty of larceny."

7—That Governor Sulzer promised and threatened to use the authority and influence of his office for the purpose of affecting the vote or political action of certain public officers, including two assemblymen.

8—That he "corruptly used his authority as governor to affect the prices of securities on the New York stock exchange, in some of which he was speculating."

How It All Started.

When Governor Sulzer, the "people's governor," and the "poor man's friend," refused to do the bidding of Boss Murphy of Tammany Hall, the most remarkable political drama New York state had ever seen was begun. From that very moment Tammany Hall carried out a steady and consistent program of warfare against Sulzer and all things Sulzer. The governor replied in kind, as well as he could. A Tammanyized legislature instituted an "investigation" of Sulzer, and Sulzer reciprocated with an "investigation" of some Tammany-controlled state department.

What was it all about? Direct primaries, mainly. Also about appointments. Boss Murphy sought to have certain organization men appointed to office. Sulzer declined to appoint them, although he had been something of an organization man himself for a great many years, and immediately after his election to the governorship had been intimate with Murphy, so intimate that Mr. and Mrs. Murphy were welcome at the "People's House," as Governor Sulzer asserted himself in an interview.

Sulzer may have told the truth when he said his life was in danger. He declared, after his break with Tammany Hall, that he had employed guards to protect him against possible assassination. Attack after attack, mostly traceable to political enemies, was made on Sulzer. He was accused of perjury, the alleged offense having been committed, according to his accuser, in 1890. That accusation didn't seem to have much effect in the way of ruining Sulzer, so suit was filed in Philadelphia by a young woman of the name of Mignon (Polly) Hopkins, charging Sulzer with breach of promise. This action, Sulzer said also, was a move on the part of his political enemies. Miss Hopkins asked $30,000 damages for her wounded heart. Sulzer admitted having known Miss Hopkins some years ago, but denied that he had ever proposed marriage to her.

Row Over Direct Primaries.

When Sulzer promised real direct primaries to the people of New York he evidently meant what he said. When he went into office he made it his business to start legislation for direct primaries on its way. He discovered, however, that he and his political associates had very different ideas of the kind of direct primaries New York wanted. A bill was introduced at the instigation of Sulzer, but before it was voted upon another direct primary bill, which Sulzer characterized a "fraud upon the people," was introduced in both branches of the legislature and passed. Governor Sulzer vetoed it, and then called upon the legislators to pass his bill. The assembly and then the senate killed the Sulzer bill, amid scenes such as the senate and assembly chambers had never before seen. There were shouts of rage and shakings of fists in the direction of the capitol. There were cheers and shouts when it was announced that the bills had been killed.

Sulzer then started a campaign to obtain direct primaries. He enlisted many well known men in his cause, and called the legislature in extraordinary session. It had then become a case of open warfare.

His Campaign Fund Investigated.

The governor instigated investigations of several state departments, and then Tammany retaliated in kind with an investigation of Sulzer's campaign fund by a legislative committee. Senator Frawley, a Tammany chieftain, was the chairman of the committee and it commenced its sittings in Albany. It was intimated that Sulzer had received checks for his campaign fund which he had not listed in his sworn statement, a misdemeanor under the laws of New York state. Two checks were introduced into the evidence. One was for $2,500 from Kuhn, Loeb & Co., the bankers, and endorsed "Mr. Schiff's contribution to the Sulzer campaign." The other check was for $500 and was signed by Abram I. Elkus, a prominent New York city lawyer. It was alleged by the Frawley committee that neither of these checks appeared in Sulzer's campaign list.

At a later session of the Frawley committee, held in New York, it developed that Sulzer had owed the stock brokerage firm of Harris & Fuller $48,599.38 on January 1, 1912, when Sulzer was in congress. According to testimony and evidence offered, Sulzer had been a steady loser in the stock market. The brokers to whom he owed money dunned him for payment, according to the testimony, and Sulzer was finally rescued by his business partner, ex-Governor A. E. Spriggs, of Montana, who paid $5,000, and Louis M. Josephthal of New York, who, on July 19 last, paid $26,749.21.

It also developed before the committee that Sulzer had traded with Boyer, Griswold & Co. Charles H. Reynolds, formerly cashier for the firm, testified that on October 16 last, Frederick L. Colwell, whom he understood to be an agent for Sulzer, had bought 200 shares of Big Four for $12,025. The stock was paid for the same day with eight checks and $7,125 in cash. One check given in payment for the stock was a campaign contribution. The Frawley committee alleged that the seven other checks were also campaign contributions, and asserted that this would be proved.

Other Governors Impeached.

Seven other governors in the United States have faced impeachment proceedings. These men and the results that followed were:

Charles Robinson, Kansas, 1862, acquitted.

William W. Holden, North Carolina, 1870, removed.

David Butler, Nebraska, 1871, removed.

How Much Better Today.

If it is good to use attention tomorrow, how much better is it to do so today. If tomorrow it is in your interest to attend, how much more is it today, that you may be able to do so tomorrow also, and may not defer it again to the third day.—Epictetus.

First Condition of Success.

Here is the prime condition of success, the great secret—concentrate your energy, thought, and capital exclusively upon the business in which you are engaged. Having begun on one line, resolve to fight it out on that line, to lead in it, adopt every improvement, have the best machinery, and know the most about it. Finally, do not be impatient, for, as Emerson says, "No one can cheat you out of ultimate success but yourself."—Andrew Carnegie.

Why Beekeepers Beat Pans.

Many beekeepers beat tin pans at swarming time because they think it makes the bees settle down, but a contributor to Bee Culture says that this practice is merely a relic of a forgotten English law which required the beekeeper to give notice in this way that his bees were swarming and that he was entitled to follow them. If he lost sight of them after giving this warning, the bees became the property of the person on whose land they alighted.

Knows Just How the Book Ended.

Mabel and Johnny are nice children, but they love to argue. The other day they got into a heated discussion as to which one had read the more books. Finally Johnny said:

"Well, I've read 'Robinson Crusoe' and you haven't."

"Oh, yes, I have," returned Mabel, not to be outdone by a mere boy.

"Now, what does it say at the very last?" he asked.

The little girl studied for a moment, then her face brightened.

"Why, it says 'The End,'" was the unexpected answer.

Buffalo Lacking in Sympathy.

An old resident of Helzer, Kan., speaking of the early days on the Kansas plains, writes: "On one trip that we took after buffalo hides we had with us an Englishman fresh from London. The main herd of buffalo had just passed through and as the hunters had been after their hides, everywhere on highland and lowland were the skinned carcasss of buffalo. The Englishman was amazed at the waste of meat. Finally, seeing a small herd of old bulls traveling along, he arose to his feet and, taking off his hat, said: "Boys, this is awful! I should think that the living buffalo would lament to see their comrades lying thus!"

A gentleman from the north was enjoying the excitement of a bear hunt down in Mississippi. The bear was surrounded in a small cane thicket. The dogs could not get the bear out and the planter who was at the head of the hunt called to one of the negroes:

"Sam, go in there and get the bear out."

The negro hesitated for a moment and then plunged into the cane. A few moments later the negro, the bear and the dogs were rolling upon the ground outside. After the hunt was over the visitor said to the negro:

"Were you not afraid to go into that thicket with that bear?"

"Cap'n," replied the negro, "it was jest dis way: I neber had met dat b'ar, but I was pussonally 'quainted wid de old boss, so I jest naturally took dat b'ar."—Montreal Herald.

HAD NOTHING AT ALL TO SAY

Under the Circumstances Captain Could Hardly Be Blamed for Preserving Silence.

Everybody in Middle Bay knew that Mrs. Captain Liscomb was talking about making a visit to her married daughter in Cincinnati. She had been talking about it for two years, but age and the natural timidity of a woman unused to travel had postponed the great event from month to month, until the neighbors began to wonder whether it would ever come to pass.

So one morning, when Uncle Billy Evans met Captain Liscomb in Eccles' store, there was twinkle in his eye as he asked:

"When's Mis' Liscomb going out to Ohio, Daniel?"

"Don't ask me!" returned the captain, a little peevishly. "I don't know nothin' about it. If I tell her to go, she says I want to get rid of her. If I tell her to stay to home, she says I'm mean! I ain't saying a single word!"

ECZEMA SPREAD OVER BODY

Roxbury, Ohio.—"When my little boy was two weeks old he began breaking out on his cheeks. The eczema began just with pimples and they seemed to itch so badly he would scratch his face and cause a matter to run. Wherever that matter would touch it would cause another pimple until it spread all over his body. It caused disfigurement while it lasted. He had fifteen places on one arm and his head had several. The deepest places on his cheeks were as large as a silver dollar on each side. He was so restless at night we had to put mittens on him to keep him from scratching them with his finger nails. If he got a little too warm at night it seemed to hurt badly.

"We tried a treatment and he didn't get any better. He had the eczema about three weeks when we began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I bathed him at night with the Cuticura Soap and spread the Cuticura Ointment on and the eczema left." (Signed) Mrs. John White, Mar. 19, 1913.

His Farewell Speech.

James H. Wallis, "the fly man of Boise," has made Idaho the most sanitary and most flyproof state in the Union.

Mr. Willis, discussing his success with a New York reporter, laughed and said:

"I have succeeded in eradicating the fly by making all Idaho hate the fly, even as poor old Dan Carson hated his wife.

"'You're going, Dan.'

"Dan, his eyes closed, made no answer. His wife then repeated, with a sigh:

"'Dan, you're going, but I'll soon follow you.'

"Upon this Dan's glassy orbs opened, and he said in a hollow voice:

"'You stay here as long as you can.'"

Question of Hearing.

The burly farmer strode anxiously into the post office.

"Have you got any letters for Mike Howe?" he asked.

The new postmaster looked him up and down.

"For who?" he snapped.

"Mike Howe?" replied the farmer.

The postmaster turned aside.

"You don't understand!' roared the applicant. "Can't you understand plain English? I asked if you've got any letter for Mike Howe!"

"Well, I haven't," snorted the postmaster. "Neither have I a letter for anybody else's cow! Get out."

AN OLD NURSE

Persuaded Doctor to Drink Postum.

An old faithful nurse and an experienced doctor, are a pretty strong combination in favor of Postum, instead of tea and coffee.

The doctor said:

"I began to drink Postum five years ago on the advice of an old nurse.

"During an unusually busy winter, between coffee, tea and overwork, I became a victim of insomnia. In a month after beginning Postum, in place of tea and coffee, I could eat anything and sleep as soundly as a baby.

"In three months I had gained twenty pounds in weight. I now use Postum altogether instead of tea and coffee; even at bedtime with a soda cracker or some other tasty biscuit.

"Having a little tendency to Diabetes, I used a small quantity of saccharine instead of sugar, to sweeten with. I may add that today tea or coffee are never present in our house and very many patients, on my advice, have adopted Postum as their regular beverage.

"In conclusion I can assure anyone that, as a refreshing, nourishing and nerve-strengthening beverage, there is nothing equal to Postum."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Write for booklet, "The Road to Wellville."

Regular (must be boiled).

Instant Postum doesn't require boiling but is prepared instantly by stirring a level teaspoonful in an ordinary cup of hot water, which makes it right for most persons.

A big cup requires more and some people who like strong things put in a heaping spoonful and temper it with a large supply of cream.

Experiment until you know the amount that pleases your palate and have it served that way in the future.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

FRESH MEAT DURING SUMMER

Old but Unique Organization Is Found in Douglas County Township and Proves Satisfactory to Its Members.

Alexandria.—One of the most novel farmers' clubs has been discovered in the town of Moe in this county. This organization is known as a "meat club," and while it has no formal constitution and by-laws there is a tacit agreement among its members which is complied with implicitly.

Purpose of Club.

The purpose of the club is to supply its members with fresh meat, especially in the summer months when securing good meat is one of the serious problems of rural life. The club has only ten members, although it has been in operation over twenty years. These members meet once each week at the home of one of the number, who usually kills a beef animal, often a yearling or a 2-year-old. Each member takes his turn in killing, the slaughtering and the division of the carcass taking place at the home of the member whose turn it is to supply his neighbors with meat. He also keeps an account of what each one receives.

Fixed Prices.

The club has a fixed price for the front and hind quarter cuts, that of the former at present being 9 cents, while the hind quarter cuts are figured at 10 cents. The member at whose home the cutting takes place keeps most of the soup bones. No money changes hands except at the close of the season, when an accounting takes place. The affairs are so skilifully managed that often there is little if any cash to be paid to any member.

The members of the club are Gunder T. Winkjer, Lauritz, Toulo and Peter Syverson, Peter and Henry Hanson, Jens and Olaus Angen, Alfred Foslin and E. K. Gilbertson. Winkjer is the dean of the club, being the oldest in years and having belonged, except for a short period, for about twenty-two years. In all that time there has never been a word of criticism or a dispute over any of the club's actions.

SITE PROVES SATISFACTORY

Bemidji Will Deed Tract of Twenty or More Acres for Normal School to Be Erected by State.

Bemidji.—After having spent a day in Bemidji, members of the State Normal School board and members of the Normal School Locating commission declared their satisfaction over the site offered the state for the new institution. It was agreed that a tract of between twenty and twenty-five acres should be deeded the state.

The visitors were taken for automobile and boat rides and in the evening for a tour of inspection of the Crookston lumber mill. Those in the party were: Judge Eli Torrance, president of the State Normal School board; C. A. Ballard, president Moorhead normal; Dr. W. A. Schumaker, president St. Cloud normal; C. G. Schulz, state superintendent of education and chairman of the locating committee; W. W. Brown, St. James, member of the legislature, and also of the locating commission; J. C. Wise, Jr., Mankato, member Normal School board; C. L. Atwood, St. Cloud, board member, and C. G. Joslin of Moorhead.

DIES OF A BULLET WOUND

McAlpine of Duluth Thought to Have Shot Himself While After Burglars.

Duluth.—The body of John McAlpine, pioneer Duluth millionaire lumberman, was found here in the basement of his home with a bullet through the head.

Members of the family and friends of the dead man advance the theory that the shooting occurred accidentally while Mr. McAlpine was seeking a burglar who, he thought, had attempted to break into the house through a basement window. Mr. McAlpine was in excellent health and spirits, they say.

Mr. McAlpine was about 58 years old and had been a resident of Duluth fifteen years. He came here from Eau Claire, where he had operated extensive lumbering interests. He had operated extensively in Wisconsin, Minnesota, California and in the Puget Sound country.

Elwell Inspects Winona Highway.

Winona.—State Senator J. T. Elwell of Minneapolis was in Winona on Monday and went on a trip of inspection over the concrete state highway laid in East Burns valley, the first one in the state constructed under the provisions of the Elwell law. He was much pleased with the improvement and expressed the hope that many more miles of such road might be constructed in the state. Today he went to Rochester to meet with the Olmsted County board, which is considering road petitions.

Nineteen Ore Boats Set Sail.

Duluth, Aug. 16.—Nineteen ore boats have cleared the Duluth-Superior harbor within the last 24 hours, bound down the lake with full cargoes. This is one of the biggest ore shipping days since the recent strike on the Missabe and Allouez ore docks. The Missabe docks are working with a full crew on each shift and the Allouez docks have more than the usual number of men. From the way boats are being dispatched vesselmen predict that the loss caused by the strike will be made up [illegible]

HON. JOHN LIND, SPECIAL ENVOY TO MEXICO

© HARRIS & EWING

Hon. John Lind, ex-governor of Minnesota and former congressman from this state, has held many positions of trust of a national nature. Never has he been so signally honored, however, as at the present time. Chosen by President Wilson as his special envoy to investigate the Mexican situation, that the administration may have first hand information, Mr. Lind is now in Mexico City endeavoring to arrive at a just solution of the revolutionary perplexities and if possible offer suggestions for securing peace. President Huerta's attitude was at first positively hostile.

CONDITIONS NEARLY NORMAL

DULUTH DOCK STRIKE REALLY ENDED, IT APPEARS.

Boats Being Loaded Rapidly—Superior Men Refuse to Return to Work.

Duluth, Aug. 13.—Conditions are nearly normal in the Duluth harbor. Boats loaded all day at the Missabe, the Soo and in Superior at the Allouez.

From the records of departure at the tug office the swing of lake traffic is nearly normal. There practically is no wild ore tonnage in sight at the present time and with no further trouble on the docks it is not expected that the slight delay in the loading at the Duluth harbor will change in the least the freight situation on the Great Lakes.

At the Allouez ore docks, Superior, 294 men were at work, which is 44 more than the full crew at the time of the strike. One hundred and seventy-five were at work Monday night.

The strikers in Superior still are solid and the work is being done by outside men. The strikers declare they will stay out until their demands are granted.

Brainerd Indorses Street Railway.

Brainerd.—The Third ward mass meeting called to consider the Minnesota Central Railway company street railway franchise voted unanimously in favor of awarding it to the company and Aldermen Betzold and Haake declared they would vote for it. The company will build a street railway in Brainerd and extend interurban lines to the Cuyuna range.

Two Drown in the Mississippi.

St. Paul.—Fred Boyce, 19 years old, son of F. B. Boyce, auditor of San Juan county, Wash., was drowned in the Mississippi river, near the state fish hatchery. The body of a negro, about 40 years old, was found in the river, near the Milwaukee freight house.

Aitkin Gets New Industry.

Aitkin.—The Jones Smelting company has selected Aitkin as the site for its furnaces. This was done after a thorough examination of all the towns on the Cuyuna range. The company, when everything is completed, will employ about 1,000 men. Aitkin was selected because of its central location on the Cuyuna range. The company will use about 200 cords of wood a day, and will be ready to start part of the work by January 1. The furnace will separate manganese from iron ore and cost $250,000.

Soils Are Being Analyzed.

Thief River Falls.—A soil survey of the land in Pennington county has been commenced by W. G. Smith and a party of three, under the direction of the United States department of agriculture. The federal department is working in conjunction with the state experimental station and this county is the seventh area in Minnesota that has been covered. Specimens of the soil are taken and scientifically analyzed, the object being to ascertain the kind of crops for which the soil is best adapted.

SCANDAL CAUSES A SUICIDE

Mrs. Blair of Crosby Kisses Children and Drinks Poison as the Sheriff Waits.

Crosby.—After being arrested here on a statutory charge by a deputy sheriff from Duluth, Mrs. Charles L. Blair stepped into an adjoining room, drained the contents of a two-ounce phial of carbolic acid and died before assistance could be given.

William A. Guith, charged with the same offense, was arrested and taken to Duluth. The warrant for their arrest was sworn out on complaint of Mrs. Guith, who alleged that they had visited Duluth hotels together. Guith is a diamond drill contractor. Both families live here.

Deputy Sheriff Schubisky served the warrant on the pair. He informed Mrs. Blair she was under arrest and requested her to get ready to leave for Duluth. She agreed to go, and, after kissing her two children, each less than 4 years old, she requested permission to go to her bedroom and dress.

Schubisky waited about ten minutes and, hearing no noise, entered the room. He found Mrs. Blair lying on the floor, with the empty phial in her hand. She was dead.

Mrs. Blair was 34 years old. A husband and two children survive.

Services for Seven Drowned.

Duluth.—Funeral services for the seven victims of Wednesday's motor boat accident took place Friday at the Jewish synagogue, Superior. A throng of several hundred people attended. Interment of the bodies of the Superior people was in the Jewish cemetery. The body of Miss Goldstein was taken to Minneapolis. It is probable that an investigation into the cause of the accident will be started.

Record Year for Creamery.

Caledonia.—The Farmers' Co-operative creamery is having a record-breaking run this year. Over 10,000 pounds of butter were shipped this week. The price has been the highest in five years.

Another Weston Club Organized.

Fergus Falls.—A Weston club has been organized in this city and the first walking contest took place Thursday, six members of the State Insane hospital staff taking a hike to Battle Lake. The walk was for a wager, and three men and three women entered. They were Dr. Olive E. Smith, Miss Marguerite Rosing and Miss Liela Schwab, and Drs. R. P. Jones, W. E. Patterson and Willard P. Earngey. The distance was a little over twenty miles. Dr. Jones won. His time was 4 hours and a quarter.

Moorhead Gains Its Point.

Moorhead.—The usefulness of commercial clubs in the smaller cities was demonstrated here. The Northern Pacific began building a passenger station platform of plank, and an adjoining section of sidewalk of the same material, the latter in violation of the city ordinance. The directors of the Commercial club met in special session and sent a protest by wire to First Vice President Slade asking that brick be used and gained their point.

PLAN FOR BEAUTY AT HOME

Celastrus, or Bitter Sweet Vine, Is One of Most Satisfactory That Can Be Grown.

(By L. M. BENNINGTON.)

The beauty which is near at hand is often neglected while we prize that which is denied us—we refer to the beauty and desirability of the Celastrus, or bitter sweet vine. This native climber found in our woods and along fences, is one of the most satisfactory vines that can be grown about the home. It is as hardy as granite, a quick grower, twining securely about its support and it is not liable to disease. In the fall, when flowers are scarce, it covers itself with clusters of orange-colored fruit, which the frost opens, revealing its crimson seeds.

Choose a dark, rainy day, if possible, for the transplanting, otherwise do this work at sunset—we mean in transplanting seedlings. Water the seed bed thoroughly a short time before you begin to transplant; then lift the plants, with all the soil their roots will hold, and remove to the permanent bed.

Keep the seedlings covered with a wet cloth, so that the heat and wind will not dry them. With a sharp pointed stick make the hole for the plant and then fill it with water. Plant the seedling in this puddle, drawing the dark soil about the stalk when the ground has been firmed about the plant as much as possible.

A miniature water garden is practical, and will prove most interesting, needing less attention than a flower bed its size. Have a sugar or vinegar barrel cut in two, or use a wooden tub. Sink this in the soil. Make a potting box about twelve inches square and fill with rich mud from a pond, or use half rich loam, adding to the mud or loam about one-third of well-rotted manure. Plant the nymphae root in this and place in the tub; fill with water until it is two or three inches deep over the root. When the growth commences and the leaves appear, water may be added from time to time until the tub is full. Never change the water, simply replace that which evaporates.

HARNESS ROOM ON THE FARM

There is no other part of the farm equipment, that requires closer attention than that of the harness, both the heavy-weight harness and the light-driving harness. The harness room should be conveniently located in the barn, and should be made as close and dust proof as possible to make it. However, there will be considerable dust and dirt accumulate, despite the efforts to keep it out. In the drawing we see an apartment made especially for the light harness, lap covers and storm curtains, etc., which should never be permitted to lay raound, on the benches or barrels in the barn as we sometimes see them. This closet or cabinet for the light harness, is made of matched flooring, is stripped over all cracks

The harness room should be just large enough to accommodate the harness, whips, lap covers, etc., just that part of the farm equipment that is used in harnessing the teams. If made larger, there will be an accumulation of a variety of things, such as empty kegs, barrels, boxes and other things too numerous to mention.

Having a good room for the harness is not all in caring for the harness. It should be washed and oiled regularly.

Care of Colt's Feet.

Every colt owner should possess a foot rasp. Never mind about a knife; the less the knife is used around the foot the better. The first time the smith—if of the ordinary kind—gets at the foot he will probably cut it enough to last a lifetime. If the colt has been handled and quieted before it is weaned, it will allow the foot to be raised and leveled with the rasp. Study the columns of bones that go into the foot. "No foot, no horse," will seldom apply to the colt whose owner keeps the foot level.

Rye as a Summer Crop.

There are farmers who sow rye in the corn during the last cultivation. The rye makes a summer cover, utilizing some of the nitrogen that might be wasted under the influence of the summer sun; it makes fine grazing for pigs, calves, horses and cows in early fall and during winter; it supplies the soil with needed humus when the land is turned. This is not by any means a bad practice.

Crops for Orchards.

Don't plant small fruits or bushes between the trees in the orchard. They soon become a nuisance. Potatoes or beans may often be planted to advantage. Corn should not be used as it shades too much.

Remove Old Canes.

Blackberries and raspberries produce their fruit on canes which grew the year before. As soon as the fruit has been harvested remove the old canes and leave about six new canes in each hill.

Same Old Story.

Origin of Word "Sneeze."

The word sneeze has no possible connection with the verb "to sniff." Properly it should be spelt and pronounced "fneeze," as it was for many years, being an Anglo-Saxon word. It was the difficulty of pronunciation, according to the latest dictionaries, that caused the change of the first letter from f to s, and not as was formerly thought, the disuse of the old long s which resembled f in printed books.

Scare.

"Isn't that terrible?"

The Kind You Have Always Bought.

THIS is the caution applied to the public announcement of Castoria that has been manufactured under the supervision of Chas. H. Fletcher for over 30 years—the genuine Castoria. We respectfully call the attention of fathers and mothers when purchasing Castoria to see that the wrapper bears his signature in black. When the wrapper is removed the same signature appears on both sides of the bottle in red. Parents who have used Castoria for their little ones in the past years need no warning against counterfeits and imitations, but our present duty is to call the attention of the younger generation to the great danger of introducing into their families spurious medicines.

It is to be regretted that there are people who are now engaged in the nefarious business of putting up and selling all sorts of substitutes, or what should more properly be termed counterfeits, for medicinal preparations not only for adults, but worse yet, for children's medicines. It therefore devolves on the mother to scrutinize closely what she gives her child. Adults can do that for themselves, but the child has to rely on the mother's watchfulness.

Genuine Castoria always bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

SMILES NOT FOR "FLASHY"

Masculine Charmer Convinced He Had Made a Mash, but He Had Wrong Impression.

"I got a good one on Flashy," said Squirt as he shot the fine stream into the ice cream soda and pushed it over the marble counter.

"Who and what?" asked Squirt's friend.

"You know Flashy?" continued Squirt. "He of the ice cream suit and high browed hat. He was sittin' in here this afternoon when up floats the classiest little dame you ever saw and stops right outside the window. She cocks her head over to one side and smiles, her face right up close to the glass. Flashy tightened up his wash tie and straightened up his coat lapels. All the time the girl was smilin' and rubbin' her nose with the palm of her hand.

"Flashy smiled back two or three times and then he up and dusts out the door. Right up to her he went and purses up his pretty lips and lifts his hat. Say, you ought to have seen that girl do the rockbound glide away. She elevated her nose on a level with her eyes and drifted right off down the street.

"Flashy was crushed. The woman had a powder rag palmed in her hand. She had been smilin' at herself in the plate glass."

Black Hand Threat.

Mrs. Collins found the following Black Hand letter pinned to her door one morning:

Deer Mis Collins—Onless you put a jar of jam, a hunk of chokolit cake, a apple pie an' a bag of cany down by the old well, we will stel your littel boy and keep him, onless you pay us a milyon dollars.—The Black Hand.

The letter has been handed to the police and the criminals will soon be brought to justice. To date, Mrs. Collins' little boy has been the only one seen in the vicinity of the old well.—Judge.

His Advice.

The portly lady had accidentally taken a rear seat in a surface car reserved for smokers. With unconcealed indignation she watched the man beside her fill his pipe.

"Sir," finally came her frigid tones, smoking always makes me feel sick."

"Does it now, ma'am?" said the man as he carefully lighted up. "Then take my advice an' quit smoking."

Harvesting is being rushed and the stacking of rye and barley commenced.

Ye scribe drove to the town of Hickory Saturday. Its a fine country and most of the harvesting is done. A tremendous number of hay stacks were seen. The crop of ducks is also good, many of the feathered tribe being seen.

H. B. Rindahl and Mrs. Con Short were at Oklee Saturday with a big bunch of cattle.

Con Short is reported on the sick list this week.

Bernt Riendahl made a short call on John Swenson Saturday evening.

The Jolly Bunch drove over to Mayfield Sunday, where the day was pleasantly spent.

Some people seem to have seen the panther near Gonvick, while others claim it was seen near Warren. Its a wonder if it can be seen at all.

Cream Act Is Invalid.

The Johnston Cream Shipping Bill passed by the legislatuer has been declared invalid by Judge Catlin of Ramsey county district court.

This cream shipping law was fathered by Senator James Johnston and became a law in spite of the strenuous opposition of the creaemry centralizer interests in the state. The law provides that all cream shipped a greater distance than 65 miles must either be pasteurized or shipped in refrigerator cars.

It is unfortunate that the law was loosely and improperly drawn becanes the principal upon which it is based is correct. It is a legitimate measure in the interst of maintaining the standard of a necessary food product.

Without doubt a bill embodying the principal of the Johnston bill will be again introduced at the coming legislative session.

Ohio's New Prison Law.

August 1, a new prison law went into effect in Ohio, by which prisoners are to be paid for their labor, the money going to the support of their families.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer says that a scale of compensation will be fixed, and that prisoners will no longer shake off the responsibility of caring for their dependents or be compelled by a harsh system of justice to leave their dependents uncared for.

In other words, while the older system visits upon the wife and children of an offender against the law a large part of the punishment provided for him, the new system punishes him alone, and retains for his dependents the fruits of his labor.

One of the strong features of the work done at the Northwest Agricultural school at Crookston is the practical way in which is is applied and taught. The school is so equipped that it can give work which will fall in line with work that can be done at home. There is a blacksmithing and engineering departmennt in which which students are taught how to do repair work on machinery and to make various tools. They are taught how to run gasoline engines. In the carpentry and repair department they are given work in making plans for barns and other small buildings. The work given in Agronomy. Dairy. Poultry and Agricultural departments is just as valuable. The boys test seed grains, judge grains, plan rotations of crops, judge cattle, test milk, study the feeding of cattle, watch the methods of poultry raising and do work in vegetable gardening.

Forty bushels of wheat to the acre is the yield that was grown on the Adolph [illegible] farm west of here and which was threshed this week. DIES AS RESULT OF POISONING

Miss Bella Elizabeth Mattison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ole Mattison, residing north of here, died at the Crookston hospital Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock as a result of blood poisoning which was caused by stepping on a rusty nail two weeks ago.

Immediately following the accident nothing serious resulted and not until a week ago did the injury become serious. Dr. Ga[illegible] of Thief River Falls was called last Saturday and the patient removed to Crookston where death resulted Tuesday.

The deceased was fourteen years and eight months old at the time of her death, and is survived by her parents and eight brothers and sisters.

The funeral is being held today from the Norwegian Synod church, the services being attended by a large number of neighbors.

HOMESTEADS FOR TEACHERS

All teachers in the public schools will be given the same privileges as the soldiers, under the homestead laws, if an amendment recently offered by Congressman Steenerson becomes a law, and it is said to be reasonably certain that it will. The only restriction is that the teaching must be done in the schools of the state or territory in which the homestead is located.

Mr. Steenerson's argument is that the teachers are entitled to special consideration because of their services to the nation and because their time spent in teaching is of greater economic value to the nation than the [illegible] homestead.

This bill will give practically every teacher a chance to become the owner of a piece of land if there is any government land in their state.

The Ninth district congressman also proposes that the expenditure of $2.50 per acre in clearing, improving or draining timber or swamp land shall be sufficient to prove up on, regardless of the area under cultivation. This fits the requirements more nearly to the needs of the timber country.—Warroad Pioneer, Aug. 27th.

LABOR DAY PROCLAIMED BY GOV.

Executive Sets Aside Monday, Sept. 1, as Holiday for Workers.

Recommends That all Places of Business Close on This Day.

Governor Eberhart yesterday issued a proclamation requesting the observance of Labor day, which is next Monday. The governor says:

"In recognition of the dignity of labor it has been necessary to name one day of the year as Labor day. This day has been set aside by the lawmaking body of Minnesota, and the first day of September has been fixed upon for this purpose. It is highly fitting and proper that this should be so.

More and more the dignity of labor is becoming realized, and the impor economic value of the great army of industry is becoming recognized. To the men who toil, to the men who actually accomplish and make this a hospitable world all credit is due.

"In order that the day be properly observed, I, Adolph O. Peterson, governor of Minnesota, do hereby proclaim that Monday, September 1, be recognized and observed as Labor day and a holiday in Minnesota. I recommend that on that day all places of business in this state be closed, and that the day be observed by all citizens in a manner that will properly honor the men in the workshop, in the factory, the mine, and all engaged in any form of inpustry.

"In giving this tribute to the men who toil, it is well to bear in mind the economic interdependence of all our people. To the employer and the employe these words are especially uttered. The success and prosperity of the one depends upon the success and prosperity of the other. The more friendly their relationship the higher and more efficient will be our citizenship."

The funeral will probably be held Sunday from the Lutheran church.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Kankle of Red Lake Falls, and Mrs. Richard Ohm and daughter of Gully, were here for a short visit Tuesday.

HOMESTEADS FOR TEACHERS

All teachers in the public schools will be given the same privileges as the soldiers, under the homestead laws, if an amendment recently offered by Congressman Steenerson becomes a law, and it is said to be reasonably certain that it will. The only restriction is that the teaching must be done in the schools of the state or territory in which the homestead is located.

Mr. Steenerson's argument is that the teachers are entitled to special consideration because of their services to the nation, and because their time spent in teaching is of greater economic value to the nation than the same amount of time spent on a homestead.

This bill will give practically every teacher a chance to become the owner of a piece of land if there is any government land in their state.

The Ninth district congressman also proposes that the expenditure of $2.50 per acre in clearing, improving or draining timber or swamp land shall be sufficient to prove up on, regardless of the area under cultivation. This fits the requirements more nearly to the needs of the timber country.—Warroad Pioneer, Aug. 27th.

LABOR DAY PROCLAIMED BY GOV.

Recommends That all Places of Business Close on This Day.

Governor Eberhart yesterday issued a proclamation requesting the observance of Labor day, which is next Monday. The governor says:

"In recognition of the dignity of labor it has been necessary to name one day of the year as Labor day. This day has been set aside by the lawmaking body of Minnesota, and the first day of September has been fixed upon for this purpose. It is highly fitting and proper that this should be so.

More and more the dignity of labor is becoming realized, and the impor-economic value of the great army of industry is becoming recognized. To the men who toil, to the men who actually accomplish and make this a hospitable world all credit is due.

"In order that the day be properly observed, I, Adolph O. Peterson, governor of Minnesota, do hereby proclaim that Monday, September 1, be recognized and observed as Labor day and a holiday in Minnesota. I recommend that on that day all places of business in this state be closed, and that the day be observed by all citizens in a manner that will properly honor the men in the workshop, in the factory, the mine, and all engaged in any form of industry.

"In giving this tribute to the men who toil, it is well to bear in mind the economic interdependence of all our people. To the employer and the employe these words are especially uttered. The success and prosperity of the one depends upon the success and prosperity of the other. The more friendly their relationship the higher and more efficient will be our citizenship.",

JEROME IN THAW CASE ONCE MORE

FORMER DISTRICT ATTORNEY APPOINTED TO REPRESENT STATE.

VERMONT MIGHT GET THAW

Canadian Officials Instruct Sherbrooke Officers That No Discrimination Must Be Made—Repudiates Thompson.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 25.—William Travers Jerome, former district attorney of New York county, has been appointed by Attorney General Carmody a special deputy attorney general to represent the state in procuring the return of Harry K. Thaw to New York's jurisdiction. He was selected because of his familiarity with the Thaw case, gained in the two murder trials, and as special counsel in several of Thaw's attempts to establish his sanity.

It is not the present intention to send Mr. Jerome to Canada, but to employ his services in procuring the extradition of Thaw from any state to which he may be deported from Canada. Attorney General Carmody said he had reason to believe Vermont would be the state to which the fugitive would be returned, and that the date would be next Wednesday.

Glynn Takes Like Stand.

Earlier, a similar announcement was made by Acting Governor Glynn and was embodied in a telegram to Governor Fletcher of Vermont, requesting his good offices in effecting an extradition return of Thaw to New York.

Instructions have been sent to the immigration officers at Sherbrooke, it is officially announced at Ottawa, that when Harry K. Thaw comes into their hands there must be no discrimination against him.

There is reason to believe that this means he will not be sent to New York state, but on rejection will be returned by the Vermont route, as would an ordinary person coming in by the way Thaw did, and subsequently denied domicile in Canada.

Denies Knowing Thompson.

Sherbrooke, Quebec.—Harry Thaw, occupying a cell directly over Roger Thompson in the local prison here, refused to admit that he had ever seen Thompson. On the other hand, Thompson, who is being held under the immigration laws, charged with having aided Thaw to escape from Matteawan; is demanding money from the Thaws and declaring that he will tell all he knows about the plans for escape at the hearing of Thaw next Wednesday if the cash is not forthcoming.

Thompson laid aside the smoked eye glasses he has worn since his arrest and admitted that the name "Mitchell Thompson," he had given the authorities was fictitious and that in reality he is Roger Thompson, car salesman and daring chauffeur, who drove the black machine which whisked Stanford White's slayer away from Matteawan.

Says He Needs Money.

"I'm Roger Thompson," he said. "I need money and help now. I was framed up in getting in this case and the Thaws ought to stand by me now. I haven't a cent, and if they admitted me to bail I could not raise the money. Even if I could I would be arrested if I crossed the New York state line. The other four fellows mixed up in the game got away, but I stuck to Thaw to the finish and I'm the goat."

Thaw, in a cell above Thompson, refused to admit he had ever seen him.

During his varying moods Thaw was reminded of the predicament in which his escape from Matteawan had placed Howard Barnum, the old gatekeeper, past whom he fled to freedom.

"That's too bad," said Thaw. "Barnum did not know a thing I was to do. He was a victim of circumstances. He is innocent and the charge against him should never have been made."

Physical Ailments Cause Shooting.

New York, Aug. 25.—Ruth Hamilton, the 17-year-old Boston girl, who received a bullet wound near the heart when she and Charles Rich, aged 20, tried to carry out a death pact Wednesday midnight, was bemoaning the fact before she died that her wooer had not ended her life, too. As she lay in St. John's hospital, semi-conscious, she called to her dead lover, and said: "I want to die and join you." It came out that the motive for the death pact was the girl's worry over heart disease and a recent injury which Rich sustained.

Money From Rattlers.

Mauch Chunck, Pa., Aug. 25.—The Carbon county snake crop has been the finest in years. On the Broad mountain road between Hudsondale and Nesquehoning, alone, employes have slain upwards of 70 reptiles this season, many of them large rattlers. As the fat commands a ready sale, because of supposed rheumatic currative properties, while the skins also are in demand, some of the men have found the snake harvest quite an addition to their incomes. A blacksnake five feet in length was killed.

ROSEAU COUNTY IS HIT BY TORNADO

LATE REPORTS SHOW THAT DAMAGE IS FAR GREATER THAN SUPPOSED.

TWO DEAD AND TWO DYING

Four Others Seriously Hurt and Property Loss May Be More Than $100,000 When All Is Known.

Thief River Falls.—Late reports from the section of Roseau county visited by a tornado and severe windstorm increase the list of dead to two, with two persons lying at the point of death and four seriously injured, besides a score of persons who received cuts and bruises and other minor injuries.

The storm, it has been learned, traveled a path two miles wide and twenty miles long. Originating six miles north of the village of Greenbush, in Roseau county, it swept in a northeasterly direction, visiting the villages of Leo, Hoog, Malung and Roseau.

The storm-swept district is remote from telegraph and telephone service and inland from the railroad, and it will be several days before a complete list of dead and injured is available and the extent of the property damage may be determined.

The Property Damage.

The known property damage is $25,000. This will be increased as later returns come in, and the estimated damage to property and loss in destroyed crops and killed live stock is estimated at more than $100,000.

The dead are: Eleven-year-old son of A. F. Anderson, farmer, near Leo, killed by lightning; twelve-year-old daughter of John Zalinski, of Malung, killed by lightning in presence of mother and young brother.

The fatally injured are: Theodore Zabinski, farmer, near Leo, hurled against pile of wood by tornado and internally injured; recovery doubtful. Joseph Setzegora, laborer on Zabinski farm near Leo, internally injured; may die.

The seriously injured are: Three-year-old son of A. F. Anderson, near Leo, leg crushed by falling timbers; Mrs. John Zalinski, of Malung, unconscious from lightning bolt; suffering from shock of seeing daughter killed. Thomas Monkman, Roseau, three ribs fractured, internal injuries; expected to recover. Mrs. Thomas Monkman, Roseau, cut and bruised when house was demolished.

Doctors in the towns and villages of the stricken district declare they are fully able to handle the situation, although aid was offered from many of the neighboring cities.

Several detachments of men have proffered their services to the farmers who suffered the greatest losses to aid them to clear away the debris and rebuild their dwellings.

Tornado Hits Jenkins, Minn.

Pine River.—A tornado visited the town of Jenkins, seven miles south of here, causing damage to the extent of $1,500.

SUE FOR $174,000 DAMAGES

Beaudette Claims Railway Company Should Pay for Fire Losses of 1910—Move of Defense.

Bemidji.—Sarah E. Orr, a Beaudette storekeeper, demands $174,000 for herself and eighteen others from the Canadian Northern Railway company for damages alleged to have been caused by the fire which destroyed Beaudette and Spooner in October, 1910.

All of the persons associated with Mrs. Orr in her demand for damages had property in Beaudette at the time of the conflagration and it is this that is involved in the present proceedings.

It is alleged by Mrs. Orr that the railroad company was responsible for the fire and therefore should pay for property consumed.

The first move on the part of the defense was to request Judge C. W. Stanton of the district court here to issue an order transferring the damage suit to the federal court. The request was denied. The defense now has made its second move which is, despite the action of Judge Stanton, a plea to Judge Willard of the federal court in Minneapolis that the case be given jurisdiction in the United States court.

Decrease of 2,000,000 Tons.

Duluth.—The present record for August ore shipments will not equal that of July, according to figures just made public. The strike on the docks is given as the reason. In July the boats moved 8,200,000 tons and it looks as if this record would stand for the year. August is generally the biggest ore month, but the strike caused a loss of about 2,000,000 tons. It will be several days before the boats are able to get their loads as soon as they arrive.

Dairy Barn Is Destroyed.

Middle River.—During a heavy thunder storm that passed over this village Thursday the dairy barn of August Anderson, a farmer, living four miles west, was struck by lightning and was destroyed by fire.

New Dock Is Completed.

Brainerd.—The first ore loaded into the pockets of the new N. P. railway dock at Superior came from the Cuyuna Mille Lacs mine north of Ironton. The first ore shipment was made Sat[illegible]

EPIDEMIC OF HOG CHOLERA

Authorities Handicapped By Lack of Serum—Many Losses Reported.

Redwood Falls.—Hog cholera in mild form has broken out in this part of Minnesota and is causing the farmers much anxiety. Dr. Ward, executive officer of the state sanitary board, made a trip through Redwood county a few days ago and advised the farmers to use carbolic acid as a preventive until the state can supply them with serum for vaccinating.

The official said it was impossible to get the serum, as it is being used as fast as it can be manufactured. He strongly advised the use of carbolic acid as a preventive, prescribing from one to two ounces to a barrel of water. Farmers who are using it are finding it an excellent remedy.

Blue Earth Affected.

Blue Earth.—Hog cholera is causing heavy loss to farmers. One of the county commissioners is reported to have lost nearly $3,000 worth of hogs and another farmer has lost ninety head.

Elmore Losses Reported.

Elmore.—Several farmers south of town are losing hogs daily from cholera, and one man north of town reports the loss of over $1,000 worth of hogs up to the present time. Farmers are burning the dead animals, in the hope of preventing the spread of the disease.

Raging at Albert Lea.

Albert Lea.—Hog cholera is raging in the vicinity of Glenville, and one herd is reported to be affected with the malady a few miles to the northeast of the city. Many of the animals stricken with the disease die and veterinarians are vaccinating as rapidly as they can secure the serum and virus, but the state refuses both farmers and veterinarians, and as a consequence there is more or less wonderment why serum is so scarce in view of the action of the last legislature.

STATE W. C. T. U. CONVENTION

Delegates Meet in Alexandria for Annual Minnesota Meeting.

Alexandria.—Delegates met here for the thirty-seventh annual convention of the Minnesota State Women's Christian Temperance Union, which held its opening session in the Congregational church beginning Wednesday and continuing until Friday night.

Miss Rozette Hendrix of Minneapolis, president of the state association; Mrs. Eva Waterman of Elk River, vice president; Mrs. Kate Kercher of Minneapolis, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Belle M. Welch of Minneapolis, recording secretary; Mrs. Ella Hendrix of Minneapolis, assistant recording secretary, and Mrs. Della R. Mandigo of St. Paul, treasurer, were among the officers attending. Mrs. Bessie L. Scoville of Minneapolis is president emeritus of the state union.

Rev. Mary E. Kuhl of Champaign, Ill., national W. C. T. U. evangelistic superintendent, was the guest of honor at this year's state convention.

The sessions of Thursday and Friday were followed Friday night by the Matrons' Grand Gold Medal declamatory contest, in which winners of gold medal contests competed.

INSURANCE MONEY TIED UP

Accident Agents as Well as Police in Effort to Solve McAlpine Murder Mystery.

Duluth.—Various agents of the accident insurance companies with which John McAlpine, the wealthy lumberman who was found murdered in the basement of his home, carried policies aggregating $140,000, have taken up the investigation of the mystery. It is said the accident insurance will be contested.

The accident insurance agents will delve into the mystery from every angle, working independently of the police to a large extent but co-operating with them should it appear necessary. It is understood that a well known detective agency will be enlisted.

Thus far no move has been made in the probate court looking toward a settlement of the estate, said to run into many hundreds of thousands of dollars. It is stated that Mr. McAlpine left no will.

Police Chief Re-instated.

Waseca.—Recently, in the absence of Mayor Prail, Chief of Police Connors was removed from office by Acting Mayor Callahan, because the latter did not sanction an arrest made by the chief. Upon Mayor Prail's return, he promptly reinstated Mr. Connors in office.

More Laborers Needed.

Bemidji.—The two sawmills and box factory in this city could use 300 additional men at once if they were available. The companies are making every effort to secure help and are advertising in western papers as well as the Twin City papers, offering big wages and making special features of their table board and fine sleeping accommodations in the camps. The Bemidji box factory shut down one shift on account of labor shortage and can use more men on the all-day shift.

BRAINERD CENTER OF LINE

Iron Range to Have An Interurban—Duluth Capital Behind Enterprise.

Brainerd.—George Reid of Duluth won his seven weeks' fight in the council, passing the street railway franchise of the Minnesota Central Railway company by a vote of 9 to 1, Alderman Peterson voting in the negative.

The company agrees to commence construction work in a year, and to have three miles of track in operation in two years and two additional miles in three years from date. Brainerd is to be made the center of an interurban line to points on the Cuyuna iron range.

Duluth men and capital are largely interested in the venture and the principal place of business of the company is Duluth. Associated with Mr. Reid are Joseph Ferrier, a railway and bridge contractor of Duluth; Colonel William F. Henry, for twenty years business manager of the Duluth Herald, and John H. Hill, owner of Ironton townsite and two-thirds of the mineral underlying it and one of the fee owners of the Cuyuna-Duluth iron mine.

Freight shipments have so increased to Ironton and the Cuyuna iron range that the Northern Pacific has announced that a straight Ironton car will be loaded three times each week, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Wednesday will be refrigerator day, when all perishable freight will be received. The Deerwood car freight will be made up as usual every day.

STATE LAWYERS' CONVENTION

Lawyers in Convention Vote to Enlarge Governing Board and Committee—Governor Speaks.

Mankato.—The Minnesota State Bar association in session here discussed amendments to its constitution. Changes advocated by President Williams and recommended by the governing board were made without opposition.

It was decided to increase the board of governors from fourteen to twenty-four, by having one from each judicial district in addition to officers, who are ex-officio members.

The membership committee also was increased to one from each of nineteen judicial districts. In each of these districts each member of the governing board and of the membership committee is to appoint three or more others, who will form committees to further the interests of the state association in their localities.

The annual banquet of the association was served at the Elks' cafe; a chorus from St. Paul gave musical selections.

J. L. Washburn, Duluth, member of the State Normal School board, was toastmaster. Toasts were given by Governor A. O. Eberhart, who arrived at 8 p. m. from St. Paul; President John G. Williams, Duluth; Vice President H. V. Mercer, Minneapolis; W. E. Whipple, Duluth; C. H. Christopherson, Luverne; Judge Oscar Hallam, St. Paul; Thomas Quinn, Faribault, and Benjamin Taylor, Mankato.

PIECES OF METEOR ARE FOUND

Largest Pieces Are of Charcoal Material While Heavier Are of Mineral Substance.

Albert Lea.—Parts of the meteor which traversed the southern and western sky about ten days ago and was plainly visible in this city, Austin, Forest City, Mason City and as far south as Des Moines, have been discovered on the H. P. Christianson farm, six miles south of this city, and are now on display here.

When Mrs. Christianson started out across the farm she observed the ground literally covered with a blackish substance which measured, approximately, one-half mile in width. On walking either direction from the farm the substance was apparently endless and without the least dinmution.

The size of the pieces varied from one-half to six inches square. The largest pieces are of charcoal material, while the heavier are of some mineral substance. In the charcoal pieces the veins and knots of the material can easily be discerned, proving the meteor contained a vegetable growth. A peculiar thing is that the parts are constantly growing smaller by evaporation. Specimens of the meteor will be sent to the state university for examination.

Rochester.—Dr. H. A. Burns, of the state board of health, has become the acting head of the Rochester board of health, until a suitable selection has been made for the whole time health officer, to succeed Dr. H. B. Wood, who resigned Aug. 1. Rochester's experiment with the whole time health officer in one year produced such satisfactory results that the city will continue a health expert at the head of the department to devote his whole time to public health affairs.

Most Powerful Searchlight.

The new electric searchlight projectors made by the Allgemeine establishment of Berlin are among the most powerful yet to be produced, and their candlepower, which is too high for measurement, can only be reckoned in hundreds of millions. What a striking one is the new method of regulating the arc. The large carbons are now moved back and forth by small electric motors and suitable gears, current being applied to the motors by a set of relays which work according to the current taken by the arc, thus securing an automatic adjustment of the arc length in the best way. The base of the projector contains other motors for all the searchlight movements and a distant lever control is so designed that turning the lever in all directions makes the projector also follow these same directions for pointing the beam. These searchlights will carry several miles and still give light enough to read by. [illegible]

Lincoln on the Rights of Labor

I AM glad a system of labor prevails under which laborers can strike when they want to—where they are not obliged to work under all circumstances; and are not tied down and obliged to labor whether you pay them for it or not. I like the system which lets a man "quit" when he wants to, and I wish it might prevail everywhere.

I do not believe in a law to prevent a man getting rich; that would do more harm than good. So, while we do not propose any war upon Capital, we do wish to allow the humblest an equal chance to get rich with everybody else.

I want every man to have a chance to better his condition; that is the true system.

I am not ashamed to confess that twenty-five years ago I was a hired laborer.

UPLIFT! THE MOTIVE

Fuller, Purer and Happier Lives for Toilers Through the Strength of Organization.

THE climax of the spectacular is the parade.

The culmination of the anniversary or celebration is the long train of marchers rejoicing over victories. The most impressive tribute to a Man is the march with him to his tomb.

Labor has victories to celebrate, gains to rejoice over, tribute to pay.

The work of the labor movement has been mainly along three lines: influencing of public opinion, legislative effort, and the direct improvement of the labor conditions of its members. This last line of work has absorbed most of its time and energy, and its success has been gratifying, though not so great as it might have been had its efforts been directed against the causes instead of the effects, writes Henry Sterling, in Joe Chapple's News-Letter.

Nearly every humane measure on any statute book in any land is the outcome of intense, protracted struggle. Each was suggested first by laboring men and women, generally in a labor union. Churches have prepared men for another world, but labor unions have sweetened life in this. The press, the politician, the court, the philanthropist have all worked in their own way for the uplift of humanity; the unions have taken millions of children from blighting toil and sent them to school, and that is the only effectual means of uplift.

Low wages, and fear of idleness and want, drive men to long hours of labor that exhaust them physically, morally and spiritually. Again, fear of losing a job induces a species of servility, a submission to petty tyranny and exactions, that is wholly foreign to a manly spirit. Ready, prompt, cheerful obedience to proper orders is a virtue that becomes a man, but he whose necessities compel submission to indignity and imposition is a pitiable object indeed.

Better wages, hours and labor conditions are the things essential for a better civilization. The union makes no mistake when it demands them.

The unions have said that wages are too low to live properly; the result is an increase of a million dollars a day. They said that the working day was too long, that we lacked time for education or recreation. The hours of labor are being rapidly reduced, not only for union men, but for all men.

The conditions, sanitary and otherwise, under which humanity toiled, always inhuman, often indecent. Labor's protest has brought about some improvement, and promise of more. Laws to protect labor, especially child and woman labor, and to promote its welfare, now fill volumes. Fifty years ago a small pamphlet would afford space for them all.

This year we have made provision for the care of every man injured at his work, and for the support of his family. When we consider that there is at least one worker killed in Massachusetts at his labor every day, and nearly two hundred injured, we conceive that we have done a great work in assuring them against want.

These are some of the things which we have accomplished, and it is fitting that we should set aside a day to celebrate victories, rejoice over our gains, and gather renewed strength and cheer for future battles.

But all these achievements are small compared to one now becoming more and more apparent. We are conquering public opinion, awakening the conscience of the people to the justice of our demand for greater means, more leisure and better conditions of labor, in order that we may enjoy larger, fuller, broader, happier lives.

The largest, freest opportunity for the humblest worker to bring out the best that is in him, absolute justice, the full product of his labor, equality of opportunity—these are some of the aims of organized labor, and Labor day, with its parades and rest, celebrates their partial attainment.

May the Labor day soon come when those who live without labor shall realize that they live upon labor.

FIRST PARADE IN 1882

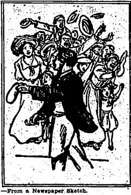
Knights of Labor of New York Inaugurated the March, as a Celebration of the Day, in the Eastern Metropolis That Year.

UNLIKE other holidays that are observed by the American people, Labor day did not have its beginning in the commemoration of any great event in the world's history and for that reason there is considerable doubt as to who was responsible for its birth.

There are many who lay claim to being the originators of Labor's national holiday, and there have been many chronological tables produced in support of each one's claim. Authorities, however, are almost unanimously agreed that the celebration that has now become one of the national holidays was given its first impulse by the Knights of Labor in New York in 1882.

Those who took part in this first movement did not, they say, at that time dream that what to them was merely an outing for the toilers of the metropolis would in the not distant future assume world-wide proportions.

It is a coincidence that the men who laid the foundations for Labor day selected the first Monday in September. Why they did it they do not know except for the fact that at that time of the year most of the industrial institutions of the country are either about to resume operations or have done so, and with a year of steady work and good wages as the prospect the toilers felt more in a mood to jubilate.



—From a Newspaper Sketch.

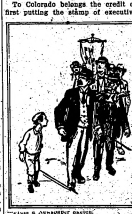
Along the Line of March.

The first celebration in New York took the form which has been the accepted one for years, namely, a parade of the union forces of the city. Following this another feature, speeches by leading labor orators, was also found on the program.

Following the New York outing in 1882, the same organization, encouraged by the success of the first affair, held another one two years later. The wage-workers in other parts of the country started celebrations of the same kind.

In 1886 the American Federation of Labor went on record as favoring a day of this kind and instructed the delegates to work among their constituents and secure as early as possible legislative approval of it. This gave the movement its real start.

To Colorado belongs the credit of first putting the stamp of executive approval on Labor day. On March 15, 1887, the bill which had passed both houses unanimously received official sanction. Following closely after came New Jersey, on April 8 of the same year, while New York fell in line a month afterward.



—From a Newspaper Sketch.

Forming the Parade.

The trade unionists of Pennsylvania observed the holiday some years before 1889, when the legislature of that state made it a legal holiday. The act of 1889 merely set the date as the first Monday in September, in conformity with that of other states.

Every state in the Union except Arizona, Mississippi, North Dakota and Louisiana has adopted a law setting this day apart.

Good Work of Trade Unions.

By insurance and sick benefits the trade unions do a great concrete work for their members. National unions reported disbursements of $7,829,121 in 1908, including $5,164,885 for death of members; $832,760 for temporary disability, $684,755 for permanent disability, $798,618 for superannuation and $892,321 other miscellaneous benefits.

Since its foundation, on November 15, 1881, the American Federation of Labor has increased in membership from 50,000 to 1,761,835 paid-up and reported memberships of the directly affiliated local unions and international organizations.

Labor in High Place.

Never has there been a time when labor held such a high place as now. Education and free institutions are putting it where it belongs, namely, in a place where all men must give it due meed of respect and honor and its proper share of the proceeds of its activities. It is the day of the people, for men who toil with their hands form the multitude of the [illegible]

BAR AGAINST LOVE

Protested Note Makes "Blue Monday," but Eventually There Was Glad Ending.

By GEORGE ELMER COBB.

It was "Blue Monday" for Max Wilber, with a vengeance! It was after a bright, blissful Sunday, for had he not seen Leila Marsh and passed with her one of the most delightful evenings of his life? Not that affairs were settled in that quarter, but he could not forget the bright eyes and radiant cheeks that had greeted him, nor the parting moment under the waving cherry blossoms, with the white moonlight drifting down upon that rare head of burnished gold.

Then, too, up to the hour of the opening of the bank, Max had felt something more than cheerful and happy. He was thirteen hundred dollars to the good, had a permanent position, enjoyed the confidence of the bank officers, and was led to look to a cashiership in the near future.

And then the reaction: the formal call to the office of the stern and dignified president, who waved him to a seat and tossed a note across the glass-topped table with the single word:

"Protested."

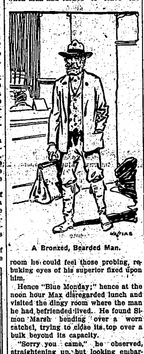
Max turned a little pale as he scanned the bit of paper. It was a note ninety days old, signed by Simon Marsh and indorsed by himself, amount $1,000, and pinned to it was the notation of fifteen dollars interest overdue, and one-fifth of that amount for protest fees. He was considerably perturbed, but looked up steadily with the question:

"It could not be renewed?"

"Scarcely," sententiously remarked the president, his declaration fixed and somber as the utterance of fate.

"I will pay it, then," said Max, who quietly drew out his check book, calculated the gross, and passed over the earnings and savings of two years.

All this was done quietly and strictly according to bank ethics, but even when Max had turned to leave the room he could feel those probing, rebuking eyes of his superior fixed upon him.



A Bronzed, Bearded Man.

Hence "Blue Monday;" hence at the noon hour Max disregarded lunch and visited the dingy room where the man he had befriended lived. He found Simon Marsh bending over a worn satchel, trying to close its top over a bulk beyond its capacity.

"Sorry you came," he observed, straightening up, but looking embarrassed and guilty. "I was just going after that thousand dollars I owe the bank."

"You owe it to me now," advised Max, with a nervous laugh.

"Eh—how's that?"

"Well, I deceived you. When you wanted that money, and wanted it so bad, and seemed to have such glittering prospects, I hated to refuse you. I submitted your application to the directors, together with your security—a deed for that ten acres of mining land out in the Black Hills. They laughed at it. I—I knew you, and besides—"

"You needn't tell it!" almost shouted the old man. "You did that for me? And it's leaked out. And my niece knew it first."

"Your niece—Leila?" repeated Max, stupefied.

"Just that. She was here an hour ago, crying. She twitted me for taking your last dollar. Say, did I know it? An honest, well meaning man, hadn't I faith in my little mining claim and a right to believe that the bank saw it my way? Say, I feel it hard—you put the loan through for me and risked your own money! I—I—"

The old man sat down on his satchel and dashed the tears from his eyes. Max was really touched.

"I've ruined you, I see that," went on Marsh quite brokenly. "I see it all. It was Leila I was thinking of. Say, I feel mean!"

"Don't go worrying," said Max, greatly moved at the old man's genuine misery. "You meant well. As to Leila, I am very, very sorry that she has learned of this."

"That is the hardest part of it," mourned Marsh. "Now, then, I'm going to leave here. After that money. There's one thing I can do—give up my foolish dream of raising a million to exploit my mine and go back to the old grub basis. It's slow, but sure. Just hold that note, I'm going to make good."

Max shook his head dubiously as he left the old man. He was gloomy all day. In fact, his spirits became so depressed towards evening that he felt he must get sympathy at least distraction of mind somewhere. So he went to see Leila.

She was formal, chilling. He spent an awkward hour trying to keep up a casual conversation [illegible] when he grew [illegible] money—it looked as if he had lost his love, as well.

"There is something I must say," he spoke in a strained, tremulous tone as he stood at the door in parting. "It is on my heart and will not allow me to rest. Miss Marsh, Leila, I love—"

The solemn dignity of her uplifted hand checked him.

"Not—now," she said simply. "There is a debt to pay, Mr. Wilber. Good evening."

And about a week later Max knew that Leila had done two things—opened a savings bank account and insured her life. He might admire her high consistency to principle, but this set barrier against love made him wretched.

They met at church, at some local social events after that, but always a distance between them. It nearly broke the heart of Max to see a marked economy in dress on the part of Leila. She was an orphan and worked as stenographer for the city courts. Her pay was not large.

"Saving, skimping, suffering to pay me—me, who would give her my life!" reflected Max, distractedly.

There came into the bank one day a bronzed, bearded man, with a ragged canvas satchel bearing traces of long and difficult travel. He placed it across the counter, opened it and took out a small wooden box.

"From the mint," he said in a curious, hoarse voice.

The clerks watched him with some interest. They had never before seen those little oblong yellow bricks, stamped, "U. S. M., $110," "U. S. M., $112," "U. S. M., $114."

The stranger placed ten of them to one side with a single question: "Where is Mr. Max Wilber?"

And this is what Max saw when he came out from the directors' room.

"I promised you," said Simon Marsh, extending a hand hard as a piece of gristle. "Just a pan of water and a dip into the old chute tailings. It's a sure ten dollars a day and I'm going back to the Hills to repeat the operation as soon as I see my niece."

"Speak one word for me."

And this was the line he received from the grim old prospector a few hours later:

"Debt canceled. Claim your own. Leila sees the light. Bless you both!"

"Only a little sorrowing, a little patience," spoke Max that evening, Leila by his side, once again amid the lure of the white moonlight, "and this glad ending."

AS DICKENS PICTURED IT

Henry James Tells of London in the '50s, When He Visited Britain's Great Metropolis.

Henry James' description of London as he saw it as a little boy in the '50s is not only one of the most interesting portions of his biographical work, "A Small Boy and Others," but should be cited by those who contend against current opinion that Dickens' characters are exaggerated. For instance, he says in one place: "The London people had for themselves an exuberance of type. We found it in particular a world of costume, often of very odd costume, the most intimate notes of which were the postmen in their frock coats of military red and their black beaver hats; the milk women, in hats that often emulated these, in little shawls and strange, short, full frocks, revealing enormous boots, with their pails swung from their shoulders on wooden yokes. The range of character on the other hand reached rather dreadfully down; there were embodied and exemplified horrors in the streets beside which any present exhibition is pale—figures reminding me of George Cruickshank's Artful Dodger and his Bill Sikes, only with the bigger brutality of life—and culminating far to the west in the vivid picture, framed by the cab window, of a woman reeling backward as a man felled her to the ground with a blow in the face."

Scored.

Mr. Smart was a very testy old fellow, and if there was one thing he hated more than another it was to be "caught napping." As a consequence, he was always very suspicious of any deed or word the full meaning of which he could not grasp.

A few days ago he paid a visit to the zoo, and, being fond of animals, was greatly interested, and soon got into conversation with one of the keepers. A very entertaining chat ensued.

As Mr. Smart was about to leave, the keeper turned to him and asked:

"By the way, sir, have you seen our black-faced antelope?"

There, thought the old gent, was an attempt to "have" him.

"No, sir," he replied, stiffly, "I have not. May I ask with whom it was that your black-faced aunt eloped?"

Ready-Witted Salesman.

Some salesmen are equal to almost any emergency and do not spare the "other car" when occasion requires. "But the Blank car is guaranteed for life," protested a prospective purchaser to a salesman of the sort. "Yes, I know it is," retorted the quick-witted salesman, "but our car is guaranteed for a whole year." It required several moments for the prospective purchaser to see the point.

FACE BROKE OUT IN PIMPLES

Falls City, Neb.—"My trouble began when I was about sixteen. My face broke out in little pimples at first. They were red and sore and then became like little boils. I picked at my face continually and it made my face red and sore looking and then I would wake up at night and scratch it. It was a source of continual annoyance to me, as my face was always red and splotched and burned all the time.

"I tried ——, —— and others, but I could find nothing to cure it. I had been troubled about two years before I found Cuticura Soap and Ointment. HE CARRIED AN UMBRELLA.

A dear old lady who was very "sot" in her prejudices was asked just why she didn't like a certain man. She had no particular reason that she could think of at the instant, but she had been so emphatic in her expression of dislike that she knew she would have to find some excuse—at once. Just at that moment she happened to glance out of the window and saw him passing by. He carried a neatly rolled umbrella though it hardly threatened rain.

Quick as a flash she answered her questioner, "He carries an umbrella whether it's raining or not—he is a 'softie.'"

"But," said her friend, also looking out of the window, "here comes your son William, and he is carrying an umbrella."

This did not stump the old lady. "But that's another matter—I don't like him anyhow—and besides, it all depends on who carries the umbrella," she replied triumphantly.

That is the position some people have taken regarding that wholesome and refreshing beverage Coca-Cola. They have said a good many unkind things about it and in each instance have had it proved to them that their tales were not true.

Finally they seized upon the fact that Coca-Cola gets much of its refreshing deliciousness from the small bit of caffeine that it contains. They looked upon that as a splendid argument against it. Then, like the old lady who was reminded of son William, they were reminded that it is the caffeine in their favorite beverages, tea and coffee, (even more than in Coca-Cola) that gives them their refreshing and sustaining qualities.

But does that stop their criticism of Coca-Cola for containing caffeine? No—their answer is similar to the old lady's—they say "But that's another matter"—what they mean is "Being prejudiced against Coca-Cola and liking tea or coffee, it all depends on what carries the caffeine."

We think the joke is on them—for caffeine is caffeine, and if it is not harmful in one it can't be harmful in another. We all know that it is not harmful in tea or coffee—that it is really helpful in whatever it is—this is bound to include Coca-Cola.

Of course, the truth is, that having started an attack on false premises and having had what they thought were good reasons for criticism proved to be no reasons at all, they are grasping at an excuse which does not exist; to explain a prejudice. So you see, after all, it all depends on who carries the umbrella to people who are determined to be unfair. Let us be fair.—Adv.

Evidently Knew the Kind.

Mrs. M. left the house for a few moments one morning, telling little Hazel to answer the door bell if necessary. Presently there was a ring. The lady caller, learning that Mrs. M. was not at home, opened her card case, and in doing so a bit of tissue paper fluttered to the steps. Picking it up, Hazel remarked: "Mith, you dropped one of your thigerette paperth."—The Delineator.

President Wilson's Message.

The United States will not intervene to end civil war in Mexico. To do so would involve this country in war. On the contrary, strict neutrality will be continued, and no help will be permitted to cross the border to either side of the present armed conflict.

Again, the United States will not recognize the present Huerta government of Mexico, now or ever. But if hostilities cease and there is a peaceful, legalized and fair election, Huerta not being a candidate, the United States will at once recognize whoever is elected as the lawful president of that country and will do all it rightly can to support his administration and to make it a success.

These are the essentials of President Wilson's message on conditions in Mexico and our relations to that country. It was, in the main, a frank statement of the present chaotic internal situation there, given in words showing a spirit of extreme frendliness.

It was to this end President Wilson sent John Lind as his personal representative to "press very earnestly" upon the provisional president and advisers the attitude of this country.

This included the plan for a cessation of hostilities, and a constitutional election. This message was friendly but emphatic. It was rejected and the whole purpose of the president's statement to congress was to make clear to all the world the position of this country and the lengths to which he had gone to bring about a peaceful adjustment, making sharp also the issue.

Acknowledging the value of the moral support of the other powers, the message closes with the expectation that "the steady pressure of moral force will, before many days, break down the barriers of pride and prejudice and we shall triumph as Mexico's friends sooner than we could triumph as her enemies—and how much more handsomely, with how much higher and finer satisfaction of conscience and of honor.—Duluth News-Tribune.

The Northwest School of Agriculture does not offer work for boys alone. It has also, a very strong Domestic Science and Art Department. The work is divided into classes giving cooking, sewing, and household management. The kitchen in which the cooking classes are held is equipped with an acetylene gas outfit and has complete furnishings for doing splendid work. The sewing work consists of dressmaking, embroidery, etc. The household management consists of keeping home accounts and the practice of economy. Lectures are given in household sanitation and hygiene which are very valuable to the students.

The work in these departments will be in charge of Miss Mabel H. Olson, formerly of Albert Lea College, considered one of the strongest teachers in the state. She will be assisted by Miss Ethel Kadlec, of the Agricultural College, S. Paul.

The girls will also get work in agricultural subjects, such as poultry, dairy work, fruit raising, vegetable garden work, and grain work. Some of the academic subjects that will be taken are Grammar, Arithmetic, Physiology and Civil Government. Normal Training Course taken in connection with this work prepares the students for teaching.

State Land Sale.

State Auditor Iverson this week announced the dates for twenty-three auction sales of state land from October 29 to November 29 at which approximately 504,000 acres will be offered to the public. These lands are distributed throughout the state and are sold to the highest bidder. Fifteen per cent of the purchase price must be paid at the time of sale and the balance may run forty years at 4 per cent annual interest if desired.

Oklee defeated Plummer last Sunday at a trap shooting meet, a team of five representing each town and if the shooting of that day is any indication of what may be expected in the field this fall, the old hen and her chicks have about as much chance of making a get-away as a democrat has of landing an office—this is the chances are fine. Owing to the high wind the shooting was poor, Oklee getting 56 and Plummer 52 out of a possible 125. Bakke of Oklee had high score with 19 out of 25.

M. E. Ibertson of Bemidji, the Beltrami County Coroner, was called out to Grygla last week to investigate the cause of the death of Ole D. Nygaard, who was found dead at his home. Nygaard was a bachelor, living on homestead near Grygla in Beltrami county. On Sunday morning one of his neighbors found him dead in his bedroom. Coroner Ibertson, after investigating the case stated that it was clearly a case of suicide as the rifle with which the man was shot was right in the room in such a position that would lead to the conclusion that Nygaard had used it to take his life.

Library of the Vatican.

The Vatican library is probably the most sumptuously housed in the world. This, of course, is only as it should be, for the collection contains some of the most precious manuscripts in existence, including the Biblical "Codex Viticanus" of the fourth century the fifth century Virgil and the palimpsest "De Republica" of Cicero.

The printed books include over 2,500 15th century editions, many of them vellum copies. The total library has been estimated to comprise over 220,000 volumes and 30,000 manuscripts, but it has never been adequately catalogued.

A belated guest found his way into the Arcade hotel, Watertown, N. Y., one night, and, following a series of manoeuvers, entered a telephone booth. After looking out several times inquiringly he hailed the night clerk and said: "Shay, I wanna go to m' room. When 'n thunder y' goin' to' run thish elevator up?"—New York Telephone Review.

Following several discussions lately by the girls of the public schools, it is probable a basketball team will be organized soon. It is likely that girls of the village will be invited to join the school girls in forming a team or possibly two teams will be organized.

Ed. Keifenheim, the local slab artist, may break into organized base ball for next season. After having been out more than thirteen hours, Judge Wright at noon Sunday received the verdict of the jury which during the past week has listened to the trial of the Parker-Engler case, which resulted in the verdict giving the plaintiff $4,683.32, the entire amount requested. According to instructions from the postoffice department no parcel post packages will be accepted for shipment unless they are well and carefully wrapped. In the past many packages have been damaged merely because the shipper was careless about the method of packing. The national officers at Washington have sent out orders saying that any damaged parcel which can be found to have been damaged because of poor wrapping will be charged to the post office clerk who accepted it.

Now that chicken hunting is almost a thing of the past and duck and partridge hunting soon to be shelved, local hunters are anxiously awaiting the opening of the big game season. There are still a few deer in this country, but the majority of the hunters will seek game in the big woods in Beltrami and Koochiching counties. It is probable there are more hunters than deer here so it is a toss-up as to which will be the safer—to go out before season and risk the chance of being caught by the game warden or to go out after the season opens and be mistaken and shot for a deer.

INGENIOUS IDEA OF ROBBER

Absolutely Innocent According to Way He Explained It, but Judge Was Doubtful.

The other evening a man of the burglar type stepped up to an old gentleman and, handing him a piece of paper, said:

"Sir, would you be good enough to read me the writing on this piece of paper?"

The individual addressed consented and, moving toward the rays of a convenient gas lamp, read the following words:

"If you utter a cry or speak a single word I shall shoot you. Give me your watch and chain and your purse at once and then pass on."

Completely taken off his guard, the gentleman handed over the articles asked for and walked off. A few steps brought him to a policeman, and, relating his story, the pair proceeded in pursuit of the stranger, who was not yet out of sight.

Next morning before the magistrate, the vagrant was called upon for an explanation.

"Your honor," he said, "I am not an educated man, and, therefore, can neither read nor write. Last evening I picked up a piece of paper, and, it striking me that it might be of some importance, I took it to the first person I met and asked him to decipher it. The gentleman read it quietly to himself and then without saying a word, handed me his watch, chain and purse and walked off without giving me time to recover from my surprise or to ask him what he meant."

BRIDAL CUSTOMS OF GERMANY

Many Appear Somewhat Odd to Us, but All Are Pretty and Based on Common Sense.

There are many curious betrothal customs in Germany that are found no place else in the world. Many of them are pretty. All of them are odd.

As soon as a German girl is betrothed she is addressed as "bride" by her fiance. The betrothal is a more serious affair than in America and is not so easily broken. The girl is called "bride" until the wedding, when she assumes the title of "wife."

Immediately upon the betrothal the lovers exchange rings, which, if the course of true love runs smooth, are to be worn ever afterwards.

The woman wears her betrothal ring on the third finger of her left hand until she is married, and then it is transferred to the third finger of her right hand.

The man continues to wear his ring just as his wife wore hers when she was a bride. There is no chance for him to pose as if he were a single man. One can tell at a glance if he has achieved matrimony, and German girls believe that this is the safest way, as it keeps other girls from flirting with their fiance or husband. The wearing of the wedding ring by the German men is said to have made the divorce percentage small.

"Lady" and "Gentlewoman."

Connected, no doubt, with the cheapening of the word "lady" has been the practical disappearnce of the "gentlewoman." The distinction between the two was brought out in the seventeenth century "Rules of Civility," which declared that "in visiting a lady it is not enough to salute her, but her gentlewoman also if she be then present." At the beginning of the nineteenth century, "one who has marked with attentive observation the late vicissitudes in kingdoms and governments, and, with a precision almost prophetic, foretold what would happen," advertised in The Times his readiness to "give such advice to persons of fortune as may prove of the very utmost importance to them." "When a lady requires an interview," said the advertisment, "a gentlewoman will give her the meeting."—London Chronicle.

Umbrella a Man Likes.

That Spineless Type.

Bishop Quayle, at a dinner in St. Paul, was talking about that spineless type of divine who waters and flavors his doctrine to suit his wealthier parishioners.

"I can imagine one of these men," said Bishop Quayle, "trying to give his flock the simple and straightforward exhortation, 'Of two evils choose the lesser'—and then his eye happens to meet that of a multimillionaire.

"Is the multimillionaire frowning? Is there a hard, disapproving glitter in his eye? The divine clears his throat again.

"'Hm! Of two evils,' he stammers, 'choose, my brethren, the lesser, unless it be, of course, that—hm! hm—the other evil is the more—hm—profitable.'"

COMMENCE PURCHASE OF RIGHT OF WAY FOR ELECTRIC ROAD

The work of acquiring the right of way for the first section of the Minnesota Northwestern Electric Railway company's line was commenced this week. The line will pass through the townships of North, Silverton, Cloverleaf and Goodridge, located so as to accommodate the greatest number of prospective shippers.

If satisfactory arrangements can be made with the property owners it is probable that the work of construction on the first twenty or twenty-five miles will start this fall.

State Attracting Settlers

Minnesota is attracting thousands of homeseekers this year. The bulk of these come from the states of Iowa, Illinois and Indiana. The Minnesota exhibit at the state fairs of Illinois and Indiana were particularly attractive to the farmers of those states and daily people are visiting Minnesota in search of moderate priced lands, who received their first inspiration to seek a home in the North Star State, by visiting the Minnesota exhibits during their state fairs. At Illinois last week thousands of names of prospective Minnesota homeseekers were registered by the men in charge of the Springfield exhibit and literature setting forth Minnesota's great advantages as a place in which to acquire a home at moderate cost, will be mailed to them from the State Board of Immigration office at St. Paul.

Soo Offers Reductions.

In line with its customary interest in the traveling public's welfare, the Soo Line will on Nov. 1st sell complete through tickets either way between points in North Dakota and Minnesota on a rate based on the present legal rates in the two states. The recent reduction in Minnesota rates from 3c to 2c per mile necessitated an immense amount of work by the rate department. The people in this department have been working night and day to get the new schedules ready so that the public could profit by them.

"When rates are changed in one state, the through rate between a point in that state to a point in an adjoining sate cannot be changed by the railroads until permission is granted by the Interstate Commission.

INNOVATION MAY NOT WORK

Weak Human Nature Likely to Spoil Laudable Move Made by an Eastern Railroad.

In announcing a breakfast car service for commuters an eastern railroad evidently seeks to discourage the reprehensible practice of sprinting for the morning train, and the still more reprehensible practice of missing it. But there appears some danger that the innovation may fail of its laudable purpose, remarks the Newark Star. The average commuter's last moments is too deeply ingrained to be broken. The time saved by not breakfasting at home will be devoted to 40 extra winks. As it is now, when Mr. Howson Lott, of Lonesomehurst, hears the chugging of his train leaving the next station up the road it is the signal for him as he struggles with his necktie to yell down stairs, "Maria, have Bridget pour the coffee. Under the new order of things the same sound will be the reveille for him to jump out of bed and shed his pajamas. And then, too, what about the card playing contingent? How can the commuter expect to reach his office in a proper frame of mind for business if he has been wasting upon breakfast the time consecrated to the regular morning game? Pinocle and pancakes are plainly incompatible.

Library of the Vatican.

The Vatican library is probably the most sumptuously housed in the world. This, of course, is only as it should be, for the collection contains some of the most precious manuscripts in existence, including the Biblical "Codex Viticanus" of the fourth century the fifth century Virgil and the palimpsest "De Republica" of Cicero.

The printed books include over 2,500 15th century editions, many of them vellum copies. The total library has been estimated to comprise over 220,000 volumes and 30,000 manuscripts, but it has never been adequately catalogued.

Now that chicken hunting is almost a thing of the past and duck and partridge hunting soon to be shelved, local hunters are anxiously awaiting the opening of the big game season. There are still a few deer in this country, but the majority of the hunters will seek game in the big woods in Beltrami and Koochiching counties. It is probable there are more hunters than deer here so it is a toss-up as to which will be the safer—to go out before season and risk the chance of being caught by the game warden or to go out after the season opens and be mistaken and shot for [illegible]

INGENIOUS IDEA OF ROBBER

Absolutely [illegible] According to Way He [illegible], but Judge Was [illegible].

The other [illegible] a man of the burglar type [illegible] to an old gentleman and handed him a piece of paper, [illegible]:

"Sir, would [illegible] be good enough to read me the [illegible] on this piece of paper?"

The individual addressed consented and, moving [illegible] the rays of a convenient [illegible] read the following words:

"If you utter [illegible] or speak a single word I shall [illegible] you. Give me your watch and [illegible] and your purse at once and [illegible] on."

Completely [illegible] off his guard, the gentleman [illegible] over the articles asked for and [illegible] off. A few steps brought him to a policeman, and, relating his story, [illegible] proceeded in pursuit of the [illegible], who was not yet out of sight.

Next morning, before the magistrate, the vagabond was called upon for an explanation.

"Your honor," [illegible] said, "I am not an educated man, and, therefore, can neither read nor write. Last evening I picked up a [illegible] of paper, and, it striking me that it might be of some importance, I [illegible] to the first person I met and [illegible] him to decipher it. The gentleman read it quietly to himself, and, [illegible] without saying a word, handed me his watch, chain and purse and [illegible] off without giving me time to recover from my surprise or to ask him what he meant."

BRIDAL CUSTOMS OF GERMANY

Many Appear [illegible] Odd to Us, but All Are [illegible] and Based on Common Sense.

There are many curious betrothal customs in Germany that are found no place else in the world. Many of them are pretty, [illegible] of them are odd.

As soon as a German girl is betrothed she is addressed as "bride" by her fiance. The betrothal is a more serious affair than in America and is not so easily broken. The girl is called "bride" until the wedding, when she assumes the title of "wife."

Immediately upon the betrothal the lovers exchange rings, which, if the course of true love runs smooth, are to be worn ever afterwards.

The woman wears her betrothal ring on the third finger of her left hand until she is married, and then it is transferred to the third finger of her right hand. [illegible] ring just as his wife wore hers when she was a bride. There is no chance for him to pose as if he were a single man. One can tell at a glance if he has achieved matrimony, and German girls believe that this is the safest way, as it keeps other girls from flirting with their fiance or husband. The wearing of the wedding ring by the German men is said to have made the divorce percentage small.

"Lady" and "Gentlewoman."

Connected, no doubt, with the cheapening of the word "lady" has been the practical disappearance of the "gentlewoman." The distinction between the two was brought out in the seventeenth century "Rules of Civility," which declared that "in visiting a lady it is not enough to salute her, but her gentlewoman also if she be then present." At the beginning of the nineteenth century, "one who has marked with attentive observation the late vicissitudes in kingdoms and governments, and, with a precision almost prophetic, foretold what would happen," advertised in The Times his readiness to "give such advice to persons of fortune as may prove of the very utmost importance to them." "When a lady requires an interview," said the advertisment, "a gentlewoman will give her the meeting."—London Chronicle.

Umbrella a Man Likes.

That Spineless Type.

Bishop Quayle, at a dinner in St. Paul, was talking about that spineless type of divine who waters and flavors his doctrine to suit his wealthier parishioners.

"I can imagine one of these men," said Bishop Quayle, "trying to give his flock the simple and straightforward exhortation, 'Of two evils choose the lesser'—and then his eye happens to meet that of a multimillionaire.

"As the multimillionaire [illegible] is there a harsh, disapproving glitter in his eye? The divine clears his throat again.

"'Hm! Of two evils,' he stammers, 'choose, my brethren, the lesser, unless it be, of course, that [illegible] the other evil is [illegible]'"

COMMENCE PURCHASE OF RIGHT OF WAY FOR ELECTRIC ROAD

The work of acquiring the right of way for the first section of the Minnesota Northwestern Electric Railway company's line was commenced this week. As previously stated the main line line will run in a general easterly direction, the territory north and south to be accommodated with branch lines.—Thief River Falls News-Press.

Searchlight Reveal Indescribable Horror—Carmania Leads Fleet of Steamers in Work of Saving Passengers.

Liverpool, Oct. 14.—One hundred and thirty-six women, children and men lost their lives when the Uranium line steamship Volturna, leased from the Royal line, caught fire in mid-Atlantic on Thursday and burned to the water's edge on Friday.

Survivor Tells Story.

The only survivor that has yet told his story says the English captain and his English officers behaved gallantly in the face of death, but declares the German and Bulgarian crews acted cowardly.

The carmania, with one lone survivor of the Volturno aboard, found it too rough to stop at Queenstown and is proceeding direct to Fishguard. From that survivor, however, comes a thrilling story of the burning of the steamer, of the terror, the struggle for the boats, the death of those who went over the sides and his own desperate fight for life.

Ten big linners, led by the Cunarder Carmania, Captain Barr, stood by the striken ship and battled for many hours in a fierce gale to rescue the passengers and crew, but were able to take off and pick up only 521 persons.

Rescue Long Delayed.

While hundreds of passengers aboard the rescue fleet crowded the rails, spellbound with horror, the captains maneuvered in desperate attempts to get alongside the Volturno, but were unable to do so until daybreak Friday.

Captain Barr then ran a lifeboat under the stern of the Volturno and took off eleven passengers. Other captains followed, and the survivors taken from the Volturno as well as those picked up in the only two Volturno lifeboats that got away during the fire were distributed among the rescuing liners.

From Thursday noon the Carmania stood by, helpless, on account of the terrific storm and mountainous waves, until early Friday. The last of the surviving passengers and crew were taken off at 9:30 a. m. Friday. The Carmania was alone with the burning liner until the Grosser, Furst and Seidlitz came up about 4 p. m. Thursday. The other seven rescue ships arrived shortly afterward.

Four Lifeboats Smashed.

While the Carmania's passengers looked on, frantic and helpless, four lifeboats lowered from the Volturno were smashed against the side of the heavily rolling ship and their passengers, including women and children, were drowned. A broken propeller of the Volturno had so fouled the tackle of the lifeboats that only six could be lowered and only two got away.

As darkness fell, the Carmania kept its powerful searchlights playing on the waters around the burning boat, looking for possible passengers that might have taken to the sea in their desperation. Captain Barr also threw out burning buoys all night to light the ghastly scene. Their light played on the poop of the Volturno and showed plainly the hopeless women, children and men huddled there throughout the night.

At midnight there was some hope aroused when the fire appeared to be dying down. Captain Barr made another attempt to get a boat to the ship, and when this failed he ran the Carmania head-on within 100 feet of the Volturno's stern. It was impossible, though, to get a line aboard the wreck.

Volturno Sinks.

The fire broke out fiercely in the after engine room before dawn and when daylight came it was seen that the Volturno was sinking by the head.

The gale had abated by then and lifeboats from the rescue fleet were run alongside the burning liner, taking off the last of the survivors.

The Volturno was abandoned at 9:20 a. m. on Friday and sank a few minutes later.

The 136 missing passengers were burned to death, drowned in the smashed boats or jumped overboard.

Officials of the Uranium company declared early that those on board included 24 cabin and 540 steerage passengers, with a crew of 93.

Boston Mayor Asks Page's Recall.

Boston, Oct. 14.—The recall from England of Ambassador Page was urged by Mayor Fitzgerald in a Faneuil hall address on the ground that the ambassador was imprudent and had "sacraficed truth in order to cater to English nobility." The mayor characterized as "arrant nonsense" a statement credited to Mr. Page at Southampton to the effect that United States is still English and English ruled. "No particular blood can lay claim to leadership in this country," said Fitzgerald.

GIRL CHARGES ST. PAUL MAN

MILLIONAIRE INDICTED UNDER MANN ACT.

William Rufus Edwards Is Charged With Taking Woman to Minnesota Against Will.

Chicago.—An indictment has just been returned by the federal grand jury against William Rufus Edwards, millionaire lumber and coal dealer and prominent club man of St. Paul. The indictment contained seven charges of violations of the Mann white slave law. The complaining witness, Miss Ada Cox, a stenographer, testified that Edwards caused her to go to St. Paul from Chicago in October, 1910.

Miss Cox in 1910 was in the employ of the Shelby County Coal company, of which concern M. E. Mogg was president and general manager. Edwards had business relations with Mr. Mogg and it was on one of his trips to Chicago in July, 1910, that he met Miss Cox.

According to the story the young woman tells, the St. Paul millionaire asked Mr. Mogg to introduce him to her. Edwards followed up his introduction by an invitation to luncheon, which Miss Cox says she refused to accept.

Miss Cox says that she refused repeated invitations to luncheon, supper and theaters until Sept. 10, 1910, on which date she went to luncheon with the millionaire. They went quite frequently after that and on Oct. 6 she acceptd an invitation of Mr. Edwards to spend a weey in St. Paul. Edwards sent her a ticket, she states, and on Oct. 7 she left Chicago, arriving in St. Paul the morning of Oct. 8.

Against her inclination, she alleges, she went that night with him to a number of cafes, drank against her wishes, became intoxicated and, when she woke up the next day found herself in a house in Ninth street south, Minneapolis. The following day Mr. Edwards promised to marry her, according to Miss Cox, but this promise was never carried out.

On the basis of the alleged episode related, Miss Cox brought suit against Edwards for breach of promise and was awarded a verdict in her favor of $15,208. The case was appealed, and she has never collected the damages.

Voluntarily Appears in Chicago.

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 10.—William Rufus Edwards, millionaire St. Paul lumberman, who is under indictment for violations of the Mann act, appeared before Federal Judge Carpenter and gave a bond of $5,000.

Mr. Edwards was not formally arrested, but surrendered himself to the court. The office of the United States marshal, through an oversight, was not notified of Mr. Edwards' presence in Chicago and the bench warrant remained unserved on the marshal's desk. No date was set for further proceedings. Mr. Edwards merely giving himself up to the court and then being immediately released on a bond which was signed by the Illinois Surety company. The proceedings took a few moments.

Mr. Edwards appeared in court with his attorney, Hobart P. Young. The government was represented by Assistant District Attorney Harry A. Parkin, who will have charge of the prosecution of the case. It was at Mr. Parkin's suggestion that a bond of $5,000 was fixed. Mr. Young said that he had no objection to make to the amount and the bond of the Illinois Surety company was offered and accepted.

Mr. Edwards was indicted on the strength of charges made by Miss Ada M. Cox, a stenographer formerly in the offices of the Shelby County Coal company of Chicago, who alleges that Mr. Edwards caused her transportation from Chicago to St. Paul, Oct. 7, 1910.

The millionaire was asked what he had to say relative to the charges which have been brought against him. He branded them as "lies."

"The story, as I understand, the girl told before the federal grand jury," said Mr. Edwards, "is false in every respect. It is a fabrication of lies. The story she has told is the same as that on which she based her suit against me in St. Paul more than a year ago. There is absolutely no foundation for it. She has told it in an attempt to extort money from me. She did it in the breach of promise suit which she brought against me and now she has gone before the federal grand jury and told the same set of lies. Her end in view is the same as that when she brought suit—to extort money from me."

According to Mr. Young, his client had not registered at any hotel and would return to St. Paul in the evening.

BREAD AND WATER SPECIFIED

Court Designates This as Diet for Prisoner, But Legal Question Arises.

Minneapolis.—Although Ole Sam, bricklayer, has been sentenced to serve 90 days in the county jail, to be fed on bread and water until he consents to go to work to support his family, developments made it look as though the man would get his "three squares a day" just the same.

Judge C. L. Smith ordered that the man be put on the bread and water diet after the latter refused to go to work. The jailer doubted the court's jurisdiction in ordering a certain diet for the prisoner and asked the sheriff what he should do. The sheriff appealed to the county attorney for enlightenment and the latter took the matter up with the attorney gerenal for an opinion on the validity of the court commitment with a bread-and-water-diet clause.

The county attorney held that the court has no right to issue such an order. It is understood that the attorney general feels the same way.

The case of Ole Sam is one that has troubled the judges of the municipal court and the Associated Charities organization for many months. His 12-month-old daughter is dying from Bright's disease and his wife and other children are destitute for food and fuel. Still Ole Sam won't work. He doesn't see the necessity for it when he can be fed and clothed at the workhouse.

SCHOOL FUND LARGEST EVER

October Apportionment Is $1,450,794, Due to the One Mill Tax for Education.

Minneapolis.—Owing to growth of the permanent school fund and increased receipts from the one-mill state tax for schools, the October apportionment of the current school fund, announced by Superintendent of Education C. G. Schulz, is larger than ever before. The total to be distributed is $1,450,794.30, compared with $1,131,520.30 for October, 1912. The fund is distributed according to the number of pupils, and the per capita rate is $3.60 this year, compared with $3.30 a year ago. The distribution is on the basis of 402,941 pupils. Hennepin county schools will receive $180,324; St. Louis county, $110,473.20, and Ramsey, $106,808.40. Cook county has the smallest school population in the state—232 pupils—and will receive only $835.20.

The father and two sons, one 17 and the other 14, are left, in addition to the seven-year-old.

This is the largest award in any case since the legislature in 1911 raised the amount of liabilities for causing death from $5,000 to $7,000.

Smith was crossing Nicollet avenue at Franklin avenue when he was struck by the machine. Gaylord was arrested and indicted for manslaughter by the grand jury, but was not convicted.

OLD CITY OF BRUGES

Ancient Capital of Flanders Quaint and Peaceful.

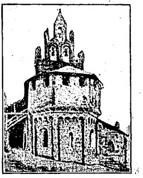
Little Belgium Town Has Not Yet Been Ruined by the Annual Stampede of Tourists, Although They Go There.

Paris.—Only a couple of hours from the busy town of Brussels, a half day from Paris, and less than twenty-four hours from the metropolis of the world one finds a town that still retains the flavor of the Middle Ages. It is really medieval, and here in the crowded little kingdom of Belgium it slumbers on in undisturbed dignity on the banks of its quiet canals. For Bruges, the ancient capital of Flanders, with its quaint and peaceful scenes, has not yet been ruined by the annual stampede of tourists. They go there, it is true, but the people of Bruges have not yet made their entertainment a business as one finds in Holland.

From The Hague we passed through a country brilliant in its spring greenness, past red roofed Flemish villages and windmills slowly waving their great arms at the speeding train. Here and there red poppy fields flashed past us, and although a cold dismal rain was falling the quaint old Flemish country was fascinating.

No sooner had we left the railroad station and started walking up the queer little street with its low gabled buildings than the quiet of the old town that once shone in such great splendor settled on us. Few persons were encountered, and the cart from the hotel trundling up the street laden with our luggage was the only sign of life. Further on toward the center of the city we met clattering children in their wooden shoes and an occasional slowly lumbering milk cart, with its brightly burnished copper cans, drawn by two sturdy dogs.

A turn in the street brought us into the Grand Place, on one side of which towers the famous belfry over the city hall. The concierge from our hotel, who was conducting us, stopped, and with an impressive gesture pointed out this historic tower of which Longfellow wrote:



Part of Belfry at Bruges.

> Thrice consumed, and thrice rebuilded, still it watches o'er the town.

For the belfry is the one great pride and show place of the town. No stranger can be in the town a half day without being conducted to the Grande Place, and having it pointed out to him and its history poured into his ears. It is a stately old tower, slightly leaning, and is famed as one of the finest structures of its kind in all Europe. It has weathered many a storm in the countless conflicts which the town has suffered. When one gets lost in the confused maze of the town's narrow, winding streets, he only has to look for the great tower to find his way back to the market place.

The affection with which the town regards this belfry is best revealed, perhaps, in the words of one of the city archivists:

"For six hundred years this belfry has watched over the city of Bruges. It has beheld its triumphs and its failures, its glory and shame, its prosperity and its gradual decay, and, in spite of so many vicissitudes, it is still standing to bear witness to the genius of our forefathers, to awaken alike memories of old times and admiration for one of the most splendid monuments of civic architecture which the Middle Age has produced."

CATCHES 35-POND LOBSTER

Record-Breaking Crustacean Found by New York Fisherman Near Scotland Lightship.

New York.—A Fulton Market fisherman, trawling near the Scotland lightship, pulled out of the water a lobster, the largest ever caught in this vicinity, old-timers say. It weighs 35 pounds, a full pound more than the former record holder. It is 16 inches around the body, and its left claw is 19 inches long. It is about fifty years old.

Caught in Turtle's Jaws.

New York.—Daniel Holmes, clerk in a market at Coney Island, was preparing to deliver a 200-pound turtle when its jaws closed on his hand above the knuckles and he was unable to free himself. Another clerk tried to pry the turtle's tightly clenched jaws apart but failed. He was compelled to beat the reptile over the head with a club before it loosened its hold.

New Orleans.—William Reilly, owner of a large plantation at Monroe, near here, notified all the former slaves of his father and their descendants, that he is going to cut the plantation up into farms, build each of them a home, stock the farms and let them run them themselves under consideration that they ask credit of no one.

Old People Need A Bowel Stimulant

The Ideal One Is a Mild Laxative-Tonic That Will Keep the Bowels Gently Active.

Healthy old age is so absolutely dependent upon the condition of the bowels that great care should be taken to see that they act regularly. The fact is that as age advances the stomach muscles become weak and inactive and the liver does not store up the juices that are necessary to prompt digestion.

Some help can be obtained by eating easily digested foods and by plenty of exercise, but this latter is irksome to most elderly people. One thing is certain, that a state of constipation should always be avoided, as it is dangerous to life and health. The best plan is to take a mild laxative as often as is deemed necessary. But with equal certainty it is suggested that cathartics, purgatives, physics, salts and pills be avoided, as they do but temporary good and are so harsh as to be a shock to a delicate system.

A much better plan and one that thousands of elderly people are following, is to take a gentle laxative-tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which acts as nearly like nature as is possible. In fact, the tendency of this remedy is to strengthen the stomach and bowel muscles and so train them to act naturally again, when medicines of all kinds can usually be dispensed with. This is the opinion of many people of different ages, among them Mrs. Mary A. P. Davidson of University Mound Home, San Francisco, Cal. She is 78 and because of her sedentary habits had continual bowel trouble. From the day she began taking Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin she has had no further inconvenience and naturally she is glad to say kind things of this remedy.

THEN HE ABANDONED VISIT

Missionary Found Out Why He Was Being Sent as Messenger to Cannibal King.

Jack London, preparing to embark on another cruise around the world, told in Santa Barbara of the strange experience of his last cruise.

"But we had no such hairbreadth escapes as that of a missionary we met in Samoa," he said. "This good fellow was preaching in one of the islands in which cannibalism is practiced. While trying vainly to make converts he was captured by a cannibal king. To his surprise, he was immediately released. His release, however, was made on the condition that he carry a small sealed packet to a neighboring king.

"The missionary was so grateful that, meeting unexpectedly a detachment of English sailors, he refused to accompany them to safer territory. The sealed packet from his benefactor would be delivered as he had promised. But an officer in the midst of the discussion opened the packet.

"Therein, besides a number of pungent little onions, was a letter containing these simple but significant words:

"'He will be delicious with these!'"

A FOOD DRINK
Which Brings Daily Enjoyment.

A lady doctor writes:

"Though busy hourly with my own affairs, I will not deny myself the pleasure of taking a few minutes to tell of my enjoyment daily obtained from my morning cup of Postum. It is a food beverage, not an irritant like coffee.

"I began to use Postum 8 years ago, not because I wanted to, but because coffee, which I dearly loved, made my nights long, weary periods to be dreaded and unfitting me for business during the day.

"On advice of a friend, I first tried Postum, making it carefully as suggested on the package. As I had always used 'cream and no sugar,' I mixed my Postum so. It looked good; was clear and fragrant, and it was a pleasure to see the cream color it as my Kentucky friend wanted her coffee to look—'like a new saddle.'

"Then I tasted it critically, for I had tried many 'substitutes' for coffee. I was pleased, yes, satisfied with my Postum in taste and effect, and am yet, being a constant user of it all these years. I continually assure my friends and acquaintances that they will like it in place of coffee, and receive benefit from its use. I have gained weight, can sleep and am not nervous."

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled.

Instant Postum is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. Grocers sell both kinds.

"There's a reason" for Postum.

ACTED AS A MAN

BY. W. H. CLINTON.

Nobody in the logging camp knew why Big Pierre and Happy Jake had quarreled—nobody except those two themselves. They had been the best of friends, though ill assorted. Big Pierre, quiet, grave, simple, and Happy, so called from his hilarity when he returned from pay-night visits to Mulligan's shack, where whisky was dispensed in violation of the laws of Maine.

The cause of the quarrel was as elemental as those of all quarrels among the lumbermen. Happy and Pierre had discovered that each loved the same girl; more accurately, Pierre had won Mignonne away from Jake, though till Jake pulled her photograph from his coat and cursed his unknown supplanter he himself had not known who was the man he had succeeded in Mignonne's affections.

That they did not fight it out was because it was too serious a matter. Happy intended to think out his plans, and Pierre acknowledged in his heart that, when Happy gave the signal, he must be prepared to do battle, even to the death, should Happy demand it.

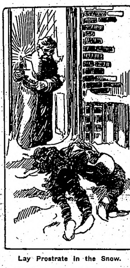
It was pay-night and Pierre sat moodily beside his bunk. He was wondering what Happy would do. Then shouts were heard and in rushed a crowd of lumbermen.

"Pierre!" they yelled. "You're the only man has power over Happy. He's in Mulligan's, fighting drunk, and there'll be murder done unless you get him away."

Instantly their quarrel was forgotten. Big Pierre reached Mulligan's just as Happy staggered to the threshold, flashing a long lumberman's knife.

"Happy!" cried Pierre. "Come with me. You are not a match for all that crowd. Come!"

For answer Happy lunged at him. Pierre dodged and ran into the pine woods, Happy blundering behind him. Crafty Pierre was trying to draw Happy away from Mulligan's.



Lay Prostrate in the Snow.

Happy pursued him like a mad bull, stabbing at him with the long knife. Pierre saw that he must act decisively. He turned suddenly, dodged the knife, and sent Happy sprawling with a blow on the point of the chin.

Happy gasped and went down like a pole-axed ox. Pierre, approaching cautiously, disarmed him. Then he saw that blood was pouring from Happy's throat.

The blow was enough to kill a man, and Pierre had put all his force into it. He must have ruptured an artery, for Happy was bleeding to death. His eyes closed; his head fell back. He breathed stertorously.

Pierre tried to recall him to consciousness but in vain. Then, binding a handkerchief tightly round his enemy's throat, he took Happy upon his back.

The nearest doctor lived fifteen miles away, and Pierre started on the tramp along the trail. It was ten o'clock in the evening and twenty degrees below zero. It might reach forty below by midnight, for the thermometer was falling rapidly and there was that peculiar stillness in the air which indicates the approach of intense cold.

For the first mile Pierre made light of his burden, but soon he was staggering painfully through the snow. Presently he felt a well-known sensation in his right foot. It felt as though it were a prop that did not belong to him.

Pierre set down his burden and glanced at it. Happy was still alive. Pierre rubbed his foot until the circulation started; then he chafed Happy's hands, which were as cold as the snow. The fingers drooped stiffly, like wooden prongs. He took Happy upon his back again.

The trees cracked with the frost, the stars gleamed icily. Mile after mile Pierre reeled off. Now he no longer stopped to chafe his limbs, for he knew that unless he reached the doctor's speedily he would be a murderer. Perhaps he was one already. He had acted in self-defense, but still, he had killed Happy, or all but killed him.

He trudged on mechanically, only his will sustaining him. He felt the burden no longer, for the ache in his back had become part of a universal pain. Every inch of his body was ablaze with torture.

On, on, through the frozen woods, over the ice-bound trail! It was the thought of Mignonne! He must let her know that he had acted as a man; he had not left Happy to die alone.

It was about two in the morning that Doctor Renaud heard a faint hammering upon the door of his cottage in the village of Beddington. He started up and listened. Tap, tap! Tap, tap! He thrust on some clothes and hurried down.

Two bodies lay prostrate in the snow. Their faces were congealed with ice from their frozen breath, so that he had to break it with his hands before he could discover their identity. Then he carried them inside. He found indications of life in one of them.

Two hours later Pierre opened his eyes suddenly and groaned. The blood, forcing its way through the narrowed arteries, stung him like red-hot needles.

"There, I guess you'll be all right now," said Doctor Renaud. "You may lose a toe or two—but I hope not. If you hadn't had that burden to keep your blood stirring—"

"Is Happy alive?" asked Pierre.

"You had been carrying a corpse for the last couple of hours, Pierre," he answered. "Who killed him?"

"I killed him," groaned Pierre. "With my fist. So!" He made a motion to explain, but the arm dropped helplessly at his side. "We had quarreled, and he came at me with his knife. I struck him on the jaw—"

"Where is your knife?" asked Doctor Renaud.

Pierre glanced down at his girdle.

"I have it. There is no blood on it. You cannot have killed Happy with your knife."

"No, with my fist," groaned Pierre, and told the doctor the whole story. When he had ended Renaud laid his hand on his shoulder.

"Pierre," he said, "Happy died from a stab through the heart. Your blow was nothing. He was practically dead even before you struck him. And you carried him fifteen miles through the forest! You did this for the man who sought your life."

"No," answered Pierre happily. "I did it for Mignonne!"

TURKISH BATH KNOWN OF OLD

Discovery Made in Ireland Proves That the Luxury Was Enjoyed Many Ages Ago.

Another proof of the antiquity of some "modern" luxuries is supplied in the recent discovery, by James Buckley, a member of the Royal Irish academy, of what may be described as a prehistoric Turkish bath. It has been found not far from the seacoast town of Schull, in a wild spot near the extreme southernmost point of Ireland. It appears to be not the only relic of its kind. "Sweating holes," as they are called, have been found in other parts of Ireland. This, however, is in a particularly good state of preservation. It is on a lonely mountainside, far removed from other relics of civilization.

"The building," writes Mr. Buckley in an article in the Cork Archaeological Journal, "is roughly circular, measuring ten feet by nine feet. Looking into it from above, its general appearance is not unlike an ordinary limekiln. It was entered by a doorway, or creep, measuring two feet in height and width, lined with large stones placed on edge, and covered with two flags.

"It is impossible to determine how a knowledge of the principle of the hot air bath reached Ireland. It is certain, however, that a rude form of bath on that principle has been in existence from remote ages. If, as supposed, the Phoenicians ever visited Ireland, they may have brought a knowledge of the bath with them.

"In some instances a sweating hole of primitive type has been known to be used by the local peasantry within 50 years of our own time. When required for use, a large fire was lighted in the middle of the floor, and allowed to burn out. The ashes were then swept away, and the patient went in on his hands and knees, having first taken off his clothes, with the exception of his under garment. . . . The patient remained within until he began to perspire copiously, when, if young and strong, he plunged into the sea. . . . Young women not unfrequently resorted to it after burning kelp, to clear their complexions, especially if it happened to be near the time of a fair."

Decadent Turkish Town.

Four hours more from our noon halting place, we plowed through mud and snow and slush until we came to a small river, crossed by a fine Roman bridge that was sadly out of repair. Some of the great stones had been carried off, perhaps to build the pigsties of the neighboring village, and we were obliged to seek a ford and drive our horses through. Just beyond we came to the wretched little Turkish village of Khatum Serai, the modern Lystra, for the ruins of the famous city of old lie less than a mile away.

The thousands in the populous city of old have dwindled to a bare 300, counting men, women and little children. Of the temples and monuments and theaters of ancient Lystra, scarcely a trace can be seen. Every house in modern Lystra, with the exception of the mosque, which is a poor little affair without even a minaret, is a one-story hut of mud or stone.—Christian Herald.

"Nothing to Do on the Farm."

Harvest is past, and that means much to some people. They are free from worry; they have no stock to care for; no manure to haul; no hay to make. Their thoughts turn to the Chautauqua, the motor car and the burning questions down at the corner grocer's. Their fences need repair, but they are going to fix them some rainy day. The stately sunflower that ornaments the fence rows is, to them, it would seem, the most beautiful of all flowers, for even the thought of mutilating them is extremely repulsive. If they don't plow any in the fall, it can be done in the spring. They long for the eight-hour day, with but one working day in the week, and would much prefer one that is not too hot.—Nebraska Farmer.

Never Enough.

"Suppose you had all the money you wanted—so much, in fact, you couldn't possibly want any more. What would you do with it?"

"Why, I'd invest it so it would double itself within ten years. You don't imagine I'd let it lie idle, do you?"

"CASCARETS" FOR SLUGGISH LIVER

Get a 10-cent box now.

Turn the rascals out—the headache, biliousness, indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and foul gases—turn them out to-night and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse your stomach; remove the sour, fermenting food; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret to-night straightens you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head, sweet stomach and clean, healthy liver and bowel action for months. Children love Cascarets because they never gripe or sicken. Adv.

Made a Great Blaze.

With a face as ruddy as an apple Farmer Tullett drove along the quiet country road in his trap.

As he drew near the little village he met the minister walking along, with downcast head and a very meditative look upon his face.

"I'm right sorry to hear o' the fire at your house last night, sir," he said. "Was there any serious loss?"

"Indeed there was, my good Tullett," said the minister dolefully. "Ten years' sermons were completely burned!"

"Aye," he retorted as the trap moved off, "they'd make a grand blaze, sir! They were so dry, you see!"

Not in Leap Year.

They were quarreling. "Well, you can't say I ran after you," said the wife.

"Neither does a mouse trap run after the mice, but it catches 'em just the same," replied hubby.

PIMPLES ALL OVER FACE

1413 E. Genessee Ave., Saginaw, Mich.—"Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured me of a very bad disease of the face without leaving a scar. Pimples broke out all over my face, red and large. They festered and came to a head. They itched and burned and caused me to scratch them and make sores. They said they were seed warts. At night I was restless from itching. When the barber would shave me my face would bleed terribly. Then scabs would form afterwards, then they would drop off and the so-called seed warts would come back again. They were on my face for about nine months and the trouble caused disfigurement while it lasted.

"One day I read in the paper of the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I received a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and it was so much value to me that I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment at the drug store. I used both according to directions. In about ten days my face began to heal up. My face is now clear of the warts and not a scar is left." (Signed) LeRoy C. O'Brien, May 12, 1913.

The following, taken from the Duluth Herald, shows that our old friend, the high cost of living, has jumped into state affairs, and landed in a position well up among the leaders. Economy in old departments is the only solution, but that has been promised by practically every member of the legislature elected in the past ten years or more.

"The state tax rate for 1914 will be 5.03 mills.

"This is the highest state tax rate since 1865. In forty-eight years it has not been exceeded or equalled; and it has been equalled or exceeded in but one year in the history of the state. In 1865, when the state was poor(when its area was but scantily settled and when valuations were low and the state's needs great, there was a state tax rate of six mills.

"Since 1910 the rate has gone from 1.47 mills to the 1914 rate of 5.03 mills.

"The appaling increase in the state tax rate has come in spite of the fact that railroads which used to pay less than a million dollars a year through their gross earnings taxes are now paying close to five millions a year.

"It has come in spite of the fact that indirect taxes of many kinds have been created and multiplied.

"It has come in spite of the fact that the iron mines, which were paying the state in taxes less than twenty thousand dollars yearly a dozen years ago, will next year pay the state in taxes more than a million and a quarter!

"The greater the state's revenues from new sources, the higer climbs the rate on which the farmer and merchant, the laborer and banker, must pay taxes."

Now that Sam G. Iverson, the present state auditor, has announced himself a candidate for governor, with a platform of economy and efficiency as the headline, and Governor Eberhart preaching the same doctrine, a mighty battle for the nomination is in store, if too many candidates do not enter. But there's the rub, if.

Candidate Eberhart will talk about the consolidation of rural schools—and possibly about statewide control of public utilities. Candidate Elwell will talk about good roads. Candidate Spooner will talk about his big ditch. Candidate Lee will talk about economy and a business administration. But where's the county option candidate and who's going to whoop her up for a tonnage tax on iron ore?—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

Show us a town where the home paper has little or no store news advertising the live wire business—AND WE'LL SHOW A MAIL ORDER TOWN. People positively do buy advertised goods. There is no argument about that and if the home dealers don't advertise their goods in an intelligent and earnest way as tho they mean it the people will send away for their merchandise. Any store that does any business can do more business by right advertising. Don't take it from us, but study the advertising in the city papers. That advertising has built cities. Do you get this.—Aitkin Republican.

BELIEVE BANANA FATAL TREE

There exists a legend relative to the Christian inhabitants of the east that they believe the banana to be the tree of the source of good and evil, in a bunch of the fruit of which the serpent that tempted Eve hid itself, and they add that when Adam and Eve became ashamed of their nakedness they covered themselves with the leaves of this plant.

The origin of the banana is given as India, at the foot of the Himalayas, where it has been cultivated since remotest antiquity. Its origin in the new world is as doubtful as the origin of the American Indian. Natural to Asia and Africa, where more than 20 distinct species of the genus are known, it is said to have been brought first to America from Spain early in the sixteenth century and planted in the island of Santo Domingo, whence its spread was rapid through the surrounding islands and the mainland. This has never been authentically established, however, and some authorities include the banana among the articles that formed the base of food supply of the Incas and the Aztecs before the arrival of the Spaniards.

Certain it is that throughout the whole meridinal America there is a strong tradition that at least two species of the plantain were cultivated long before the coming of the Europeans. Furthermore, it is singular that in all the languages indigenous to the region where the banana appears that the plant has a special name, not proceeding from the conquerors as was the case in the names of many other plants, animals and various articles introduced into America after its discovery.

Grown over the entire extent of the meridian of the earth, the fruit of the banana today forms in large part the principal food of a majority of the peoples living under the tropical zone.—National Geographic Magazine.

LITTLE KNOWN OF HEREDITY

Much Is Written and Said, but Really Scientists Admit They Are Groping for Truth.

There are few subjects on which so much "scientific' nonsense is talked and written as on heredity. Not very much is known of it as regards plants, less of animals, and almost nothing as regards humanity. To read books on heredity, especially those of the Eugenic Society, is to read a mass of suppositions and hazardous inductions where most of the facts are negative, and only the exceptions are positve.

The very meaning of "hereditary" is not understood. If any quality is truly hereditary, then it is always hereditary. It never occurs except as the result of heredity, and it is constant, that is to say, it invariably follows. But there is no quality of which this can be said. That genius is not hereditary is known. Even talent is not. Nor is any aptitude. A lawyer's son more often wants to be a soldier or an artist than a lawyer, notwithstanding the environment, and it is so with most professions. The exceptions seem to be due to training and influence, not to plain hereditary transmission.

A superficial likeness to parents seems hereditary, but that is all that we can assert, and that outward likeness by no means infers an inward likeness. There is nothing so easy and nothing so fatal as this tendency to attribute to heredity what is due to training or want of training. It excuses supineness in governments and professions.—H. Fielding Hall in Atlantic Monthly.

Dick Swiveller and the Marchioness.

Mr. Richard Swiveller, perpetual grandmaster of the Order of Apollos, and some time clerk to Sampson Brass, Esq., attorney, of Bevis Marke, was learned in purl. His sorrow that grown men should not know it could surpass only his surprise that the marchioness should have tasted beer in sips. For it was a flagon of creaming purl that Mr. Swiveller introduced into the cellar kitchen on that memorable night he discovered the little slavy "cooling her eye at the keyhole," and eager for company set himself to teach her cribbage. It must rank as one of the greatest nights not only in Mr. Swiveller's life, but in all fiction. Purl was then hot ale, well spiced with nutmeg and laced with a measure of gin.—London Chronicle.

Wells in London.

There are now no fewer than 52 wells in the city, sunk in order to avoid the high charges for water under the Metropolitan Water board, says the London (Eng.) Post. By the charges act of 1907 the charge is 5 per cent. upon the assessable value of premises, and bears no relation to the quantity of water used, unless the consumption is for trade purposes, when an additonal meter charge is made. This increasing demand made on the water-bearing strata has, so far, made no appreciable difference in the water level, although it was prophesied that it would. Satisfactory analyses are stated to have been made of the quality of the water drawn. The wells are increasing, all new buildings over a certain annual value having them in the specification.

Inspiration Banner.

Some folks simply can't get along without little inspiration clippings and quotations pinned about their desks, mirrors, bedroom walls, etc. And from frequent changing the pretty bedroom paper is soon filled with a smallpox array of pin pricks. The "inspirational" banner solves the problem. It is very simple. Have you a school or college pennant which is not so sacred that you may not pin-prick it to your heart's content? If so, hang it in a conspicuous place on a level with your eyes and proceed to pin upon it and unpin from it all the quotations you please. Of course, this keeps them all in one place, but that makes them all the more conspicuous, a desirable fault if you wish them to attract your attention.

SECURED A LEGAL OPINION

Farmer Desired to Know Just Exactly Where He "Was At," and Probably He Does.

"Yes," replied the young lawyer genially to his first client, offering a chair and assuming a fine nonchalance.

"Well, I want to know why it is unlawful to kill rabbits."

"Well," said the lawyer, "it is against the law in this state to kill rabbits in the closed season, which includes the summer months, and you can't shoot them at any time without a license."

"Well, s'posin' they get into my cantaloupes. Can't I shoot 'em for trespassin'?"

"If he comes into my house I can shoot him, can't I?"

"Not unless he breaks in. If you leave the door open and he walks in you must not shoot him. But if he accidentally falls into a pot of boiling water you can make soup of him, I suppose."

"It seems to me the rabbit has a great advantage over me. He can eat my cantaloupes and cabbages, but I can't do anything with him."

"You can scare him if you wish. You can shoot at him, but you must not hit him. The rabbit has this advantage over the cantaloupe, too—if you shoot at the rabbit and hit a cantaloupe it is all right. No harm done. But if you shoot at a cantaloupe and hit a rabbit it is a fine and imprisonment.

"However, in the open season all you have to do is get a license and you can go and shoot rabbits or cantaloupes either.

"As you see, you will then have all the advantage. You can get a license and the rabbit cannot; and you can shoot, a privilege denied to cantaloupes. You really have quite an advantage.

"My fee is $5. Thank you, very much."—Chicago News.

Why No Smoke in Caesar?

Sweet lavender is now on the market and on the side-table, and the smell of it is clean, sweet, and delicious. But did you ever smoke it? This business of the tobacco trust worries the smoker who may have to pay more for his pipeful. And then comes the glad news that we are growing tobacco—and even cigar coverings—in England, in order to beat Sumatra at her own game. And also comes a Madrid professor, inquiring what the ancient Romans smoked. Fine old pipes have been dug up in Spain from Roman settlements, but they have no trace of tobacco or opium. Yet they are adorned with bas reliefs picturing the lavender plant. And in 1276—before tobacco came to Europe—a Spanish writer said that "whoever smokes lavender feels active, ardent, and vigorous." But why is it that smoking never crept into Roman literature?

Power in Gray Matter.

The genius cannot be explained and possibly never will be, but a partial explanation of his tremendous power in some one direction is offered by the examination of his brain after death. Only lately a very eminent surgeon of Philadelphia died and when his brain was examined it was found that for a large part it was like a child's, but in those parts especially required by his profession it was developed far more than is usual and the layers of gray matter at these spots were inordinately thick. It is never right to draw any broad conclusion from a single instance, but science has generalized from many instances of this kind until it is ready now to say that thought power is proportionate to the gray matter in the centers most used or needed.

Sure Enough!

"Hey, there, boy!" said the traffic cop to a gamin who was puffing on a cigar stump, "what brand is that you're smoking?"

"Robinson Crusoe," replied the youngster.

Subscription Rates $1.25 Per Year In Advance

The following, taken from the Duluth Herald, shows that our old friend, the high cost of living, has jumped into state affairs, and landed in a position well up among the leaders. Economy in old departments is the only solution, but that has been promised by practically every member of the legislature elected in the past ten years or more.

"The state tax rate for 1914 will be 5.03 mills.

"This is the highest state tax rate since 1865. In forty-eight years it has not been exceeded or equalled; and it has been equalled or exceeded in but one year in the history of the state. In 1865, when the state was poor, when its area was but scantily settled and when valuations were low and the state's needs great, there was a state tax rate of six mills.

"The average state tax rate for the thirty-seven years ending with 1910 was but 1.63 mills.

"Since 1910 the rate has gone from 1.47 mills to the 1914 rate of 5.03 mills.

"The appaling increase in the state tax rate has come in spite of the fact that railroads which used to pay less than a million dollars a year through their gross earnings taxes are now paying close to five millions a year.

"It has come in spite of the fact that indirect taxes of many kinds have been created and multiplied.

"It has come in spite of the fact that the iron mines, which were paying the state in taxes less than twenty thousand dollars yearly a dozen years ago, will next year pay the state in taxes more than a million and a quarter.

"The greater the state's revenues from new sources, the higher climbs the rate on which the farmer and merchant, the laborer and banker, must pay taxes."

Now that Sam G. Iverson, the present state auditor, has announced himself a candidate for governor, with a platform of economy and efficiency as the headline, and Governor Eberhart preaching the same doctrine, a mighty battle for the nomination is in store, if too many candidates do not enter. But there's the rub, if.

Candidate Eberhart will talk about the consolidation of rural schools—and possibly about statewide control of public utilities. Candidate Elwell will talk about good roads. Candidate Spooner will talk about his big ditch. Candidate Lee will talk about economy and a business administration. But where's the county option candidate and who's going to whoop her up for a tonnage tax on iron ore?—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

Show us a town where the home paper has little or no store news advertising the live wire business—AND WE'LL SHOW A MAIL ORDER TOWN. People positively do buy advertised goods. There is no argument about that and if the home dealers don't advertise their goods in an intelligent and earnest way as tho they mean it the people will send away for their merchandise. Any store that does any business can do more business by right advertising. Don't take it from us, but study the advertising in the city papers. That advertising has built cities. Do you get this.—Aitkin Republican.

Notice to Tax Payers.

The second half of the 1912 real estate tax must be paid before Nov. 1 in order to save the 10 per cent penalty added that date.

BELIEVE BANANA FATAL TREE

There exists a legend relative to the Christian inhabitants of the east that they believe the banana to be the tree of the source of good and evil, in a bunch of the fruit of which the serpent that tempted Eve hid itself, and they add that when Adam and Eve became ashamed of their nakedness they covered themselves with the leaves of this plant.

The origin of the banana is given as India, at the foot of the Himalayas, where it has been cultivated since remotest antiquity. Its origin in the new world is as doubtful as the origin of the American Indian. Natural to Asia and Africa, where more than 20 distinct species of the genus are known, it is said to have been brought first to America from Spain early in the sixteenth century and planted in the island of Santo Domingo, whence its spread was rapid through the surrounding islands and the mainland. This has never been authentically established, however, and some authorities include the banana among the articles that formed the base of food supply of the Incas and the Aztecs before the arrival of the Spaniards.

Certain it is that throughout the whole meridinal America there is a strong tradition that at least two species of the plantain were cultivated long before the coming of the Europeans. Furthermore, it is singular that in all the languages indigenous to the region where the banana appears that the plant has a special name, not proceeding from the conquerors as was the case in the names of many other plants, animals and various articles introduced into America after its discovery.

Grown over the entire extent of the meridian of the earth, the fruit of the banana today forms in large part the principal food of a majority of the peoples living under the tropical zone.—National Geographic Magazine.

LITTLE KNOWN OF HEREDITY

Much Is Written and Said, but Really Scientists Admit They Are Groping for Truth.

There are few subjects on which so much "scientific" nonsense is talked and written as on heredity. Not very much is known of it as regards plants, less of animals, and almost nothing as regards humanity. To read books on heredity, especially those of the Eugenic Society, is to read a mass of suppositions and hazardous inductions where most of the facts are negative, and only the exceptions are positve.

The very meaning of "hereditary" is not understood. If any quality is truly hereditary, then it is always hereditary. It never occurs except as the result of heredity, and it is constant, that is to say, it invariably follows. But there is no quality of which this can be said. That genius is not hereditary is known. Even talent is not. Nor is any aptitude. A lawyer's son more often wants to be a soldier or an artist than a lawyer, notwithstanding the environment, and it is so with most professions. The exceptions seem to be due to training and influence, not to plain hereditary transmission.

A superficial likeness to parents seems hereditary, but that is all that we can assert, and that outward likeness by no means infers an inward likeness. There is nothing so easy and nothing so fatal as this tendency to attribute to heredity what is due to training or want of training. It excuses supineness in governments and professions.—H. Fielding Hall in Atlantic Monthly.

Dick Swiveller and the Marchioness.

Mr. Richard Swiveller, perpetual grandmaster of the Order of Apollos, and some time clerk to Sampson Brass, Esq., attorney, of Bevis Marks, was learned in purl. His sorrow that grown men should not know it could surpass only his surprise that the marchioness should have tasted beer in sips. For it was a flagon of creaming purl that Mr. Swiveller introduced into the cellar kitchen on that memorable night he discovered the little slavy "cooling her eye at the keyhole," and eager for company set himself to teach her cribbage. It must rank as one of the greatest nights not only in Mr. Swiveller's life, but in all fiction. Purl was then hot ale, well spiced with nutmeg and laced with a measure of gin.—London Chronicle.

Wells in London.

There are now no fewer than 52 wells in the city, sunk in order to avoid the high charges for water under the Metropolitan Water board, says the London (Eng.) Post. By the charges act of 1907 the charge is 5 per cent upon the assessable value of premises, and bears no relation to the quantity of water used, unless the consumption is for trade purposes, when an additonal meter charge is made. This increasing demand made on the waterbearing strata has, so far, made no appreciable difference in the water level, although it was prophesied that it would. Satisfactory analyses are stated to have been made of the quality of the water drawn. The wells are increasing, all new buildings over a certain annual value having them in the specification.

Inspiration Banner.

Some folks simply can't get along without little inspiration clippings and quotations pinned about their desks, mirrors, bedroom walls, etc. And from frequent changing the pretty bedroom paper is soon filled with a smallpox array of pin pricks. The inspiration banner solves the problem. It is very simple. Have you a school or college pennant which is not so sacred that you may not pin [illegible]

SECURED A LEGAL OPINION

Farmer Desired to Know Just Exactly Where He Was At, and Probably He Does.

"You are a lawyer, aren't you?" asked the young farmer.

"Yes," replied the young lawyer genially to his first client, offering a chair and assuming a fine nonchalance.

"Well, I want to know why it is unlawful to kill rabbits."

"Well," said the lawyer, "it is against the law in this state to kill rabbits in the closed season, which includes the summer months, and you can't shoot them at any time without a license."

"Well, s'posin' they get into my cantaloupes. Can't I shoot 'em for trespassin'?"

"No, you can't shoot a rabbit for trespassing. The only thing you can do is to have him arrested."

"If he comes into my house I can shoot him, can't I?"

"Not unless he breaks in. If you leave the door open and he walks in you must not shoot him. But if he accidentally falls into a pot of boiling water you can make soup of him, I suppose."

"It seems to me the rabbit has a great advantage over me. He can eat my cantaloupes and cabbages, but I can't do anything with him."

"You can scare him if you wish. You can shoot at him, but you must not hit him. The rabbit has this advantage over the cantaloupe, too—if you shoot at the rabbit and hit a cantaloupe it is all right. No harm done. But if you shoot at a cantaloupe and hit a rabbit it is a fine and imprisonment.

"However, in the open season all you have to do is get a license and you can go and shoot rabbits or cantaloupes either.

"As you see, you will then have all the advantage. You can get a license and the rabbit cannot, and you can shoot, a privilege denied to cantaloupes. You really have quite an advantage.

"My fee is $5. Thank you, very much."—Chicago News.

Why No Smoke in Caesar?

Sweet lavender is now on the market and on the side-table, and the smell of it is clean, sweet, and delicious. But did you ever smoke it? This business of the tobacco trust worries the smoker who may have to pay more for his pipeful. And then comes the glad news that we are growing tobacco—and even cigar coverings—in England, in order to beat Sumatra at her own game. And also comes a Madrid professor, inquiring what the ancient Romans smoked. Fine old pipes have been dug up in Spain from Roman settlements, but they have no trace of tobacco or opium. Yet they are adorned with bas-reliefs picturing the lavender plant. And in 1276—before tobacco came to Europe—a Spanish writer said that "whoever smokes lavender feels active, ardent, and vigorous." But why is it that smoking never crept into Roman literature?

Power in Gray Matter.

The genius cannot be explained and possibly never will be, but a partial explanation of his tremendous power in some one direction is offered by the examination of his brain after death. Only lately a very eminent surgeon of Philadelphia died and when his brain was examined it was found that for a large part it was like a child's, but in those parts especially required by his profession it was developed far more than is usual and the layers of gray matter at these spots were inordinately thick. It is never right to draw any broad conclusion from a single instance, but science has generalized from many instances of this kind until it is ready now to say that thought power is proportionate to the gray matter in the centers most used or needed.

Sure Enough!

"Hey, there, boy!" said the traffic cop to a gamin who was puffing on a cigar stump, "what brand is that you're smoking?"

"Robinson Crusoe," replied the youngster.

"That's a new one on me," admitted the policeman; "where do you get 'em?"

Bobbie Burns' Granddaughter.

An action has been entered in Dumfries sheriff court by Miss Annie Beckett Burns of Cheltenham, the only surviving granddaughter of the Scottish poet, claiming to have herself, as the nearest of kin, declared executrix of certain hitherto unconfirmed personal estate of the said Robert Burns. This is a sequel to the recent announcement that the Liverpool Athenaeum had sold for £5,000 the two volumes of Burns' poems and better known as the Glenriddell manuscripts, and that they were likely to go to America, an announcement which brought strong protests from Lord Roseberry, Dr. Wil[illegible] and others.—Western [illegible]

Small Reasons for Big Strikes.

The "[illegible] strike," as the recent omnibus trouble in London has come to be called, may seem to have had a trivial origin, but many great industrial disputes have sprung from causes quite as small. A few years ago a thousand men struck work at Sunderland because they objected to a policeman in one of the yards, and wanted his removal. Tailors have gone on strike because of the edict forbidding the taking of snuff during working hours. In one Yorkshire town all the mill girls refused to work because their employer had painted the window of the workroom facing the street, thus shutting out the view.

COURT ADJOURNED LAST THURSDAY

One Criminal Case; Entire Business Disposed of in Four Days.

The November general term of district court, Judge Wm. Watts presiding, adjourned last Thursday after having been in session since Monday. The work of the term was disposed of in four days.

There was only one criminal case on the calendar, that of the state against Gust Egeland, a young man 19 years old, of Equality township, charged with bastardy. The complaining witness was Anna Aakness, 19 years old and also a resident of Equality township. The defendant was found guilty of the charge and was required to pay the costs of the action and $400.

Several damage suits against railroad companies were disposed of. Louis Sieff got $60 for injury to his trotting mare, "Zolletta." This was the action of Louis Sieff, Sr. against the Great Northern.

Mary Sherva while walking on a sidewalk on the Great Northern right-of-way at St. Hilaire stepped on a loose board. The board flew up, striking her arm and breaking the bone. Her suit against the railroad company was settled by the payment to her of $300.

Leon Reindeau, employed on the Soo line section at Plummer had a finger cut off while at work. In his suit he asked for $900 and the jury awarded him $300.

The suit of Lois Sieff against the Northern Pacific was settled just before court adjourned this afternoon. Mr. Sieff asked damages in the amount of $500 and the company agreed to the payment of $307.

The case of Phil W. Lee against R. J. McKercher was settled, Mr. McKercher paying the claim.

The case of Fred Richards against the Wylie Farmers' Elevator company was dismissed, also the case of Julius E. Lervick against Julius Pleth.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

British Metaphor.

Pegoud, the French aviator, who loops the loop upside down, has inspired the sport writers of Great Britain to attacks upon metaphor unknown before in that solemn land. William Shakespeare speaking through Hotspur says: "I tell you, my lord fool, out of this nettle danger, we pluck this flower safety," but they speak of the air-man in his lofty tumbling as "plucking the whiskers of catastrophe," which is several sizzles beyond Master William.

BOTH HUERTA AND CARRANZA HOLD OUT

LATEST STATEMENT DESTROYS HOPE OF AMICABLE ADJUSTMENT.

ALL NEGOTIATIONS MAY STOP

U. S. May Cease Trying to Mediate—Juarez Falls Into Hands of Rebels After Clever Ruse of Crafty Generals.

Nogales, Sonora, Nov. 18.—As soon as the pending negotiations with Washington are complete, General Carranza, it is announced, will proceed south into Sinaloa to reorganize the civil government of the state. Orders were issued to open the customs house at Juarez, the border city just captured, and minor ports of entry on the Chihuahua, Texas and New Mexico line, all of which are held by the constitutionalists.

Mexico City, Nov. 17.—"In view of Venustiano Carranza's repudiation of any form of mediation by or alliance with the United States, Provisional President Huerta can do no less than join him in his expression of patriotic sentiment and maintain unaltered his dignified attitude toward Washington." This statement was made at the national palace, and it casts extreme doubt on any renewal of negotiations between Mexico and the United States. It tends to substantiate the belief that no hope is left of an amicable adjustment.

Juarez Falls to Rebels.

El Paso, Texas.—Ciudad Juarez, the most important northern port of entry in Mexico, was captured by constitutionalists under General Pancho Villa and General Maclevio Herrera with small loss on either side.

The occupation of Juarez by rebels began Saturday after the men under Villa and Herrera had reached the town in trains thought to be carrying federal soldiers to the garrison.

Ruse Works Well.

The rebels detrained undiscovered, placed their artillery and had everything in readiness to battle before the word was given to fire on the federal garrison. At the first volley the astounded government troops were assembled and returned the fire, engaging in battle which lasted for two hours.

British Not Warned to Leave.

Mexico City, Nov. 17.—The British minister, Sir Lionel Carden, explained that his instructions to British residents in Mexico were not in the nature of an order to leave their places of residence, excepting in the case of those located in more inaccessible towns, but simply a precautionary measure, intended to prepare them in event circumstances should demand their removal. The French minister, Paul Lefaivre, said he had no intention of leaving the capital at this time.

Federals Executed at Jaurez.

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 17.—Two former federal officials of Juarez, who were taken prisoners by General Villa's rebel troops have been executed at Juarez. They were Pablo Ebave, an official in the Juarez police department, and Juan Cordova, chief of the Juarez secret police.

POLICE ROUT SUFFRAGETTES

Four Leaders Are Arrested in London for Refusing to Disperse.

London, Nov. 18.—A suffragette raid on Downing street led to disorders and the arrest of four leaders.

The Women's Freedom league held a meeting at Caxton hall and a delegation composed of the Misses Boyle, Murray and Boyleau, and Mrs. Kerr, all prominent members of the organization, proceeded to Premier Asquith's residence to present a resolution. Other suffragettes, with Mrs. Despard, started to hold a meeting on the steps leading from Downing street to St. James' park, where shortly they were joined by Miss Boyle and her companions.

The police interfered to prevent the obstruction of the steps, but the women refused to disperse and continued their speechmaking. Police reserves were summoned and after a scrimmage they cleared the steps and arrested the leaders.

Wire Tappers Make Confessions.

New York, Nov. 18.—Two wire tappers visited District Attorney Whitman at his home and made confessions that are expected to aid the prosecutor materially in his investigation of statements that high police officials have shared hundreds of thousands of dollars with swindlers who paid the police 10 per cent of their profits for protection.

May Head International Printers.

New York, Nov. 18.—At a meeting of printers, Marsden G. Lynch, who recently was appointed by Governor Glynn to be state commissioner of labor. There will be a referendum vote for president of the international union in May next. James M. Duncan, first vice president of the international union, will be acting president for Mr. Lynch.

GIRL BATTLES WITH INTRUDER

ENTERS FARMER'S HOME IN MIDNIGHT ATTACK.

Daughter of Douglas County Citizen Twice Wounded and Beaten With Gas Pipe.

Alexandria.—An assault, evidently with murderous intent, was made upon Miss Tina Peterson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Peterson, residing two miles north of Brandon. Miss Peterson escaped with two wounds, each from a revolver shot, one a scalp wound and the other a flesh wound in her side. Neither is considered serious.

Awakened by Noise.

Miss Peterson, who is 22 years of age, was awakened by a noise in the lower part of the house. She arose to investigate, and was part way down the stairs when she met a young man. She ran back, but was followed by her assailant, who carried a piece of gas pipe and a revolver. A scuffle ensued, the girl receiving a blow from the gas pipe and two shots.

The father was awakened and attacked the midnight visitor, striking him with a piece of furniture, but the man made his escape.

A young man in the neighborhood is under suspicion, but no arrest has as yet been made.

GRAND FORKS WITHDRAWS BID

Tri-State Postmasters to Meet in St. Paul in Conjunction With National Gathering.

St. Paul.—Grand Forks has withdrawn its invitation in favor of St. Paul for the 1914 convention of the Tri-State Postmasters' league. This action was taken in view of the fact that the National Postmasters' association meeting will be in this city next year, and it was the desire of the Tri-State organization that their members meet here at the same time.

The Tri-State league embraces Minnesota, North and South Dakota. Since Grand Forks was selected at the 1913 convention for the 1914 meeting, the national meeting in Denver, chose St. Paul for its 1914 convention.

President Plumley and other officers of the Tri-State have promised to use their good offices in bringing the 1915 gathering of the association to Grand Forks, so that city will lose nothing by the change, though it will materially aid the district association, as it will mean a larger attendance.

The North Dakota League of Postmasters, which also selected Grand Forks for its 1914 gathering, will not change its plans. The session will be held in Grand Forks about two months previous to the national in St. Paul.

LAWLER OUT FOR GOVERNOR

St. Paul.—Daniel William Lawler, former mayor of St. Paul, who was a candidate for United States senator in 1912 and for governor of Minnesota in 1892, has filed with the secretary of state as a candidate for the democratic nomination for governor in 1914.

Mr. Lawler sets forth in his declaration that he is a citizen and freeholder; a democrat and a fighting one, 55 years old, and with a statement of principles so exhaustive that it will take until January 1 to prepare, at which time it will be given to the public and nation. Mr. Lawler since the last senatorial campaign, has been practising law in St. Paul.

HOBO KING MAKES ADDRESS

Minneapolis. — Jeff Davis, "King," or as he usually prefers to be called, president of the Hoboes, arrived here and took the Purity Congress, now in session, by storm. Jeff admits that he was a hobo at the age of 13 and claims to have beaten his way 100,000 miles.

"I am on my way to Seattle, beating my way," he said, "in one of the greatest fights a man ever engaged in—a fight against the vagrancy law by which thousands are imprisoned every year because they are poor and out of work. I represent an army 300,000 strong. I am going before the American Federation of Labor and try to get it to take up the fight against vagrancy laws."

INDIAN CONSPIRACY CASES

One Hundred and Seventy-five Witnesses, Mostly Red Men, Are Summoned to Testify.

Fergus Falls.—The fall term of the United States court opened in this city with Judge Amidon occupying the bench.

The cases against M. J. Kolb, J. E. Perrault, William Uran, L. S. Waller, Lewis D. Davis and Andrew Venoss, who are accused of conspiring to induce United States officials to grant land patents to Indians contrary to law, will be called early in the term. One hundred and seventy-five witnesses, mostly Indians, have been subpoenaed to appear and the city is full of Indians. The government is planning a vigorous fight.

An effort is being made to induce Judge Amidon to adjourn court to Crookston for the trial of the $175,000 damage suit against the Canadian Northern Railway company, resulting from the burning of Beaudette. The witnesses will all come from along the northern border of the state.

TRYING VIRGENS MURDER CASE

Prisoner Pleads Not Guilty at Fairmont and Moves for a Change of Venue.

Fairmont.—Chris Virgens, a farmer, arraigned here for the murder last May of John Steen, his neighbor, pleaded not guilty and through his attorney, A. R. Allen, asked for a change of venue to another county, asserting that public opinion is so strongly against him in this county that a fair and impartial trial is impossible here. It is predicted the motion will be denied.

Steen was found dead in a hoghouse, having been shot while doing chores. After an investigation by Sheriff Carver and a detective, Virgens was arrested on a warrant charging murder in the first degree.

Virgens has been a model prisoner, spending his time largely in reading the Bible and a few newspapers. This is the first murder case Martin county has had in years.

Chief of Police Removed.

St. Paul.—Martin J. Flanagan, acting chief of police, has been removed from office by the police board. His removal was caused by his absence from his office last Friday and Saturday. Three of his subordinate officers went with him. Mayor Keller stated that dissatisfaction of the public with the chief's absence made his removal imperative. Michael Gebhart, who has been assistant to Flanagan, was appointed chief and is succeeded as assistant chief by Lieutenant John Rowan, who has had charge of a substation.

Hunters Evidently Lost.

Duluth, Nov. 14.—Captain Edward Smith of the steamer America, which has reached Duluth, reports finding a rowboat adrift at Washington harbor, Isle Royal. The boat came drifting in from the open lake and was picked up there. It contained three oars, a United States packsack, a common packsack such as is used by hunters; two front quarters and a hind quarter of a moose. There was no sign of the hunters.

Another Overturned Vessel.

Duluth.—Another large lake boat floating with its bottom up was sighted on Lake Huron by Captain W. Rouvel of the steamer W. H. Granwick, which arrived in the Duluth harbor. There is no possibility of the boat being the supposed wreck of the Regina, according to Captain Rouvel, as the vessel had a red bottom, while the bottom of the other derelict is painted black. The Granwick crew reported that they sighted several other boats in distress.

BEILIS ON WAY TO SAINT PAUL

SISTER-IN-LAW OF RUSSIAN TRIAL FIGURE TALKS.

Says "Ritual" Murder Charge Was Trumped Up by Government.

St. Paul.—Mendel Beiliss, who was the central figure in the recent "ritual" murder trial in Kiev, Russia, is on his way to St. Paul to make his home, according to a statement made by Mrs. Sara Dannovski, 113 Minnetonka Street, a sister-in-law of Beiliss.

Realizing that to stay in Russia would only mean that in a short while he would be imprisoned or assassinated, Beiliss is fleeing to the land where so many of his countrymen also have found new homes.

"For God's sake, don't let them arrest me," screamed Mrs. Dannovski in fear when the interpreter translated the reporter's qqustion as to whether she was a relative of Mendel Beiliss. Mrs. Dannovski, between sobs, declared that she knew nothing of the crime of which Beiliss was charged. For weeks she had guarded the secret of her relationship, fearing arrest by the local authorities. The fear of government had seized her although she is no longer in danger of the Russian government who ruined her little home in Russia.

When Mrs. Damnovski became convinced that she was in no danger of arrest, she quieted down and discussed quite freely the subject of her relative's arrest and trial. She says that he is making his way carefully to America and will not arrive at St. Paul till about January 1.

She has received news of him at broken intervals through letters from her sister at Kiev which were entrusted to immigrants. She says that until three years ago when she came to America she lived next door to Beiliss. He was constantly watched. The government suspected him of anarchistic tendencies, she says, and when unable to fasten that charge, one of murder was trumped up and he was brought to trial and finally acquitted.

Mrs. Dasnovski says the charge that he was guilty of "ritual" murder was absurd. "Mendel was never a religious man," she said through an interpreter. "He did not even attend church. But he was respected alike by Jews and Gentiles. He worked as foreman in the brickyard for years. He and my husband, Isaac, were both watched by spies. My husband escaped and came to America three years ago."

PLAN DEVELOPMENT MEETING

Northern Association Announces Tentative Program for December Gathering.

Bemidji.—The Northern Minnesota Development association have just announced the tentative program for their coming meeting here Thursday and Friday, December 4 and 5.

The meeting will be in charge of the Beltrami County Development association and the Bemidji Commercial club. These two organizations are arranging all of the entertainment features and will act as hosts to the many visitors.

The president of the Northern association, Mr. Cyrus M. King, of Deer River, will call the meeting to order and make the committee appointments. Then will follow a long list of interesting and instructive addresses. Among those to speak will be the following: F. T. Wilson, Stillwater, of the state agricultural extension department; C. F. Scheers, editor Akeley Herald-Tribune; C. G. Schultz, superintendent of public instruction; Dean A. F. Woods, of the state agricultural school; Fred D. Sherman, state immigration commissioner, and many others.

The problems of 1914 will be the subject most discussed on Friday and it is the hope of the program committee that with the aid of the scientific farming experts that will be on hand, much good may be accomplished. The meeting will end with a smoker Friday night.

St. Cloud Holds County Seat.

St. Cloud.—That Albany has lost in its fight to remove the Stearns county seat from St. Cloud is the belief here from the proceedings of the board of county commissioners. The board voted to put aside all technical questions and canvass the petitioners and the St. Cloud revocations. It was found that Albany had secured 4,715 signatures, 721 more than necessary. St. Cloud filed 1,196 revocations and Albany reinstated 42 of these, making their petition lack 54 names. The auditor and commissioners are making a recount.

Short Winona Court Calendar.

Winona.—The calendar for the November term of the United States court shows only three cases listed for trial. One is a $30,000 personal injury suit against the Milwaukee company by Albert Olson, who was hurt near Mendota on Nov. 21, 1911. A fresh trial is to be given the $20,000 damage suit of the Multiscope & Film company vs. the Conley Camera company. The third case is that of A. W. Stinchfield vs. G. W. McWilliams, to collect a promissory note of $2,000.

DRESSING SACKS AND OTHER DAINTY GIFTS

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

What could please a dainty woman more than the little dressing sacks made of mull or silk or any of the thin filmy fabrics of which there are so many? These fabrics are gay with printed flowers or covered with dots and embroidered figures. When a plain mull or batiste is used it is embellished with tucks, embroidery and lace. Ribbon rosettes and bows are used on all of these pretty morning jackets and lace makes a dependable and harmonious finish for them.

A dressing sack of India lawn is shown here, cut from a piece covered with half-inch tucks. It has the popular kimono sleeve with plain beading set in, through which an inch-wide ribbon is run. The body is set in to a belt of embroidery. The little basque, set on the belt, is plain and finished with a narrow hand-sewed hem. An edging of Val lace is whipped to the hem and finishes the neck and sleeves. Bows of narrow ribbon decorate the sleeves and are placed over the button fastening at the neck and waist.

The material for such a sack will cost anywhere from one to two dollars in good qualities.

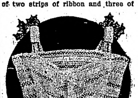
A short kimono jacket of silk or printed cottons costs next to nothing in the matter of material. Two yards of yard-wide goods is an ample allowance for it.

The woman who can sew neatly finds it possible to take the simplest materials—short lengths and remnants of goods that cost next to nothing—and convert them into just such pretty kimonos and dressing sacks as are shown here. It requires very little expenditure of money, but some time and ability to make them up—but they are worth it.

Something pretty and useful as well makes the best of all Christmas gifts to women friends. Here is a group of dainty feminine belongings all easy to make and costing anywhere from 50 cents to $2 or $3, depending upon the sort of lace used in them.

The bonnet-shaped cap is made of a half-yard of all-over lace and three-quarters of a yard of lace plaiting which is bought ready made. A circle having a diameter of 18 inches makes the crown. This is gathered into the bound edge of the ready-made plaiting. Two yards of ribbon an inch and a half wide forms a band about the face and neck finished with a little bow at each side. The plaiting is turned back about the face and tacked to place.

The crown of the other cap is made of two strips of ribbon and three of lace, each six inches wide. They are stitched together. A yard of plaited net makes the ruffle. The crown is sewed to the plaiting and an elastic 27 inches long is sewed at the joining. Satin ribbon one inch wide is gathered to form little flowers of four petals each. Four of these are set across the front of the cap with a hanging loop and end making a finish at each side.



The corset cover made of strips of point d'esprit takes some time to make, but very little expense to buy the materials. The point d'esprit stripe (or narrow edging of this pattern) are joined by an inexpensive cluny pattern of insertion. A beading of Swiss embroidery about the top and the waist carries a satin ribbon less than an inch wide. A very narrow Val edge finishes the top and the shoulder straps are made of these narrow insertions stitched together.

These airy bits of finery are meant to wear under thin dresses, for special occasions. They are so pretty the recipient is sure to treasure them and enjoy the luxury of wearing them.

35 Bushels Per Acre

Was the yield of wheat on many farms in Western Canada in 1913, some yields being reported as high as fifty bushels per acre.

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

As high as one hundred bushels were recorded in some districts for oats, fifty bushels for barley, and from ten to twenty bushels for flax.

J. Keys arrived in the country five years ago from Denmark, with very little means. He homesteaded, worked hard, is now the owner of 320 acres of land, in 1913 had a crop of 200 acres, which will realize him about four thousand dollars. His wheat weighed 68 pounds to the bushel and averaged over 35 bushels to the acre.

Thousands of similar instances might be related of the homesteaders in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

The crop of 1913 was an abundant one everywhere in Western Canada.

After using 5 boxes of Dodds Kidney Pills the swelling disappeared and he felt himself again. He says he has been benefited and blessed by the use of Dodds Kidney Pills. Some Good Advice.

The restaurant manager stood behind the cashier's desk, wearing his stock-in-trade smile for each customer.

An old gentleman came up. "I notice," said he, fumbling for his wallet, "that you advertise to make your own pies."

"Yes, sir," answered the manager proudly, "we do."

"Will you permit me to offer a suggestion?"

"Certainly, sir; certainly. We should be most happy to have you."

"Well, then, let some one else make 'em."

FAMILY OF FIVE

All Drank Coffee From Infancy.

It is a common thing in this country to see whole families growing up with nervous systems weakened by coffee drinking.

That is because many parents do not realize that coffee contains a drug—caffeine—which causes the trouble. (The same drug is found in tea.)

"There are five children in my family," writes an Iowa mother, "all of whom drank coffee from infancy up to two years ago.

"My husband and I had heart trouble and were advised to quit coffee. We did so and began to use Postum. We now are doing without medicine and are entirely relieved of heart trouble. (Caffeine causes heart trouble when continually used as in coffee drinking.)

"Our eleven-year-old boy had a weak digestion from birth, and yet always craved and was given coffee. When we changed to Postum he liked it and we gave him all he wanted. He has been restored to health by Postum and still likes it."

KING TURKEY

Reversible Thanksgiving

Let's be thankful for the coal that's in the cellar;
If it's paid for, let's be thankful that it is;
If it isn't, let's be glad the other fellow
Must consider that the risk is wholly his.

Let's be thankful for the jobs at which
If perchance they're not exactly what we'd like
We may still be better fixed than some poor neighbor
Who has just been bounced or called upon to strike.

Let's be thankful if our relatives are present
To share the joy we have; but if they're not
The case will then, of course, be still more pleasant,
So either way we'll have a happy lot.

Let's be thankful if the grim old money question
Doesn't serve to keep our turkey off the plate—
In case it does, we won't have indigestion
When the rich man's taking pills and blaming Fate.

ALWAYS OTHERS TO HELP

Thought for Those Who Are in Suffering at This Time of General Rejoicing.

This was the sweet, consoling word that came to a woman struggling with fresh bereavement at the Thanksgiving season. Instantly a well of thankfulness was unsealed in her own heart. All was not over, then! There was still something left to live for. Someone yet leaned on her. Someone turned to her for help and strength and comfort. It set a whole nest of singing birds caroling in the very ruins of her own happiness.

Does this not give us a hint how to comfort the sorrowful? "I don't want to be 'poor-deared!'" cried one whose best-beloved had been taken. "All I want on earth is just once more to hear him say, 'I need you!'" That comfort, alas! was nevermore to be hers, but time showed her a helpless worldful of people always saying it. It is the true soul-tonic. The solace of helping others is within the reach of every sufferer. Added to that is sometimes vouchsafed the reward hinted at in the beginning of this paragraph. Now and then someone will feel a warm throb of thankfulness toward us, and say so. It pays a thousand times for the little we are able to do out of our weakness. It is a thousand times better than sitting by life's wayside and holding out pitiful hands for beggars' alms of condolence and sympathy. Nobody wants to have anybody thankful to him, but it is a high form of happiness to know that someone is thankful for us.

Thanksgiving.

Thanksgiving day is the day when every one says he is thankful, and wants to eat turkey to prove it. If you haven't anything else to be thankful for, you can be thankful you are not a turkey.

Thanksgiving day was first observed by the Pilgrims, who were thankful that they had five grains of corn apiece. In these extravagant times a man wouldn't be thankful if he had ten grains of corn—which shows conclusively that we are prosperous. The trusts are doing a noble work in remedying this evil condition.

People have various unreasonable reasons for being thankful on Thanksgiving day. Some men are thankful they took a wife, and some are thankful they didn't take two. Bachelor maids are thankful they are not "horrid bachelors," and a married woman is always thankful that her husband has a good wife. It is easy to be thankful if you go about it right.

But the thing people are most thankful for is their money—even though they came by it honestly. The more a man has, the more thankful he is that it isn't less, and the less a man has the less likely he is to be thankful because it isn't more. Be thankful, therefore, that you haven't too much to be thankful for. Turkey tastes all the better for coming but once a year. —Lippincott's.

For the Blessings Bestowed.

Thankfulness makes the ordinary and simple gifts of God shine with a morning luster, and exudes the rarest perfume. There are two ways to get rich—one is to increase the number of our dollars, the other is to increase the value of the few dollars we already have. Thankfulness raises the blessings we already have, to higher degrees of worth, and thereby enriches us. If thankfulness does not create new roses, it paints a finer hue on those we have; if it does not load our table, it puts a delicious sweetness in our simple fare; if it does not clothe our bodies in costly raiment, it lends a sweetness of behavior to our bodies, so that we do not need such raiment to make us attractive. All other beautiful graces of Christian character are lacking in luster without the shining grace of gratitude to God for his abundant mercies and unceasing loving kindness to the children of men.

No One Too Poor to Give.

Something that rich, poor, weak, strong, young, old can give—thanks. Did you ever think of that?

Just as long as you have a heart—and may it be always—you can appreciate something and be grateful. Poor indeed is that man or woman who in this life can find nothing for which thanks can be given.

To the Discontented.

Let's be thankful, though care
May be sent us to bear,
For only the foolish may never know
That trouble still breeds
Wherever hope leads—
That the flowers of joy are watered
By the cleansing tears of woe.

Let's be thankful, though still
There is many an ill
That we long to have strength to clear away,
For contentment is shown
By the foolish alone,
By the weak who are merely waiting
To return to their mother clay.
—S. E. KISER.

INDIANS' NEW ROLE

Chief Fish Wolf Robe Becomes Dancing Master.

Picturesque Blackfoot Tribe Head With an Eye and a Foot for Business Takes Advantage of Big Terpsichorean Craze.

Denver, Colo.—In these days of discussion regarding folk dances, and rhythmic motion and tango and turkey trot it is interesting to discover that one of the most distinguished of the chiefs of the Blackfoot tribe of Indians in Montana announces to the world that he is open to engagements. Fish Wolf Robe is businesslike and his card reads:

See America First
FISH WOLF ROBE, Dancer
Ma-Me
Glacier National Park, Montana
Meet me at Glacier National Park this summer—Catch some Trout.

Fish Wolf Robe is a lithe, well developed Indian and the various tribal costumes that he wears while dancing are beautiful. Money cannot purchase them, for they are ancestral robes which have been handed down from generation to generation.

Chief Fish Wolf Robe.

In one dance he wears a handsome war bonnet made of eagle feathers tipped with colored horse hair and ornamented with beads and porcupine quills. Many beautiful white weasel skins hang down like tails from the side and back of his bonnet, and at his side is a knife in a heavily studded leather sheath. His buckskin trousers are decorated in black with designs symbolic of his tribe.

In other dances the chief wears his hair in long plaits bound with grass. Several strings of varicolored beads decorate his neck and large circular earrings fall from his ears. Soft eagle feathers are fastened to his head.

When he dances every movement has a meaning that it is impossible for an outsider to understand. Sometimes he dances alone. At other times he dances with the other chiefs or in the center of a circle formed by chiefs and squaws. At Glacier National park his entertainment is in great demand and he is often engaged to entertain for an evening.

He is tall, has a distinguished face and steps gracefully forth, swaying his body to and fro and keeping time with the beating of the tomtoms.

The costumes worn in these ceremonial and rhythmic folk dances are striking and the war bonnets can be excelled by no tribe. Often the feathers extend from the head in a long tail to the ground. Frequently the faces and bodies of the Indians who take part in the dances are colored. Chief Fish Wolf Robe uses at times a sacred brown and black paint.

In some of the dances of his tribe Fish Wolf Robe and other chiefs carry shields, spears and arrows, tomahawks and rattles made of deer and elk hoofs. Every painted figure on their face and bodies and their costumes represents some sign or ceremony, and these are particularly noticeable on the head dancer, Fish Wolf Robe, who is considered the best performer because of his lightness and agility.

Fish Wolf Robe dances the sacred hymn, the war song and the love and night songs. He knows the crane song, the swan song, the strange antelope dance, the buffalo and the grass dance. Queer dances are these, with sinuous and graceful movements and many gyrations.

BACKACHE VANISHES, RHEUMATIC PAINS GO

If you suffer with backache—have pains in the neck or sides—nervous or dizzy spells—a few doses of Croxone will relieve the congestion and you will be surprised how quickly all kidney, bladder and rheumatic troubles will disappear.

Croxone promptly relieves these diseases because it really does reach the real cause. It soaks right into the walls and linings of the kidneys, cleans out the stopped-up inactive organs, neutralizes and dissolves the uric acid and makes the kidneys sift from the blood the waste and poisonous matter that lodge in the joints and muscles to scratch and irritate and cause rheumatism. It soothes and heals the delicate linings of the bladder and gives the kidneys renewed strength so they can filter the blood and keep you well.

Croxone is different from all other remedies. It is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it without results. An original package of Croxone costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorized to return the purchase price if it should fail in a single case.—Adv.

FACE ITCHED AND BURNED

383 No. Union St., Aurora, Ill.—"My ailment started with a little pimple and it always itched and burned terribly. I scratched it and in a few days my face was all covered with sores. It ran up to my eyes and the day after I could not see out of my right eye. I was unable to get any rest. I couldn't go to bed, being afraid of getting the clothing all soiled, although I had my face all bandaged.

"I was given two jars of salve but it kept getting worse. It was something like a running sore because every time I used some of the salve I had to wrap bandages around my neck to keep the water and pus from running down my body. I wrote for a sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and in a few days I received these and washed my face with the Cuticura Soap and put on some Cuticura Ointment and the next morning my face felt cool and somewhat relieved. After using the sample I bought some Cuticura Soap and Ointment at the drug store. I followed this treatment just twenty-six days and after using one cake of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment I was cured." (Signed) George Miller, Jan. 1, 1913.

ANOTHER GOOD YEAR IN WESTERN CANADA

MANITOBA, SASKATCHEWAN AND ALBERTA HAVE SPLENDID CROPS.

The results of the threshing throughout Western Canada shows a more wonderful yield than usual of wheat, oats, barley and flax, all of which was harvested and threshed in perfect order. Not only was the average yield excellent over the entire country, but the quality was of the highest standard. Without going into figures, it is sufficient to say that wheat graded almost universally very near the top. Reports are to hand showing yields of wheat from many fields which averaged forty bushels per acre, and weighing 65 pounds to the measured bushel. Oats were very heavy, running from fifty to one hundred and fifteen bushels to the acre. Barley also was a very heavy yielder, and kept up the reputation of Western Canada as a producer of that cereal. In many parts of the country the yield of flax exceeded the earlier expectations, but in other parts, there was some loss on account of winds blowing off the boll. Hundreds of farmers who have only been in the country three or four years, with but little means when they arrived, will, out of the crop of this year, clean up all their indebtedness, and be able to put something aside for further improvements on their farms and homes which are now freed of incumbrance. The writer has just heard of the experience of a man in the Battleford district that is worth repeating. He went to the district seven or eight years ago, with no money, worked for a time, got a team of horses, did some freighting and homesteaded a quarter section of land. He now owns 480 acres of land, clear of all incumbrances, and has wheat, oats, barley and hay, as well as a good number of horses, cattle and hogs, feeding rough grain to the stock. He is a firm believer in mixed farming. The fifty dollars that he first earned in the country has now increased to $25,000. He has never had a crop failure. Instances of this kind could be repeated over and over again.

There is a Dane, named Key, east of Saskatoon, whose oats this year went 110 bushels to the acre, and his wheat 40 bushels. He has paid off the mortgage on his farm, and now contemplates a trip to Denmark, to visit his old home. He has no more cares or worries, but is anxious to have more of his people settle in that part. It is not only the farmer with limited means and small area of land who is doing well, and has done wonderfully in Western Canada this year, but the man with means, the man who is able to conduct successful farming on a large scale and many opportunities offer for such in Western Canada, also has increased his bank account handsomely. A farmer in Southern Alberta raised 350,000 bushels of grain in 1913, and made almost a fortune out of it. In Saskatchewan and in Manitoba is to be heard the same story of what has been done by the farmer working a large area, which he is able to do successfully, by the use of improved farm machinery, enabling him to cut hundreds of acres a day, and plow the land immediately with large traction outfits. No better recommendation could be given the country than the fact that during the past year, upwards of 400,000 settlers arrived in Canada, the greater number of whom went to the farm. There are still many thousands of homesteads still available, capable of producing such crops and maintaining such herds as has made rich men out of the thousands whose experiences could be reproduced were it necessary.—Advertisement.

WHEN LIES ARE EXCUSABLE

Instances Given of Times When the Truth Is Not Expected or Wanted.

Few people, I fancy, would say, after deliberation, that no lie was ever justified. To be sure, I once heard a serious young man protest that Shakespeare had damned Desdemona by allowing her at her last gasp to exculpate Othello. I have also known people who objected vehemently to the late Mark Twain because he said so many things that were not so. But there are occasions when lies are taken for granted, even by the law.

A man on trial for his life is supposed to tell the truth, but not if it will incriminate him. A wife is not dragged to the witness stand against her will—no one would legitimately expect anything but perjury from her. I do not see much difference between legally permitting a man to say "Not Guilty" when he is guilty, and legally permitting him to lie. Is there any solitary maiden who would not willingly give the midnight marauder to understand that her husband was just coming down the stairs, armed to the teeth? A man is not supposed, except by an extinct type of Puritan, to "give away" the woman who has made sacrifices for him; and even the extinct type of Puritan would hardly expect you to tell your hostess that her dinner party had been dull. From this heterogenous group of examples, one may infer that there are lies and lies; and while it is never permissible to lie, it is sometimes quite unpermissible to do anything else.

FURNITURE FOR THE SEASONS

To have separate sets of sofas and chairs for summer and winter is beyond the means of many householders. Moreover, few modern homes have storage space sufficient to accommodate an entire suite of temporarily unused furniture. Consequently the recent fashion of buying a set of really handsome and durable wicker and then having attachable seats and pillows to fit the various [illegible] or merely [illegible] put away when [illegible] upholstery rolls from [illegible] of attachable upholstery [illegible] seats for the chairs and [illegible] settee, a long round pillow and two huge square pillows. If a housewife knows anything whatever of the mattress-making art she can get up a set of these cushions and pillows at comparatively small expense.

Luxemburg's Soldiers.

The grand duchy of Luxemburg, which recently, because of the strong-minded young woman who rules the little country, has occupied considerable space in the newspapers, has an army, including musicians, numbering 250 men. The soldiers of Luxemburg are sumptuously lodged. Each one has his room with hot and cold water, all the conveniences of a hotel and flowers at the window. The trade of soldier in the grand duchy is not for war but for administrative uses. For this reason the recruits are most carefully selected. They are required to be handsome young fellows whose height is not to be below five feet six inches. Recently a candidate presented himself who received full admiration of the jury of admission. Handsome and well made, he measured not less than five feet ten inches, but the new soldier disturbed all the regulations of the army. It was found necessary to have a uniform made for him, linen of special size and his bed had to be lengthened.

War Minister "Moved On."

Colonel Seely, the head of England's army, was among the spectators at the recent army maneuvers, and was entirely unrecognized. He was in a gray tweed cap, and looked the most unassuming of men.

Once the village policeman, who was busy asking little urchins and their round-eyed sisters to stand back, passed his arm in front of the minister for war, who meekly gave way. He seemed to enjoy the sight thoroughly, and ran from point to point with much energy. He had arrived in a big car, which did not even carry one of the little flags which indicate an official or a privileged spectator.

Industrial Wealth Grows.

The growth of factories is remarkable in the state of New South Wales, Australia. During last year goods to the value of over $800,000,000 were manufactured; 115,000 hands were employed and paid nearly $60,000,000 in wages. The position of manufacturers is now so strong that notwithstanding possibilities of bad seasons, people are no longer dependent upon the weather for their prosperity. A decade ago the average yearly income of every industrial employe in New South Wales was $315, while at present it is over $500.

Dom Manuel as Farmer.

Attached to Fulwell Park, near Twickenham, England, which has lately been purchased by Dom Manual of Portugal, is a small model farm, which the ex-king proposes to cultivate. Several improvements are shortly to be carried out, and Dom Manuel will purchase the whole of the stock he requires, none of the present cattle being retained. It is highly probable that several of his cows and sheep will come from the royal farms at Windsor and Sandringham.

OLD CONTRACTORS TO QUIT

English Company That Dammed the Nile to Retire From Business Next Year.

The passing away of one of the greatest contracting firms in the world, John Aird & Co., is announced for next year. The firm, which dammed the Nile and carried out other great works throughout the world, will cease to exist next September, by which time all outstanding contracts will have been completed.

The decision to go out of business has been taken by the present Sir John Aird, who succeeded his father in 1911, and inherited from him a fortune of over $5,000,000. The reason given is that, while the risks of contracting are as great as they ever were, the profits are not nearly so [illegible] 1848 by John Aird [illegible] who [illegible] shire, and after following his trade for several years, was appointed superintendent of the Phoenix Gas company at Greenwich. There he learned the business that gave him his start, and the first big undertaking of his firm was the laying of water and gas mains for London.

VANDERBILT HAS WISE GROOM

Possesses Sure Way of Telling Those Whose Riches Are Newly Acquired.

Newport, as all the world knows, is getting more and more overrun with the nouveaux riches. The nouveaux riches are buying up the finest estates, and the old and exclusive Newport families are retiring to more isolated resorts.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt, at one of his dinners at his luxurious Newport farm, said of a nouveaux riche who was assuming an extraordinary disdain for all things common and plebeian:

"This chap's way of turning up his nose reminds me of a groom of mine who used to say:

Novel Church.

Without sectarian ideas or denominational teaching, a gospel meeting is held all the summer months in the unique Boardwalk church at Atlantic City. This year—the fifth of the church's existence—services are being conducted each Lord's day morning in the Bijou theater—a room used usually for moving pictures. The Rev. Robert Elwood is the founder and pastor. It is a church without a choir, officer or single member and without a collection plate. The business men of Atlantic City, as well as the visitors, think it worth while, and maintain this gospel lighthouse by the sea. Ninety per cent. of the audience is new each Sunday. Persons gladly turn in from the boardwalk at the call for worship. The audience is reverent, though cosmopolitan. One Sunday morning when a test was made every civilized country was represented in the large congregation, as well as most of the states of the Union.—Christian Herald.

OPEN WINDOWS IN SCHOOLS

A medical inspector of the Philadelphia public schools, with the co-operation of teachers and parents, made an experiment to determine the value of cold fresh air in school rooms. He opened the windows at top and bottom and kept them open throughout the winter.

The room was shut off from the heating plant of the building, except on the occasional days when the temperature fell below 45 degrees; but the children, of course, wore extra wraps and had frequent drill exercise.

Week by week during the fall and winter and spring this physician weighed and examined the pupils, watched their study and their play, and compared their progress in health and scholarship with that of pupils in another room of the same building.

In that other room the pupils were of the same grade and of about the same number, but the room was heated and ventilated according to the usual methods. The pupils in both rooms were normal, healthy children from the same kind of homes, so that the test was as fair, accurate and searching as possible.

At the end the inspector found that the pupils in the open-window room had gained in weight on an average more than twice as much as those in the warm-air room. The pupils in the open room kept wholly free from colds, and were much more regular in attendance than the others.

They were also more alert, free from day-dreaming, quicker to learn, needed less review work and were better behaved.

In health, happiness, in body, the children of the room with open windows had a clear advantage over the others.

ONLY ONE NOVEL IN VACATION

Scott's Idea of Rest Was to Produce "Guy Mannering" in Six Weeks.

Scott had some strange ways of seeking relaxation from the strain of work. On Christmas day, 1814, he wrote Constable that he was "setting out for Abbotsford to refresh the machine." During the year he had written his first great novel, "Waverly," one of his longer poems, "The Lord of the Isles," nearly the whole of his "Life of Swift," two essays for an encyclopedia, a two-volume family memoir for a friend, and kept up a voluminous personal correspondence—an amount of industry which is best described by Dominie Sampson's word, prodigious. Surely the "machine" needed "refreshing," and it consisted in producing, in six weeks' time, another great novel, "Guy Mannering." In the same way, while suffering [illegible] suite of [illegible] pain which prevented [illegible] sought refreshment [illegible] novel [illegible]

HOW QUEER FISH ARE BRED

Curious Results Obtained by Chinese and Japanese in Selection and Crossing.

The telescope fish, a monstrous variety of carp, is a creation of the Chinese and Japanese fish breeders, who are past masters in the art of deforming nature. It has an almost globular glistening body, gilded on the sides, double dorsal fins and a long tail of peculiar shape. Its eyes and their sockets are very prominent and resemble the object glasses of telescopes, whence the name telescope fish. A carp possessing this abnormal feature was discovered in Japan in the sixteenth century, since which epoch the peculiar character has been perpetuated and combined with many variations in form and coloring, by careful selection and crossing.

The variety known as Yen-tan-yen or "veil tail" preserves the normal structure of the eye during life, but its delicate transparent tail attains an enormous size and falls in graceful folds, like a veil, producing effects that a "serpentine" dancer might envy, when a little fish moves in the sunlight.

Other Japanese varieties of the telescope fish are the "sheep's nose," which owes its name to the convexity of its body, the "pig's snout," which has a head resembling those of Asiatic swine, and the "fan tail," which raises and spreads its tail in the manner of a fantail pigeon.

The Chinese breeders of telescope fish disdain these abnormalities of structure and devote their attention chiefly to coloring. By modifying the temperature of the water, and by impregnating it with lime and iron, they produce startling shades and markings. Among the innumerable varieties thus obtained we may mention the "spotted," with a belly of silver, and sides and back marked with blue, yellow, black, rose and carmine dots; the crimson "ruby," and the "superb," with glittering scales, scarlet belly, and black or bright red markings on the back.
